Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, the bill was unanimously reported from the Committee on Public Works. The bill was introduced originally in both Houses at the request of the President and the General Services Administrator.

At present the United States owns, roughly, the western half of the block which lies diagonally across from the White House and is bounded by Pennsylvania Avenue and Lafayette Park. I do not recall the two streets on the other sides. Both committees—the committee in the House and the committee in the Senate—after rather extensive hearings, came to the identical conclusion. The bill, as the Senate will note, has already been passed by the House with amendments which are identical to the amendments which were agreed upon unanimously by the Senate committee. Under those amendments, instead of giving permission for acquisition and, if necessary, condemnation of all the remaining portions of the block, being, roughly, the east half of the block, which is now in private ownership, the bill as now presented, and as already passed by the House, provides that only the five lots which lie across diagonally from the White House and constitute the southeast corner of the block may now be acquired, if necessary, by condemnation.

I will say to the Senate that the three lots on the corner, which belong to the Carnegie Endowment for Peace, are now for sale, and the fact that has occasioned this activity at this time is that it was feared that they would be sold for private or commercial developments, which would not be consonant with their closeness to the White House and to the historic buildings already owned by the Federal Government, as the property involved adjoins the Blair House and the Blair-Lee House. The Senate will remember that the Court of Claims occupies the other corner of the block.

As reported, the bill would permit only the acquisition of the five lots which together comprise the southeastern corner of the block diagonally across from the White House and fronting on Pennsylvania Avenue and on Jackson Place.

I will say again that the bill was unanimously reported by the committee, and was so reported in the House, and has already been passed by the House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the third reading and passage of the bill.

The bill (H. R. 7219) was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FINANCING OF OPERATIONS OF BUREAU OF ENGRAVING AND PRINTING

The bill (S. 3653) to provide for financing the operations of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, Treasury Department, and for other purposes, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That whenever any work or services are requisitioned from the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, Treasury Department (hereinafter referred to as the "Bureau"), the requisitioning agency shall make payment therefor from funds available to it for such purposes at prices deemed by the Secretary of the Treasury (hereinafter referred to as the "Secretary") to be adequate to recover the amount of direct and indirect costs of the Bureau, including its administrative expenses, incidental to performing the work or services requisitioned. Requisitioning agencies shall make payment to the Bureau promptly on the basis of bills rendered by the Bureau.

SEC. 2. (a) There is hereby established, as of July 1, 1951, a Bureau of Engraving and Printing Fund (hereinafter referred to as the "fund"). The fund shall be capitalized on the basis of—

(1) an initial appropriation by the Congress to the fund of not to exceed $5,000,000 and such additional amounts as from time to time may be appropriated for the purposes of the fund, which sums are hereby authorized to be appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated;

(2) all of the receivables and the inventories and other physical assets of the Bureau as of the close of business June 30, 1951, exclusive of buildings occupied, land, and the unexpended balances of appropriations made to the Bureau, such inventories and other physical assets to be capitalized at fair and reasonable values to be determined by the Secretary; and

(3) assumption by the fund of all of the liabilities of the Bureau as of the close of business on June 30, 1951.

(b) The fund shall assume all of the obligations and other commitments of the Bureau outstanding as of the close of business on June 30, 1951.

(c) The fund shall include all property and other physical assets acquired by the Bureau except buildings and land, all amounts recoverable as provided in section 1 for the costs of work and services performed by the Bureau, and all other amounts receivable by the Bureau from whatever sources derived, including all proceeds arising from disposition of any property or other assets acquired by the fund.

(d) The fund shall be available without fiscal-year limitation for financing all costs and expenses of operating and maintaining the Bureau subsequent to June 30, 1951.

(e) Any surplus accruing to the fund in any fiscal year shall be paid into the general fund of the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts during the ensuing fiscal year: Provided, That any such surplus may be applied first to restore any impairment of the capital of the fund by reason of variations between the prices charged for work or services and the amount determined to be the actual cost of performing such work or services.

(f) A special deposit account for the fund shall be established with the Treasurer of the United States. The special deposit account shall be credited with the sums made available by appropriations authorized in this act and with all receipts of the Bureau without the covering of such receipts into the Treasury. The balance in the special deposit account shall be available for making disbursements authorized on behalf of the fund in accordance with the act of December 29, 1941 (55 Stat. 875), as amended, through the disbursing facilities of the Treasury Department.

SEC. 3. The unexpended balances of all appropriations made to the Bureau for the fiscal years 1950 and 1951 shall lapse on June 30, 1951, and shall be transferred immediately to the surplus fund of the Treasury.

SEC. 4. The Secretary shall prepare and submit an annual business-type budget program for the Bureau.

SEC. 5. There shall be installed and maintained in the Bureau an integrated system of accounting, including proper features of internal control, which will (a) assure adequate control over all assets and liabilities of the fund; (b) develop accurate direct and indirect costs of production of the Bureau for making recoveries of such costs on the basis of work requisitioned; (c) make provision for replacement of capitalized equipment and other fixed assets through the maintenance of adequate depreciation reserves based on original cost or on appraised values as authorized in section 2 (a) (2); (d) afford full disclosure with respect to the financial condition and operations of the fund according to the accrual method of accounting; and (e) supply on the basis of accounting results the data for the annual budget of the Bureau with respect to the last completed fiscal year. The system of accounting shall conform to principles and standards prescribed by the Comptroller General of the United States to accomplish the purposes of this section, and shall be subject to such review by the Comptroller General as may be necessary to assure its conformance with the principles and standards prescribed and its effectiveness in operation.

SEC. 6. The financial transactions, accounts, and reports of the fund shall be audited on an annual basis by the General Accounting Office and a copy of each report on audit shall be furnished promptly to the President, the Congress, and the Secretary.

SEC. 7. Any power or authority conferred upon the Secretary by this act may be delegated by him to any officer or employee of the Treasury Department.

SEC. 8. (a) Section 1 of the act entitled "An act making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898, and for other purposes," approved June 4, 1897, is amended by striking out the first proviso contained in the third paragraph under the caption "Engraving and Printing" (30 Stat. 18; 31 U. S. C. 178).

(b) Section 1 of the act entitled "An act making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1887, and for other purposes," approved August 4, 1886, is amended by striking out the proviso contained in the third paragraph under the caption "Engraving and Printing" (24 Stat. 227; 31 U. S. C. 176).

(c) In the case of all other laws or parts of laws inconsistent with the provisions of this act, the provisions of this act shall govern.

(d) This act shall take effect on July 1, 1951.

SETTLEMENT OF ACCOUNTS OF CERTAIN DECEASED CIVILIAN OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES OF GOVERNMENT

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 3652) to facilitate the settlement of the accounts of certain deceased civilian officers and employees of the Government.

The bill is as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in order to facilitate the settlement of the accounts of deceased civilian officers and employees of the Federal Government and of the government of the District of Columbia (including wholly owned and mixed-ownership Government corporations) all unpaid compensation due such an officer or employee at the time of his death shall be paid to the person or persons surviving at the date of death, in the following order of precedence, and such payment shall be a bar to recovery by any other person of amounts so paid.

First, to the beneficiary or beneficiaries designated by the officer or employee in writing to receive such compensation filed with the Government agency in which the officer or employee was employed at the time of his death, and received by such agency prior to the officer's or employee's death;

Second, if there be no such beneficiary, to the widow or widower of such officer, or employee;

Third, if there be no beneficiary or surviving spouse, to the child or children of such officer or employee, and descendants of deceased children, by representation;

Fourth, if none of the above, to the parents of such officer or employee, or the survivor of them;

Fifth, if there be none of the above, to the duly appointed legal representative of the estate of the deceased officer or employee, or if there be none, to the person or persons determined to be entitled thereto under the laws of the domicile of the deceased officer or employee.

SEC. 2. For the purposes of this act the term "unpaid compensation" means the pay, salary, or allowances, or other compensation due on account of the services of the decedent for the Federal Government or the government of the District of Columbia. It shall include, but not be limited to, (1) all per diem in lieu of subsistence, mileage, and amounts due in reimbursement of travel expenses, including incidental and miscellaneous expenses in connection therewith for which reimbursement is due; (2) all allowances upon change of official station; (3) all quarters and cost-of-living allowances and overtime or premium pay; (4) amounts due for payment of cash awards for employees' suggestions; (5) amounts due as refund of salary deductions for United States Savings bonds; (6) payment for all accumulated and current accrued annual or vacation leave equal to the compensation the decedent would have received had he remained in service until the expiration of the period of such annual or vacation leave; (7) the amounts of all checks drawn in payment of such compensation which were not delivered by the Government to the officer or employee during his lifetime or of any unnegotiated checks returned to the Government because of the death of the officer or employee.

SEC. 3. (a) Subject to such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Comptroller General of the United States, the employing agency shall cause the unpaid compensation to be paid to the beneficiaries, if any, designated by the officer or employee under section 1 of this act, or, if none, to the widow or widower of such officer or employee.

(b) Accounts not payable under section 3 (a) (with the exception of accounts of employees of the District of Columbia which shall be paid by the District of Columbia, and accounts of employees of wholly owned and mixed-ownership Government corporations which may be paid by such corporations) shall be payable on settlement of the General Accounting Office, except as the Comptroller General may by regulation otherwise authorize or direct.

SEC. 4. This act shall not apply to any benefits, refunds, or interest payable under the Retirement Act applicable to the decedent's service or to amounts the disposition of which is otherwise expressly prescribed by Federal law.

SEC. 5. Officers and employees affected shall be notified by the employing agency of the provision of this act relative to the disposition of such compensation in the event no beneficiary is designated by them, and of their right to designate a beneficiary or beneficiaries in accordance with its terms if they desire a different disposition to be made thereof. Designations so made may be changed or revoked at any time under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Comptroller General.

SEC. 6. This act shall be effective 120 days from the date of its enactment as of which time section 2 of the act of December 21, 1944 (58 Stat. 845), is repealed.

SEC. 7. This act shall not apply to the accounts of officers and employees of the Panama Canal and the Panama Railroad on the Isthmus of Panama.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Mr. President, I may say that there has been a request for an amendment to be offered to this measure, which amendment I understand has already been sent to the desk. I believe it was proposed by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. MCCLELLAN].

Mr. MCCLELLAN. Mr. President, I offer the amendment, unless the Senator wishes to offer it.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Very well, I offer the amendment.

Mr. MCCLELLAN. Mr. President, I wish to make a brief statement. The bill was reported after conference with the Governor of the Farm Credit Administration, in view of certain overlapping functions of employees of that agency and another agency. Therefore it was felt that the amendment was advisable.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Kansas will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 4, line 24, it is proposed to strike the period and insert in lieu thereof a comma and the following: "or to the accounts of officers and employees of the Federal land banks, Federal intermediate credit banks, production credit corporations, or the regional banks for cooperatives."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LAND EXCHANGES BY GRANTEES OF RECREATIONAL DEMONSTRATION PROJECT LANDS

The bill (H. R. 3284) to authorize grantees of recreational demonstration project lands to make land exchanges relating to such properties, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, reserving the right to object——

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of the bill?

Mr. HENDRICKSON. That is what I wanted to ask.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, the act of June 6, 1942, provided authority for the granting by the Federal Government to various States and to other particular areas within recreational demonstration projects which were being abandoned by the Federal Government. However, in some instances the Federal Government at the time of the grant had not acquired privately owned property within the exterior boundaries of the areas granted.

This bill merely authorizes the States to which the grants have been made to acquire these lands for the better administration of the State parks by an exchange of lands. The bill does not involve any new activity on the part of the Federal Government; it merely facilitates the action of the States in carrying out their own State systems.

We have been advised by the Secretary of the Interior that the States of Missouri, Pennsylvania, and Tennessee are particularly anxious to have this authority to make exchanges.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be placed at the foot of the calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection the bill will be placed at the foot of the calendar.

DE SOTO NATIONAL MEMORIAL

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 8230) to amend the act of March 11, 1948 (62 Stat. 78), relating to the establishment of the De Soto National Memorial, in the State of Florida, which had been reported from the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs with an amendment on page 1, after line 5, to strike out:

SEC. 3. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act.

And insert:

SEC. 3. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums, not to exceed $50,000, as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

CONSTRUCTION AT GRIFFISS AIR FORCE BASE, ROME, N. Y.—BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 3727) to authorize certain construction at Griffiss Air Force Base, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, on behalf of both the senior Senator from New Jersey and the junior Senator from New Jersey, I strongly object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard, and the bill will be passed over.

Mr. HUNT. Mr. President, this is an extremely important bill. Since both the Senators from New Jersey and also the two Senators from New York are tremendously interested, and inasmuch as the Air Service also has a great interest in this bill, I am going to move that the bill go to the foot of the calendar and be made the pending business.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, that motion is out of order. I think the proper request would be to ask unanimous consent that the bill go to the foot of the calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair advises the Senator from Wyoming that the motion is not in order at this time.

Mr. HUNT. Then, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be placed at the foot of the calendar and be made the pending business of the Senate.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I still say that such a request is out of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair advises the Senator from Wyoming that the request is not in order at the present time.

The Senator may ask that the bill go to the foot of the calendar.

Mr. HUNT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be placed at the foot of the calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wyoming asks unanimous consent that the bill be placed at the foot of the calendar. Is there objection?

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. HUNT. Mr. President, I am very anxious that the bill be considered at the earliest possible moment.

Let me ask the distinguished Senator from New Jersey just what motion would be agreeable to him in this connection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill has been passed over. If the Senator from Wyoming wishes to speak on another measure on the calendar, he will be in order when another measure on the calendar is reached; but the bill has been passed over, on objection.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, it is perfectly agreeable to me——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has not been recognized as yet.

The regular order must be followed, and the clerk will state the next measure on the calendar.

Mr. HUNT. Mr. President, this is a most important matter. Cannot we reach an agreement regarding it?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands that the order of business is to consider, in order, the measures on the calendar. Under that arrangement, the next order of business is the next measure on the calendar. When the next measure on the calendar is stated, the Chair will recognize for 5 minutes any Senator who wishes to be recognized.

The next measure on the calendar will be stated.

WYOMING JACKSON HOLE NATIONAL PARK

The bill (S. 3409) to establish the Wyoming Jackson Hole National Park in the State of Wyoming, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of the bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair feels that at this time he should recognize the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. HUNT], if he wishes to be recognized now, if the Senator from Kansas does not object to having that done.

Does the Senator from Wyoming wish to address the Senate on the matter to which he previously referred? If he does, does the Senator from Kansas object, under the circumstances?

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. I do not object.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, the distinguished Senator from Wyoming is about to discuss the preceding measure on the calendar, doing so in the time allowed for consideration of Calendar

No. 1941, the measure which has just been stated. However, it must be understood that the preceding measure on the calendar is not now before the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct. However, the Chair will recognize the Senator from Wyoming, to permit him to address the Senate, if he wishes to do so.

Mr. HUNT. Mr. President, I serve notice that at the first convenient occasion I shall refer again to this matter.

Mr. IVES. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas [Mr. SCHOEPPEL] had the floor, and he is recognized at this time.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Mr. President, if we are now on Calendar 1941, Senate bill 3409——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Then, Mr. President, reserving the right to object to the present consideration of the bill, let me say that I am curious to know why on page 16, in line 4—and I should like to address my remarks to the senior Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY]—the word "twenty-five" should not be "twenty."

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, this bill was reported with the purpose of making an over-all period of 25 years, including the first 5 years of complete reimbursement, and then the 5-percent reduction. I was advised that the Senator had an amendment, which is quite agreeable, and which I shall be very glad to accept.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 3409), which had been reported from the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That, for the purpose of including in one national park, for public benefit and enjoyment, the lands within the present Grand Teton National Park and a portion of the lands within the Jackson Hole National Monument, there is hereby established a new "Grand Teton National Park." The park shall comprise, subject to valid existing rights, all of the present Grand Teton National Park and all lands of the Jackson Hole National Monument that are not otherwise expressly provided for in this act, and an order setting forth the boundaries of the park shall be prepared by the Secretary of the Interior and published in the Federal Register. The national park so established shall, so far as consistent with the provisions of this act, be administered in accordance with the general statutes governing national parks, and shall supersede the present Grand Teton National Park and the Jackson Hole National Monument. The act of February 26, 1929 (45 Stat. 1314), and any other provisions of law heretofore specifically applicable to such present park or monument, are hereby repealed: Provided, That no further extension or establishment of national parks or monuments in Wyoming may be undertaken except by express authorization of the Congress.

For each succeeding fiscal year, until 25 years elapse, there shall be paid on account of such land an amount equal to the full amount of taxes referred to in the preceding sentence, less 5 percent of such full amount for each fiscal year, including the year for which the payment is to be made, following the fiscal year in which the land was acquired: Provided, That the amount payable under the foregoing schedule for any fiscal year preceding the first full fiscal year following the approval of this act shall not become payable until the end of such first full fiscal year.

SEC. 6. (a) The Wyoming Game and Fish Commission and the National Park Service shall devise, from technical information and other pertinent data assembled or produced by necessary field studies or investigations conducted jointly by the technical and administrative personnel of the agencies involved, and recommend to the Secretary of the Interior and the Governor of Wyoming for their joint approval, a program to insure the permanent conservation of the elk within the Grand Teton National Park established by this act. Such program shall include the controlled reduction of elk in such park, by hunters licensed by the State of Wyoming and deputized as rangers by the Secretary of the Interior, when it is found necessary for the purpose of proper management and protection of the elk.

(b) At least once a year, between February 1 and April 1, the Wyoming Game and Fish Commission and the National Park Service shall submit to the Secretary of the Interior and to the Governor of Wyoming, for their joint approval, their joint recommendations for the management, protection, and control of the elk for that year. The yearly plan recommended by the Wyoming Game and Fish Commission and the National Park Service shall become effective when approved by the Secretary of the Interior and the Governor of Wyoming, and thereupon the Wyoming Game and Fish Commission and the Secretary of the Interior shall issue separately, but simultaneously such appropriate orders and regulations as are necessary to carry out those portions of the approved plan that fall within their respective jurisdictions. Such orders and regulations, to be issued by the Secretary of the Interior and the Wyoming Game and Fish Commission, shall include provision for controlled and managed reduction by qualified and experienced hunters licensed by the State of Wyoming and deputized as rangers by the Secretary of the Interior, if and when a reduction in the number of elk by this method within the Grand Teton National Park established by this act is required as a part of the approved plan for the year, provided that one elk only may be killed by each such licensed and deputized ranger. Such orders and regulations of the Secretary of the Interior for controlled reduction shall apply only to the lands within the park which lie east of the Snake River and those lands west of Jackson Lake and the Snake River which lie north of the present north boundaries of Grand Teton National Park, but shall not be applicable to lands within the Jackson Hole Wildlife Park. After the Wyoming Game and Fish Commission and the National Park Service shall have recommended to the Secretary of the Interior and the Governor of Wyoming in any specified year a plan, which has received the joint approval of the Secretary of the Interior and the Governor of Wyoming, calling for the controlled and managed reduction by the method prescribed herein of the number of elk within the Grand Teton National Park established by this act, and after the Wyoming Game and Fish Commission shall have transmitted to the Secretary of the Interior a list of persons who have elk hunting licenses issued by the State of Wyoming and who are qualified and experienced hunters, on or before July 1 of that year the Secretary of the Interior, without charge, shall cause to be issued orders deputizing the persons whose names appear on such list, in the number specified by the plan, as rangers for the purpose of entering the park and assisting in the controlled reduction plan. Each such qualified hunter, deputized as a ranger, participating in the controlled reduction plan shall be permitted to remove from the park the carcass of the elk he has killed as a part of the plan.

SEC. 7. The Secretary of the Interior is authorized to accept the donation of the following-described lands, which lands, upon acceptance by the United States, shall become a part of the national park:

SEC. 9. Nothing in this act shall affect the use for reclamation purposes, in accordance with the act of June 17, 1902 (32 Stat. 388), and acts amendatory thereof or supplementary thereto, of the lands within the exterior boundary of the park as prescribed by this act which have been withdrawn or acquired for reclamation purposes, or the operation, maintenance, rehabilitation, and improvement of the reservoir and other reclamation facilities located on such withdrawn or acquired lands. All provisions of law inconsistent with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed to the extent of such inconsistency. The remaining unexpended balance of any funds appropriated for the present Grand Teton National Park and the Jackson Hole National Monument shall be available for expenditure in connection with the administration of the Grand Teton National Park established by this act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Mr. President, to the committee amendment, I submit the amendment which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment to the committee amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. In the committee amendment, on page 16, in line 4, it is proposed to strike out the word "twenty-five" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty."

On the same page, in lines 9 and 10, it is proposed to strike out "following the fiscal year in which the land was acquired."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Kansas to the committee amendment.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I should like to have the amendment to the committee amendment restated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment to the committee amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. In the committee amendment, on page 16, in line 4, it is proposed to strike out the word "twenty-five" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty."

On the same page, in lines 9 and 10, it is proposed to strike out the words "following the fiscal year in which the land was acquired."

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, the amendment to the committee amendment is acceptable.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Kansas to the committee amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

The bill (S. 3409) was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to establish a new Grand Teton National Park in the State of Wyoming, and for other purposes."

CONSTRUCTION AT GRIFFISS AIR FORCE BASE, ROME, N. Y.

Mr. LEHMAN. Mr. President, I rise to express the very great hope that the two Senators from New Jersey will take such steps as may be necessary to permit Senate bill 3727, a bill to authorize certain construction at Griffiss Air Force Base, and for other purposes, to come before the Senate. This proposed legislation is tremendously important in the interest of the national defense.

I am authorized to say that the chairman of the Armed Services Committee is very desirous to have prompt action taken on the bill. He and the committee consider this legislation of primary importance to the National Military Establishment. I know that the Secretary of the Air Force is very anxious to have the bill considered immediately and passed. I hope it will be.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LEHMAN. Mr. President, the bill is of the utmost importance, and I strongly urge that it come before the Senate and be passed promptly.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, inasmuch as I was the one who interrogated the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. HUNT] in regard to this very bill, let me say that what I am talking about is the parliamentary procedure to be followed. We are now on the Consent Calendar, during the consideration of which no Senator can speak longer than 5 minutes. When a Senator has exhausted his time, and objection is made and a bill goes over, then, under the rule, only one course can be pursued by a Senator who seeks the passage of the bill. After the Consent Calendar has been called if a Senator, in this case the Senator from Wyoming, wants to move to have the bill made the pending business, that is his right; but during the consideration of the Consent Calendar, there is no parliamentary way by which a bill can, on motion, be made the pending business. To do so would simply break up the arrangement under which we are now proceeding. It would be out of order. The parliamentary situation, first, would have to be protected. I am not saying a thing about the merits or about the debate which might ensue, but it is such an important bill that apparently there are those who feel that it should be considered when sufficient debate may be had upon it. In order to protect the Consent Calendar, during the consideration of which every Senator has a right to object to any bill, naturally a motion to make a certain bill the pending business cannot be entertained.

I want the distinguished Senator from New York, and also the distinguished Senator from Wyoming to know the reason for my attitude. It does not indicate that the minority leader is attempting to block the passage of the bill, but any other course would defeat the whole purpose of calling the calendar. I suggest to the distinguished Senators that after the call of the calendar is completed, if it meets with the approval of the acting majority leader and if he wants to have the bill considered, a motion can be made to take up the bill and to make it the pending business.

Mr. LEHMAN. I thank the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. IVES. Mr. President, the senior Senator from New York would like to express his appreciation to the distinguished minority leader for the action he has indicated he is perfectly willing to take in this connection. Quite obviously the procedure which has thus been indicated is the proper procedure. The senior Senator from New York would like to urge support of this measure when the bill comes properly before the Senate. The senior Senator from New York is not urging this merely because he happens to come from the State of New York. The senior Senator from New York has insisted throughout the entire consideration of this matter that the determination of the armed services themselves should be the deciding factor. The armed services very definitely indicate that it is most essential that this bill be passed.

Mr. HUNT. Mr. President, I should simply like to say that I have served notice that, at the first opportunity, I intend to call up this bill because of its importance. I hope that will be done immediately following the conclusion of the call of the Consent Calendar.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, I should like to point out that a motion to be made following the conclusion of the calendar to lay aside the appropriation bill, presents the question of how far that can be permitted by the Senators in charge of the appropriation bill.

Mr. HUNT. I may say to the distinguished Senator from Ohio that there are four Senators who want to make statements for the RECORD. Perhaps it will only take 35 or 40 minutes. Laying aside the appropriation bill at this time is, I think, secondary to the consideration of this bill.

AUTHORIZATION OF CERTAIN FUNCTIONS BY NATIONAL ADVISORY COMMITTEE FOR AERONAUTICS

The bill (H. R. 5074) to promote the national defense by authorizing specifically certain functions of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics necessary to the effective prosecution of aeronautical research, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. CHAVEZ. Over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard, and the bill will go over.

Mr. GURNEY. Mr. President, will the Senator withhold his objection, please? If it is his desire that an explanation be given of the bill——

Mr. CHAVEZ. No. The Senator from Wyoming has stated that it is his purpose, following the conclusion of the call of the Consent Calendar, to ask consideration of this bill. That being the case, there is no necessity for making an explanation at this time.

Mr. GURNEY. No. We are now talking about Calendar Order No. 1942, House bill 5074 relative to the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, I misunderstood the Senator from Wyoming. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Let the Chair state the question before the Senate. The question, Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 5074)?

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of the bill?

Mr. GURNEY. Mr. President, this bill has been unanimously reported by the Armed Services Committee. As I understand, it in no way changes the present law, which is made up entirely of the riders which have appeared from time to time on appropriation bills. The bill has been passed by the House. If passed by the Senate, it will be unnecessary to place authorizing language in the appropriation bill for this Advisory Committee. It does not in any way change the present law. There is one amendment, as will be noted from the committee report, but it is a minor one, and I believe the House will agree to it. If there are any specific questions regarding the bill, I shall be glad to answer them.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 5074) to promote the national defense by authorizing specifically certain functions of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics necessary to the effective prosecution of aeronautical research, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Armed Services, with an amendment, on page 2, line 17, after the word "necessary", to insert a colon and the following proviso: "Provided, That no such alien shall be employed until he has been cleared for such appointment as a result of an appropriate security investigation as determined by the Director of the Committee."

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

Be it enacted, etc., That section 9 of the Central Intelligence Agency Act of 1949 (act of June 20, 1949, ch. 227, sec. 9, 63 Stat. 212) is hereby amended by deleting the figure "$10,000" and substituting in lieu thereof the figure "$13,100."

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (H. R. 7786) making appropriations for the support of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1951, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Since this bill is at present the unfinished business before the Senate, it will be passed over.

PERMANENT EASEMENTS OR RIGHTS-OF-WAY ON FEDERAL RECLAMATION PROJECTS

The bill (H. R. 1922) to amend section 10 of the Reclamation Project Act of 1939, was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I should appreciate very much an explanation of this bill.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, the present law gives the Secretary of the Interior, in the administration of reclamation projects, the authority to make grants, leases, and licenses for periods not to exceed 50 years. It has been found very necessary to add to that authority, now existing by law, the authority to grant easements or rights-of-way. The committee was of opinion, and unanimously of opinion, that this additional authority to grant easements and rights-of-way was necessary in the construction of such projects, but the committee has recommended an amendment to provide that if a water users' organization is under any contract obligation for repayment on account of the project or division involved, that the consent of that organization should be obtained before any grant in excess of 25 years should be made. There was no objection to the measure in committee.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I wonder whether the distinguished Senator from Wyoming will tell us whether there are any costs involved in this matter?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. No; there are no costs involved.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I thank the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 1922) to amend section 10 of the Reclamation Project Act of 1939, which had been reported from the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, with an amendment, on page 1, line 11, after the word "project", to insert a colon and the following proviso: "Provided, That, if a water users' organization is under contract obligation for repayment on account of the project or division involved, easements or rights-of-way for periods in excess of 25 years shall be granted only upon prior written approval of the governing board of such organization."

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

REORGANIZATION PLAN NO. 27 OF 1950—RESOLUTION INDEFINITELY POSTPONED

The resolution (S. Res. 302) disapproving Reorganization Plan No. 27 of 1950 was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. In view of the action of the House, what is the pleasure of the Senate regarding this resolution?

Mr. TAFT. I move that the resolution be indefinitely postponed.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, perhaps a motion so broad as that would require some discussion. Why not let it go over?

Mr. TAFT. I thought we might as well get it off the calendar. The House has acted, and there is no necessity whatever for action by the Senate.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Very well.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, I only rise to ask that the resolution be taken off the calendar, for the reason stated by the Senator from Ohio.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the resolution will be indefinitely postponed.

PLANT AND ANIMAL INSPECTION SERVICE

The bill (S. 3698) to enable the Secretary of Agriculture to furnish, upon a reimbursable basis, certain inspection services involving overtime work was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I would appreciate, and I am sure the Senate would appreciate, an explanation of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. An explanation is desired. The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. AIKEN. This bill is for the accommodation of exporters and importers on our international borders. It would affect, primarily, those located along the Canadian border and along the Florida and Mexican coasts. Under the present law, inspectors of plants and animals are permitted to work only 40 hours a week. In the small ports of entry, where there is only one inspector, it makes a great deal of difference if an importer arrives late at the border. He cannot get the stock, whether it be plants, animals, or fruit, inspected, although the inspector might be in plain sight all the time. This bill will give the inspector the right to inspect plants and animals even though they arrive after hours. The Federal Government pays the inspector for the overtime work, and the Government, in turn, is reimbursed by the importer or the exporter, as the case may be.

So far as I know, there is no opposition to the bill. Certain importers have asked for it. The Department believes it to be entirely workable, and it would be a great accommodation and saving in time to those engaged in exporting and importing plants and animals.

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, this measure is particularly important wherever aviation and commerce bring into this country plants and animals from countries in which there are serious infestations, such as the foot-and-mouth disease, or the Mediterranean fruitfly, or other pests or diseases which are a great menace to agriculture. So, Mr. President, from the aviation industry and from exporters and importers involved there has come this request, to which there has been no opposition at all. It will not cost the United States Government anything, and I hope that the bill may be passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill (S. 3698) to enable the Secretary of Agriculture to furnish, upon a reimbursable basis, certain inspection services involving overtime work was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to pay employees of the United States Department of Agriculture performing inspection or quarantine services relating to imports into and exports from the United States, for all overtime, night, or holiday work performed by them at any place where such inspection and quarantine services are performed, at such rates as he may determine, and to accept from persons for whom such work is performed reimbursement for any sums paid out by him for such work.

AVAILABILITY OF CONSERVATION MATERIALS AND SERVICES TO FARMERS

The bill (S. 2635) to amend the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, as amended, was announced as next in order.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I should like to ask the ranking minority member of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry if this bill would give the same relief as was given by the bill just passed. There is no question as to the time limit. If the inspectors could be paid for overtime, it would take care of many of the difficulties of meat inspectors, especially when large runs of livestock come in.

Mr. AIKEN. I would say that this bill would not cover the inspection of domestic plants and animals.

Mr. WHERRY. Why should it not be amended to include meat inspectors employed domestically, who have a similar difficulty? There are times when tremendous runs of cattle come to the market, and there is need for part-time inspectors. If we are going to extend the law to take care of the needs on the borders, why not extend it to take care of the needs of meat inspectors within the United States, when and if there is a demand?

Mr. AIKEN. I do not know as to that. All I can say is that there was no request for it.

Mr. WHERRY. I observe that.

Mr. AIKEN. I think it would help to alleviate situations such as those which were pointed out by the Senator from Washington [Mr. MAGNUSON], involving the slaughtering of Canadian cattle, driven over the border. In the case of markets, such as Chicago, St. Paul, Sioux City, and Omaha, I do not think it would apply, because it has reference to exporters and importers.

Mr. WHERRY. I agree that the bill as amended does not apply to the situation within the confines of the United States. I should like to ask the distinguished Senator if he would accept an amendment that would make it apply, so that when and if huge runs of cattle come in they can be taken care of.

Mr. AIKEN. The Senator from Vermont would have no personal objection to such an amendment, but I should not want to take a chance on killing what we have. I should like to have the advice of the Senator from Florida [Mr. HOLLAND] as to the advisability of amending the bill to cover inspectors of meat and slaughtering in this country.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, I think some Senator might want to be heard on it.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of the bill?

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, Senate bill 2635 would amend the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act by providing the Secretary discretionary power to set fair prices for conservation materials to be bought in whole or in part with Federal funds. The act now makes it mandatory that the Secretary set fair prices and this action sometimes creates a situation where farmers cannot get the benefit of lower, competitive prices. By providing discretionary power to set fair prices, farmers will still be protected against unduly high prices for conservation materials used in the agricultural conservation program.

I might state to the distinguished Senator from Kansas that this bill had the unanimous approval of the committee of the Senate, as well as the committee of the House. It does not withdraw the right of the Secretary to establish a fair price; it simply makes it discretionary rather than mandatory.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill (S. 2635) to amend the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, as amended, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the second paragraph of section 8 (b) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act is amended (1) by striking from the last sentence of the language "at not to exceed a fair price fixed in accordance with regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary" and (2) by adding the following new sentence: "The price at which purchase orders for any conservation material or service are filled may be limited to a fair price fixed in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary."

AGRICULTURAL SERVICE PROGRAM

The bill (S. 2636) to amend the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, as amended, and the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended, was announced as next in order.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of the bill?

Mr. HOEY. Mr. President, this bill extends to December 31, 1952, section 8 (a) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act. It has been unanimously reported by the committee.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. I have no objection.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2636) to amend the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, as amended, and the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended, which had been reported from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause, and insert:

That section 8 (a), as amended, of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, is amended (a) by striking out "January 1, 1951" wherever it appears therein and inserting in lieu thereof "January 1, 1953," and (b) by striking out "December 31, 1950" and inserting in lieu thereof "December 31, 1952."

PATENT TO JAMES BROWN

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1426) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to issue a patent in fee to James Brown, which had been reported from the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause, and insert:

That the Secretary of the Interior is authorized and directed to sell, under existing regulations, the homestead and other land of James Brown, Crow allottee numbered 3097, described as lots 1, 2, 3, and 4 in section 3, and lots 1, 2, and 3 and the southeast quarter of the northwest quarter of section 4, all located in township 6 south, range 30 east, Montana principal meridian, containing three hundred and nineteen and thirty-two one-hundredths acres, conveyance to be made by the issuance of a patent in fee to the purchaser, and to distribute the proceeds of such sale under existing regulations to James Brown.

SEC. 2. (a) The lands herein described shall not be sold after the date of enactment of this Act to any purchaser, other than the Crow Tribe or a member thereof, unless (1) at least sixty days prior to such sale the superintendent of the Crow Agency shall have been served with notice of the terms thereof and such notice, together with a description of the lands and an offer by the owner thereof to sell such lands upon the terms specified in such notice to the Crow Tribe or any member thereof, shall have been posted in a conspicuous public place at such agency, and (2) prior to the expiration of such sixty days no bona fide offer in writing to purchase such land upon the terms specified in such notice, or upon terms more favorable to the owner, shall have been made by the Crow Tribe or any member thereof and a copy thereof served upon the Superintendent of the Crow Agency.

(b) A certificate of the Superintendent of the Crow Agency stating that notice of the proposed sale was given and was posted for a period of sixty days in accordance with the provisions of clause (1) of subsection (a) and that no offer was received in accordance with clause (2) of such subsection shall, when filed and recorded in the office of the county clerk and recorder of the county in which such lands are situated, be conclusive evidence of compliance with this section. The Superintendent shall furnish the certificate to the purchaser for filing and recording.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to authorize the sale of lands allotted to James Brown on the Crow Reservation, Mont."

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 459) for the relief of Cornelis Ruhtenberg, also known as Cornelis Ruhtenberg Helmsing, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Attorney General is authorized and directed to discontinue any deportation proceedings and to cancel any outstanding order and warrant of deportation, warrant of arrest, and bond, which may have been issued in the case of Cornelis Ruhtenberg, also known as Cornelis Ruhtenberg Helmsing, of Colorado Springs, Colo. From and after the date of enactment of this Act, the said Cornelis Ruhtenberg shall not again be subject to deportation by reason of the same facts upon which any such deportation proceedings were commenced or any such warrants and order have issued.

SEC. 2. In the administration of the immigration and naturalization laws, the said Cornelis Ruhtenberg, who entered the United States from Mexico on a temporary visa, shall be considered as having been lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence as of the date of her last entry into the United States, on payment of the required visa fee and head tax.

CREDIT FOR TIME SERVED IN A FEDERAL PENAL INSTITUTION UNDER AN ILLEGAL CONVICTION OR SENTENCE

The bill (S. 946) to permit credit, for purposes of parole, for time served in a Federal penal institution under an illegal conviction or sentence in the case of a person who is subsequently legally convicted and sentenced for the same offense was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, I believe this bill requires an explanation.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Over.

Mr. McCARRAN. Objection was heard. May I ask that the objection be withheld until I make my explanation?

Mr. CHAVEZ. Very well.

Mr. McCARRAN. The explanation is very brief. The bill would add a new sentence to section 3568 of title 18, United States Code, so as to give to any man who may have served time in a Federal penitentiary, under a sentence later declared to be void, credit for the time actually served under such void sentence, upon any later valid sentence for the same offense. Without this amendment the court is not authorized to allow credit for time so served under a former sentence which has subsequently been declared to be void. The committee felt that a person convicted of a crime should be given credit for all time served by him for such crime, even though part of it might have been served under a void sentence.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. May I ask the distinguished chairman whether there has been any need shown for this type of legislation?

Mr. McCARRAN. There has been, according to the Department of Justice.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Do the courts approve of it generally?

Mr. McCARRAN. I wish to correct my statement. The Department does not favor this bill. I had in mind another bill when I made the statement.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Has the question been examined by the American Bar Association?

Mr. McCARRAN. I think it has. My recollection is that the committee has on file a communication from the American Bar Association.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Was approval given from that source?

Mr. McCARRAN. There was no disapproval.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I thank the Senator.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, I ask that the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will go over.

In the event the marriage between the above-named parties does not occur within 3 months after the entry of said Elizabeth Martha Haug, she shall be required to depart from the United States and upon failure to do so shall be deported in accordance with the provisions of sections 19 and 20 of the Immigration Act of February 5, 1917 (U. S. C., title 8, sections 155 and 156). In the event the marriage between the above-named parties shall occur with 3 months after the entry of said Elizabeth Martha Haug, the Attorney General is authorized and directed to record the lawful admission for permanent residence of said Elizabeth Martha Haug as of the date of her entry into the United States, upon the payment by her of the required fees and head tax.

RUDOLPH FARCHER

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to return to Senate bill 2204, Calendar No. 1893.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I have no objection to returning to this measure after we have reached the foot of the calendar. Until that time I feel constrained to object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. McCARRAN. Would the Senator withhold his objection? I think this bill might be disposed of, and I ask that this be the last bill so disposed of. I ask the Senator if he will withhold his objection and then let his objection pertain to the remainder of the calendar.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. That would be discriminatory.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey objects. The bill will go over.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT, SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF ILLINOIS

The bill (S. 3189) to provide that the United States District Court for the Southern District of Illinois, Northern Division, shall sit at Peoria and Rock Island, was announced as next in order.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, I ask that the bill go over.

Mr. McCARRAN. Will the Senator withhold his objection until I make an explanation?

Mr. CHAVEZ. Yes.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, this is a bill introduced by the Senator from Illinois, the majority leader, [Mr. LUCAS]. It was reported from the Committee on the Judiciary on July 12, 1950. Subsequently, on July 17, 1950, a similar House bill H. R. 7260 was passed by the House. Though the Senate bill was already on the Senate Calendar at that time, the House bill was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary and is now pending before that committee.

As a matter of comity between the two Houses, it has been the custom, in a situation like this, for the Senate to act on the House bill; and the sponsor of the bill, the Senator from Illinois, has indicated his desire that this custom should be followed in this case.

Accordingly, I now ask unanimous consent that the Committee on the Judiciary be discharged from the further consideration of the bill H. R. 2760, and that the Senate proceed to immediate consideration of that bill in lieu of Senate bill 3189.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, the only thing I should like to have the chairman tell me is whether there is a necessity for the southern district court to sit at Peoria and Rock Island.

Mr. McCARRAN. I shall try to reach that point within the time limit. The two bills are not identical, but the difference lies in an amendment which the Senator from Illinois had proposed to offer to the Senate bill. This amendment is satisfactory to all concerned and bears the recommendation of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts, and I am satisfied that it would have been approved by the Committee on the Judiciary if it had been presented to that committee.

This bill provides that the United States District Court shall sit in Rock Island, Ill., in addition to Peoria, Ill. The bill has the endorsement of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts, the Rock Island County Bar Association, and the chief judge of the seventh circuit, in which the district of Illinois are situated. The Department of Justice does not make any recommendation one way or another as to the bill. The case load in the court indicates that there should be an opportunity for the court to sit in the cities named.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, the only thing I had in mind was expediting the work of the courts. If the proposed legislation will accomplish that result, I certainly shall have no objection whatsoever. I wanted to have the assurance of the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary that it would expedite court work.

Mr. McCARRAN. It has been studied with that very point in view, and I am convinced it would accomplish that result.

Mr. MYERS. Mr. President, on behalf of the senior Senator from Illinois [Mr. LUCAS], I ask unanimous consent that there be printed at this point in the RECORD a statement prepared by him on this bill. As the Senator from Nevada knows, the Senator from Illinois is deeply interested in the bill, and is very anxious to have it passed.

I also ask that there be printed after the statement of the majority leader two letters, one from the general counsel of the General Services Administration, the second from the assistant director of the administrative office of the United States courts.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Mr. President, I could not hear the distinguished Senator from Pennsylvania. Did he merely ask for some insertions in the RECORD, which would not affect the bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. I am sorry; I could not hear.

Mr. MYERS. Mr. President, I merely asked to have inserted in the RECORD a statement of the Senator from Illinois, who is very much interested in the bill, and asks that it be passed, and two letters.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, I did not object to the Senator from Nevada having the matter considered at this time, but I should like to know what the interest of the Senator from Illinois is in the subject, and I should like to have the statement read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator wish to have read the statement which has been inserted in the RECORD?

Mr. CHAVEZ. According to the Senator from Pennsylvania, the Senator from Illinois is interested in the bill, and I desire to know the interest of the Senator from Illinois, and should like to have the statement read.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, if I may answer the Senator, the Senator from Illinois is the author of the bill in the Senate.

Mr. CHAVEZ. That is fine.

Mr. McCARRAN. And he is interested in the particular district affected, which is in the State he represents.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Very well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Pennsylvania?

There being no objection, the statement and letters were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT BY SENATOR LUCAS

I strongly urge the Senate to approve H. R. 7260, which will authorize the Federal District Court for the Northern Division of the Southern District of Illinois to sit at Rock Island.

On March 6 of this year, I introduced S. 3189, which was identical in purpose with H. R. 7260. S. 3189 is now on the Senate Calendar, while H. R. 7260 is pending before the Judiciary Committee and not before the Senate for action. I urge, however, that the distinguished chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee consent to having his committee discharged and the House bill submitted to the full Senate for action. If the Senate is given the opportunity to vote upon the House bill, rather than upon my own, considerable time will be saved in obtaining the enactment of a law establishing a Federal court at Rock Island.

The need for a Federal district court to sit at Rock Island is very great. It is of extreme importance that Congress grant its approval at the earliest possible time. Surveys made by the administrative office of the United States courts show that approximately one-third of the civil and criminal cases arising in the southern district of Illinois originate in the vicinity of Rock Island. The holding of court there will remove any serious inconveniences that now face witnesses and counsel who must travel many miles in order to attend court or present their cases.

Mr. Henry P. Chandler, Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts, strongly endorses these bills.

The House bill, H. R. 7260, which I am urging the Senate to approve, contains a second section which authorizes the General Services Administration to include quarters and accommodations in the Federal building project now being planned for Rock Island. This is also a necessary provision. I wish to submit at this place in the record letters which I have received from Mr. Whitehurst, Assistant Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts, and from the General Services Administration, both recommending the inclusion of this section.

I particularly wish to point out to the distinguished Members of the Senate a statement by Mr. Whitehurst appearing in the last paragraph of his letter. He states:

"If the legislation under consideration should be enacted, it would be highly desirable from the point of view of economy to include court quarters in that building when it is constructed."

The citizens of Rock Island, Ill., and of the adjoining communities will be very appreciative for the favorable action which I am confident the Senate will take on this matter.

GENERAL SERVICES ADMINISTRATION,
Washington, July 26, 1950.

Hon. SCOTT W. LUCAS,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR LUCAS: In accordance with a request from your office, this is to advise you that this Administration considers it desirable to include a provision in S. 3189 waiving the limitations and restrictions of section 142, title 28, United States Code, so that this Administration may include in the design of this building accommodations and facilities for holding court for the United States District Court for the Southern District, Northern Division, of Illinois, in Rock Island, Ill.

Without the inclusion of such language, it is doubtful whether authority presently exists for the inclusion of such accommodations in the design of the proposed building.

Sincerely yours,

MAXWELL H. ELLIOTT,
General Counsel.

ADMINISTRATIVE OFFICE OF THE
UNITED STATES COURTS,
Washington, D. C., July 25, 1950.

Hon. SCOTT W. LUCAS,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR LUCAS: In response to a telephone request, I am writing this letter in reference to your question whether in legislation to provide for the holding of court and the furnishing of quarters at Rock Island for the United States district court for the southern district, northern division, of Illinois, it is desirable to include a provision along the following lines: "Notwithstanding the provisions of section 142, title 28, United States Code, quarters and accommodations for holding court for the United States District Court for the Southern District, Northern Division, of Illinois, may be furnished in Rock Island, Ill., in any proposed Federal building construction project."

Title 28 of the United States Code, section 142, to which reference is made, is as follows: "Court shall be held only at places where Federal quarters and accommodations are available, or suitable quarters and accommodations are furnished without cost to the United States." This section was new law in the 1948 revision of title 28, of the United States Code. The question has been raised whether it does not prohibit the construction of any Federal court quarters in places where they were not previously available and where specific statutory authorization was lacking for the provision of such quarters. It has been the view of the Public Buildings Administration that section 142 is restrictive and accordingly recent acts of Congress have contained language waiving the section, similar to that quoted above, when it was desired that the Public Buildings Service should have authority to construct necessary quarters in Federal buildings. For example, see Public Law 400, Eighty-first Congress, approved on October 26, 1949, waiving the provisions of section 142 of title 28 for providing quarters at Thomasville, Ga.; and Public Law 396, Eighty-first Congress, approved October 26, 1949, waiving the statutory restriction in reference to quarters at Brunswick, Ga.

Our office is informed that a project for the construction of a post-office building at Rock Island is now under consideration by the General Services Administration. If the legislation under consideration should be enacted, it would be highly desirable from the point of view of economy to include court quarters in that building when it is constructed. Indeed, it may be very doubtful whether a simple requirement for the holding of a term of court at Rock Island could be adequately fulfilled unless quarters are provided in the new building. For that reason it seems desirable that a provision similar to that quoted at the beginning of this letter be incorporated in any statute to require the holding of court at Rock Island as an assurance that the court will be provided with adequate facilities to conduct its business there. In any event, its inclusion in the legislation can do no harm and it may prove to be necessary to accomplish the full purpose of the bill.

With kindest personal regards, I am,

Very sincerely,

ELMORE WHITEHURST,
Assistant Director.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on the Judiciary be discharged from the further consideration of House bill 7260, and that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of that bill in the place of Calendar No. 1972, Senate bill 3189.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Nevada?

There being no objection, the bill (H. R. 7260) to provide for the holding of court and the furnishing of quarters at Rock Island for the United States District Court for the Southern District, Northern Division, of Illinois, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection Senate bill 3189 is indefinitely postponed.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I respectfully ask unanimous consent that, in addition to the remarks which I made explanatory of the bill just passed, a further statement prepared by me be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT BY SENATOR McCARRAN ON H. R. 7260

The Rock Island area, which would be served by the sitting of the proposed court, contains about 140,000 people, and presently the business of this particular area must be done in Peoria, which is 99 miles distant. It is generally conceded that the business of this area and the location of Rock Island, as an island, make the reason for enactment of this bill most warranted. There does not appear to be any objection to its passage.

The provision in the House bill which did not appear in the Senate bill, and which was to have been offered as an amendment in behalf of the Senator from Illinois, Mr. LUCAS, amounts to an authorization to include provision for court quarters in the plans now being drawn for a new Federal building in Rock Island. The provision does not authorize construction of a new Federal building; that has already been authorized. Plans for the building are now being drawn. This provision which is in the House bill simply permits the Public Buildings Administration, in drawing those plans, to include a court room and quarters for the judge. Obviously, this should be done.

I may say that the Senator from Illinois, Mr. LUCAS, has been most diligent in seeking consideration and approval of the Judiciary Committee for this bill; and his action in requesting substitution of the House bill for his own Senate bill clearly indicates that he is far more interested in securing approval of this legislation, which is needed by the people in the Rock Island area, than he is in getting some transient credit for authorship of the legislation.

DR. FREDERICK DANIEL McDADE

ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, in the administration of the immigration and naturalization laws, Dr. Frederick Daniel McDade, a native of Canada, shall be deemed to have been lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence as of September 4, 1944, the date on which he was lawfully admitted to the United States temporarily.

SEC. 2. Upon the enactment of this act, Dr. Frederick Daniel McDade may file the petition for naturalization prescribed by law without making the preliminary declaration of intention and, upon satisfactory proof to the court that he is otherwise qualified to become a citizen of the United States the said Dr. Frederick Daniel McDade may be admitted as a citizen of the United States.

DORRANCE ULVIN AND GUY F. ALLEN

The bill (S. 3611) for the relief of Dorrance Ulvin, former certifying officer, and for the relief of Guy F. Allen, former chief disbursing officer, was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, I should appreciate an explanation of the bill.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, this is a bill to relieve a certifying officer and a disbursing officer of financial liability to the Government in the sum of $1,025.

This bill was introduced at the request of the Housing and Home Finance Agency and bears its favorable endorsement. The officers concerned certified and paid for a station wagon to be used on three housing projects in Arizona. It was an emergency purchase, the vehicle was actually needed to manage the housing projects, and the Government received the value of the vehicle through use in Government work. By existing law, however, no motor vehicles could be purchased for use of the Government under the appropriation concerned without the specific approval of the Secretary of War. The two officers concerned certified and payed for the motor vehicle in question without knowledge of the prohibition in existing law. Since the vehicle was needed and the Government actually received full value for it in its use, it is believed that the officers concerned should not be held personally liable.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill (S. 3611) for the relief of Dorrance Ulvin, former certifying officer, and for the relief of Guy F. Allen, former chief disbursing officer, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

GRANTING PERMANENT RESIDENCE TO CERTAIN SPANISH PHYSICIANS RESIDING IN PUERTO RICO

The bill (H. R. 3169) granting permanent residence to certain Spanish physicians residing in Puerto Rico was announced as next in order.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I think an explanation of this bill might be advisable.

The purpose of the bill is to grant the status of permanent residence in the United States to seven physicians and their immediate families. All of the parties concerned are now living in Puerto Rico, having come originally from Spain. Three of the proposed beneficiaries of the bill are single, and four are married. Of the latter four, two are the fathers of children. All told, the bill would affect 16 persons.

The Resident Commissioner from Puerto Rico originally introduced seven separate private bills to cover these people. The House Committee on the Judiciary covered the subject in a single bill.

The seven doctors who head these families are all employed in Puerto Rico, and the Department of the Interior has stated that their services are of vital importance to the insular government.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

W. M. TINDAL

The bill (H. R. 5252) for the relief of W. M. Tindal was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, I wonder if the distinguished Senator from Nevada would tell us why this matter should not be adjudicated in court. The record seems to disclose disputed facts.

Mr. McCARRAN. I apologize. I could not hear the Senator.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I said I wondered if the distinguished Senator from Nevada would tell us why this matter should not go to court and be adjudicated before a court, because, as I read the record, there seem to be disputed facts in the case.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I will give an explanation of the bill as we understand it, and if the Senator wishes to offer an amendment to the bill I will consider it.

This is a claim for $1,343. Claimant's truck was involved in an accident with an Army vehicle which, according to the preponderance of the evidence, was astride the center line of the highway.

The Department of the Army in its report, negated any negligence on the part of the civilian driver as far as his position on the road was concerned, and contained no direct evidence as to the speed at which he was driving, but did raise the inference that there might have been some negligence on the part of the claimant's driver in that the truck proceeded 300 feet from the place where the collision occurred. The committee felt that without more information, such inference should not be allowed to defeat the claim, since there was no evidence to show that the collision could have been avoided by prompt action on the part of the civilian driver when he discovered that his right-of-way was partially obstructed, and since as the House of Representatives, in passing this bill, in effect made a determination that the claimant was not guilty of any contributory negligence. The Department of the Army makes no recommendation on the claim.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator if the committee reported the bill unanimously.

Mr. McCARRAN. The committee report is unanimous.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill (H. R. 5252) for the relief of W. M. Tindal, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ACME FINANCE CO.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 5799) for the relief of the Acme Finance Co.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Nevada if this does not represent an automobile that was used in counterfeiting operations. I should like to have an explanation as to why he thinks it is necessary to pay this claim, in view of those facts and circumstances.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, this bill would pay to the Acme Finance Co., of Denver, Colo., the sum of $864.50. Claimant finance company held the note and mortgage given to secure payment for a Mercury automobile purchased by one Robert L. Edelen. Edelen was, shortly after the purchase of the automobile, picked up in Cleveland by United States Secret Service agents for passing altered currency.

Claimant attempted to protect its interests in the automobile which was administratively forfeited and turned over to the Secret Service for use.

Because of erroneous information received from the United States district attorney in Cleveland, claimant failed to institute timely proceedings for recovery of its property. The Department of Treasury recognizes the justice of the claim and recognizes that the loss was incurred through no fault of the claimant, and does not object to the passage of the legislation.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Mr. President, may I ask the distinguished Senator a question? I take it then that the failure to file a claim was because of the statement of the United States attorney which prevented the claimant going into court for proper proceedings?

Mr. McCARRAN. That is the information the committee received.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the third reading and passage of the bill.

The bill (H. R. 5799) was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

RELIEF OF THE ESTATE OF ARCHER C. GUNTER

The bill (H. R. 8519) for the relief of the estate of Archer C. Gunter was announced as next in order.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, it would seem that passage of the bill might establish a precedent. I should like to ask for an explanation by the distinguished Senator from Nevada.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, on May 10, 1944, Archer Gunter was injured when struck by debris from a crashing Navy plane. In the Eightieth Congress

Private Law 117 was enacted, which made an award of $1,000 to him for pain and suffering and medical expenses. In the meantime Mr. Gunter died, not as a result of injuries sustained in the accident, and when claim was filed by his heirs to collect the amount awarded under Private Law 117 of the Eightieth Congress the Comptroller General held that he could not make payment to the heirs. This bill simply makes the original award of $1,000 payable to the estate of Mr. Gunter.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. I understand from the explanation that the amount of $1,000 originally awarded cannot be paid to the estate of Mr. Gunter unless this bill is passed?

Mr. McCARRAN. The Comptroller General has so held.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill (H. R. 8519) was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. MARTIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that House bill 6606, Calendar 2007, may be passed to the foot of the calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

TANIA IPOLO AND LANA BOUIANOVSKY

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 289) for the relief of Tania Ipolo and Lana Bouianovsky, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment on page 2, line 8, after the word "entry", to insert "upon payment of the required visa fees and head taxes", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Attorney General is authorized and directed to discontinue any deportation proceedings and to cancel any outstanding orders and warrants of deportation, warrants of arrest, and bonds which may have been issued in the cases of Tania Ipolo, also known as Tania Ignatieff and Tania Bouianovsky, and her daughter, Lana Bouianovsky. From and after the date of enactment of this act the aforesaid persons shall not again be subject to deportation by reason of the same facts upon which such deportation proceedings were commenced or any such warrants and orders have issued.

SEC. 2. In the administration of the immigration and naturalization laws the said Tania Ipolo and Lana Bouianovsky, who were admitted into the United States on temporary visas, shall be considered as having been lawfully admitted into the United States for permanent residence as of the date of their last entry upon payment of the required visa fees and head taxes.

SEC. 3. Upon the enactment of this act the Secretary of State is authorized and directed to instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct two numbers from the nonpreference category of the proper immigration quota.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RUGGIERO DiCOSTANZO

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 297) for the relief of Ruggiero DiCostanzo, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment on page 1, line 8, after the word "visitor", to insert "upon payment of the required visa fee and head tax", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of the immigration and naturalization laws the Attorney General of the United States shall record the lawful admission for permanent residence of Ruggiero DiCostanzo, a native of Italy, as of July 28, 1947, the date on which he was originally admitted to the United States as a visitor upon payment of the required visa fee and head tax.

SEC. 2. Upon the enactment of this act the Secretary of State shall instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct one number from the nonpreference portion of the quota for Italy for the first year that such quota is available.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, may we have an explanation of the bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. An explanation is desired.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, this is the case of a young man 26 years old, of good moral character, whose mother, father, three brothers and three sisters all live in the United States. He is a native and citizen of Italy, but has no family ties there. He is presently living with his family, in South Norwalk, Conn.

This boy's mother is in very poor health, and the sponsor of this bill, the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. McMAHON], submitted to the committee an affidavit from a physician indicating that the deportation of this young man would greatly endanger the health of his ailing mother.

Enactment of this bill would let him remain in the United States as a permanent resident.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, do I understand the distinguished Senator to say that the affidavit was the affidavit of a physician?

Mr. McCARRAN. A physician's affidavit, yes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill (S. 297) was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read third time, and passed.

JULIO LAFFITTE

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 305) for the relief of Julio Laffitte, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment in line 7, after the numerals "1946", to insert "upon payment of the head tax and visa fee", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of the immigration and naturalization laws Julio Laffitte, of New York, N. Y., shall be held and considered to have been lawfully admitted into the United States for permanent residence as of October 11, 1946, upon payment of the head tax and visa fee.

SEC. 2. Upon the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of State is authorized and directed to instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct one number from the nonpreference category of the first available immigration quota for nationals of Spain.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FRANK MILLER—BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 490) for the relief of Frank Miller was announced as next in order.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection being heard, the bill will be passed over.

Mr. KILGORE subsequently said: Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Kansas to withhold his objection to Senate bill 490, Calendar No. 2011, to permit an explanation to be made. If an explanation is made, perhaps the objection will be withdrawn.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Kansas withhold his objection, for that purpose?

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. I shall be glad to withhold my objection, to permit an explanation to be made.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair asks the Senator to wait just a minute, please.

If the Chair correctly interprets the rules, gentlemen who are on the floor of the Senate are here as guests of the Senate and at the pleasure of the Senate. The Chair does not know whether such gentlemen realize it individually, but collectively their behavior makes it impossible to carry on the business of the Senate; Senators cannot hear the clerk, and the Chair cannot hear the Senator who is speaking.

Without being personal about it, the Chair wishes to state that if such disturbances do not stop, the Chair, on the next occasion of that sort, without further warning, will direct the Sergeant at Arms to remove them from the floor of the Senate.

The Chair has some responsibility in regard to the maintenance of order in the Senate, and the Chair will insist upon order, although the Chair does not wish to be personal about the matter.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, would the Senator from West Virginia care to have me make an explanation?

Mr. KILGORE. Yes. Then, if necessary, I shall make a further statement.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, this is the case of a man 55 years old, a native and citizen of Austria. He has lived in the United States ever since 1907, when he entered the country legally. He has been living for many years in West Virginia. In 1937 he was sentenced to imprisonment for 18 months, after having pleaded guilty to a violation of the Mann Act. Because of that conviction, he was subsequently found subject to deportation, although his record since 1937 has been good. Numerous affidavits concerning this man's character have been presented to the committee, and some of them are printed in the committee report. The senior Senator from West Virginia [Mr. KILGORE], the ranking Majority Member of the Committee on the Judiciary, is the sponsor of this bill. If enacted, the bill would cancel outstanding deportation proceedings against this alien, and would provide that he should not again be subject to deportation by reason of the same facts.

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. President, I should like to make a further statement at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Mest Virginia is recognized.

Mr. KILGORE. I am not familiar with the person involved in this measure; I do not know him personally at all. I do know the persons who wrote the letters; they are outstanding citizens of the county.

This man came to the United States at the age of 13. He would be completely and utterly lost in Austria.

The offense with which he stood charged, and to which he pleaded guilty, is a serious one, of course; but in this connection I wish to state that I know that court fairly well, and I know the judge who presided in it at that time. The man to whom this bill relates was arrested and was held in jail for 6 months before he was called up for trial. He had no money; he had no attorney. He consulted an attorney who was very much in the black book of that particular judge, to my personal knowledge. An appeal by that attorney to the judge, alone would almost have resulted in the conviction of anyone who might have been involved in such a matter. The attorney advised this man to plead guilty.

In his evidence he says that it happens that he lives in a section of West Virginia where three States come together, and it is possible to cross the State line without realizing it. He was coming from Kentucky. The woman who is mentioned in connection with the case asked him to let her ride with him to Bluefield, W. Va., and he permitted her to do so. She later got into a fight there, and wanted him to pay her fine, but he would not do it. She then got mad, and lodged this complaint against him.

However, he states that his conduct has been excellent, except for that one instance and for one case during the prohibition era, in which his place was entered without his knowledge, and a little moonshine whisky was found there—which, of course, in that particular section was not uncommon. He says those are the only charges ever placed against him.

This man started in the coal mines. He was without much education. Eventually he became a carpenter. The people there say that there have not been complaints against him, except for this one charge; and that charge hung fire for 14 years.

Inasmuch as he has been a good citizen and inasmuch as charges have not been placed against him, except for this one matter, and in view of the fact that he has done well, considering the fact that he had no education, and also considering the fact that he was advised by the attorney to whom I have referred to plead guilty, it seems to me that the bill should be passed.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Mr. President, I was struck by the fact that, according to the record, in 1937 this man was, so it is stated, operating a house of prostitution.

Mr. KILGORE. According to the complaint, that is what he was charged with.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. I also observed that it was stated that he had been in this country since he was 13 years of age, but had not taken proper steps to protect himself, and that he had violated the law as late as 1937. Under those circumstances, I thought it would be an extremely dangerous precedent for us to dignify such facts by proceeding in the Senate as is proposed by the bill. On the basis of that record, I felt constrained to object.

Mr. KILGORE. I understand. However, I question the facts, even those shown on the record, knowing justice as it was administered in that county at that time and in that court at that time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator from West Virginia has expired.

Unanimous consent has been requested that the Senate return to the consideration of Calendar No. 2011, Senate bill 490. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, let me say that I should like to have this measure passed over to the next call of the calendar, in order to permit a further checkup to be made.

Mr. KILGORE. I have no objection to having that done.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection being made to the present consideration of the bill, the bill is passed over.

PREVENTION OF UNAUTHORIZED ACCEPTANCE OR WEARING OF FOREIGN DECORATIONS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1171) to prevent unauthorized acceptance or wearing of foreign decorations by officers of the United States, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment on page 2, line 7, after the word "decoration", to strike out "heretofore or", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That (a) chapter 33 of title 18 of the United States Code is amended by adding a new section thereto as follows:

"SEC. 710. Unauthorized acceptance or wearing of foreign decorations by officers of the United States.

"Whoever, being an officer of the United States, accepts any present, decoration, or other thing conferred or presented to him by any foreign government unless such present, decoration, or other thing shall have been (a) tendered through the Department of State and not to such officer in person, and (b) delivered to him by the Department of State pursuant to an act of Congress authorizing such delivery; or

"Whoever, being an officer of the United States, publicly shows or exposes upon his person any decoration hereafter accepted by him from any foreign government unless the wearing of such decoration is specifically authorized in an act of Congress authorizing such acceptance—

"Shall be fined not more than $500 or imprisoned not more than 6 months, or both; and be disqualified from holding any office of honor, profit, or trust under the United States."

(b) The index at the beginning of chapter 33 of title 18 of the United States Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"710. Unauthorized acceptance or wearing of foreign decorations by officers of the United States."

SEC. 2. Sections 2 and 3 of the act entitled "An act authorizing the persons therein named to accept of certain decorations and presents therein named, from foreign governments, and for other purposes," approved January 31, 1881 (21 Stat. 603), are hereby repealed.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ATHANASIOS ELIAS CHELIOTIS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1277) for the relief of Athanasios Elias Cheliotis, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment on page 1, line 8, after the word "States," to insert "upon payment of the required visa fee and head tax," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of the immigration laws of the United States, Athanasios Elias Cheliotis, of Stamford, Conn., shall be held and considered to have been lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence as of May 3, 1947, the date upon which he was admitted temporarily to the United States upon payment of the required visa fee and head tax. Upon the enactment of this act the Secretary of State shall instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct one number from the Greek quota of the first year that openings are available in such quota.

SEC. 2. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Attorney General is authorized and directed to discontinue any deportation proceedings and to cancel any outstanding warrants of arrest, order of deportation, and bond in the case of Athanasios Elias Cheliotis. From and after the date of enactment of this act, Athanasios Elias Cheliotis shall not again be subject to deportation by reasons of the same facts upon which any such deportation proceedings were commenced or such warrant and order have issued.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment having been agreed to, unless there is a further amendment to be proposed without objection——

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I should like to ask the distinguished Senator from Nevada whether any proof was adduced before the committee to show that this person would not become a public charge.

Mr. McCARRAN. This is the case of a man 29 years old, a native and citizen of Greece. He came to the United States in 1947 as a visitor. He is now a patient in a hospital on Staten Island, N. Y., where he is suffering from tuberculosis of the hip.

This is a man of good moral character, with no Communist or Fascist leanings; and the committee has been convinced, by letters which are printed in full in the committee report, that he would make a good citizen. The purpose of the bill is to let him remain in the United States as a permanent resident.

Senators will find that there is a star print of the committee report on this case, which includes a letter showing that this man has been offered employment when he has recovered from his present illness. Even without this showing, the committee was satisfied that this man is a well-educated and cultured gentleman, and will have no difficulty in earning his own living as soon as he is well.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I thank the distinguished Senator from Nevada.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there is no further amendment to be proposed, the question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill (S. 1277) was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

COLLINS STERLING SMITH

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1289) for the relief of Collins Sterling Smith, which had been reported from the Committee on Judiciary with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the Attorney General is authorized and directed to discontinue any deportation proceedings and to cancel any outstanding order and warrant of deportation, warrant of arrest, and bond, which may have been issued in the case of Collins Sterling Smith. From and after the date of enactment of this act, the said Collins Sterling Smith shall not again be subject to deportation by reason of the same facts upon which such deportation proceedings were commenced or any such warrants and order have issued.

SEC. 2. In the administration of the immigration laws, the said Collins Sterling Smith shall be considered as having been lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence as of the date of his last entry into the United States, upon payment of the required head tax and visa fee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ANNA RAJMANN

The bill (S. 1568) for the relief of Anna Rajmann was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. CHAVEZ. I should like to have an explanation of the bill.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, this is the case of a woman 39 years old, native and citizen of Austria. She has relinquished her Austrian citizenship, and is a stateless person. She is presently employed as a dental assistant in the office of a dentist on Long Island.

This woman was employed by the United States Army in Vienna, and in connection with that employment wore the uniform of the Army, and became known to her friends and neighbors as one who sympathized with the United States. Because of the confidential nature of her employment, she necessarily became acquainted with important and secret data for our Government. It is feared that if she should be returned to Austria, now occupied by the Russian Army, she would be subjected to extreme hardship and possibly to torture.

The purpose of this bill is to let her remain in the United States for permanent residence.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1568) for the relief of Anna Rajmann, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment on page 2, line 7, after the word "States", to insert "upon payment of the required visa fee and head tax", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Attorney General is authorized and directed to discontinue any deportation proceedings and to cancel any outstanding order and warrant of deportation, warrant of arrest, and bond, which may have been issued in the case of Anna Rajmann, of New York, N. Y. From and after the date of enactment of this act, the said Anna Rajmann shall not again be subject to deportation by reason of the same facts upon which such deportation proceedings were commenced or any such warrants and order have issued.

SEC. 2. In the administration of the immigration and naturalization laws, the said Anna Rajmann, who served as a civilian employee of the United States Army in Austria, and who entered the United States on a temporary visa, shall be considered as having been lawfully admitted for permanent residence as of the date of her last entry into the United States upon payment of the required visa fee and head tax.

SEC. 3. Upon the enactment of this act, the Secretary of State is authorized and directed to instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct one number from the nonpreference category of the first available immigration quota for nationals of Austria.

NATURALIZATION OF PERSONS WHO HAVE LOST UNITED STATES CITIZENSHIP THROUGH VOTING IN PLEBISCITE IN ITALY—BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (H. R. 6616) to provide for the expeditious naturalization of former citizens of the United States who have lost United States citizenship through voting in a political election or in a plebiscite held in Italy, was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. CHAVEZ. Over.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator kindly withhold his objection until I may make an explanation?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New Mexico withhold his objection to permit an explanation?

Mr. CHAVEZ. Yes.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I should like to make it clear to the Senator from New Mexico that this is a bill to permit the naturalization of former citizens of the United States who have lost their citizenship by reason of voting in either one of two particular political elections in Italy. The elections in question are those of June 2, 1946, and April 18, 1948. The major question in both those elections, as Senators know, was communism. Many hundreds of thousands of United States citizens, of Italian birth or extraction, wrote letters to their friends and relatives in Italy, urging them to vote in these elections against communism. Our own State Department urged such voting. However, any American citizen who did so vote, is deemed to have expatriated himself.

This bill, as amended, would permit persons whose only basis for loss of citizenship is voting in one or both of these elections, to be naturalized by taking, within 2 years after the date of approval of this act, the usual naturalization oath. A person who was not subject to naturalization for any other reason would not be benefited by the bill.

It is estimated that perhaps as many as 3,500 persons would be affected by this bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, I may be wrong, but I think I am right. Such persons are either Italians or Americans. Over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will go over.

KAZUKO KAMADA

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 7228) for the relief of Kazuko Kamada, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment on page 1, line 3, after the enacting clause, to strike out:

Merithew, a citizen of the United States and a sergeant in the service of the Department of the Air Force.

And insert in lieu thereof:

That the provisions of the immigration laws relating to exclusion of aliens inadmissible because of race shall not hereafter apply to Kazuko Kamada, the Japanese fiancée of Sgt. Ralph S. Merithew, and that the said Kazuko Kamada may be eligible for a visa as a nonimmigrant temporary visitor for a period of 3 months.

Upon the enactment of this act, the Secretary of State shall instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct two numbers from the appropriate quota for the first year that such quota is available.

RETURN OF PROPERTY ACQUIRED BY AN ALIEN FROM AN AMERICAN CITIZEN

The bill (S. 2929) to amend section 32 of the Trading With the Enemy Act of 1917, as amended, so as to permit the return under such section of property which an alien acquired, by gift, devise, bequest, or inheritance, from an American citizen, was announced as next in order.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, this is a bill to permit, under the Trading With the Enemy Act, the return of property, which has been vested thereunder, to aliens who acquired such property by gift, devise, request, or inheritance from an American citizen, upon a showing that such person was never a member of the Nazi Party.

The purpose of the bill is to do away with certain inequities now patent in existing law.

As an example the committee have before it the case of a young man who immigrated from Germany shortly before World War II intending to become a good American and then bring his mother to this country. He served honorably in our armed forces, and while alive he took out National Service life insurance designating his mother as beneficiary. After he was killed in action fighting for the United States, the Enemy Property Custodian seized the proceeds of his GI insurance and now the mother is prohibited from benefiting from her son's munificence, even to the extent of receiving the rebated premiums. The fact that the mother's life was made miserable by the Nazis because she had a son in the United States forces does not qualify her as an insurance beneficiary. In practicality, she would have to prove that she was incarcerated in a concentration camp to qualify for the return of the property. This is a manifest inequity which the committee believes the Government never intended to transpire.

Another inequity in favor of the bill is that the property covered thereunder is intrinsically and inherently American property, which was amassed and earned in America by American citizens and which aided and abetted the American effort, rather than offering succor to our alien enemies. Certainly it is not the intent of Congress to set up a statute whereby such property would be seized.

Another inequity in the existing situation is that German property located in Germany, which was used by the Germans to further their war endeavors, has not been seized and cannot be so under the Trading With the Enemy Act, but rather today rests in the hands of its German owners. Thus, we have the poor mother referred to above, who cannot even get her son's premiums back, facing her German neighbor, who for purposes of contrast, let us say, was an industrialist tycoon owning prior to the war a dye and fertilizer works easily convertible into munitions. At the surrender of the German Army, such plant would have been reconverted to dye and fertilizers, and the tycoon is again the owner and well-to-do. To say the least, this is a very anomalous situation.

This bill is sponsored jointly by the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. LANGER], the Senator from Maryland [Mr. O'CONOR], and the two Senators from Nebraska.

It is understood that, after conferring with the Minority Calendar Committee, the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. WHERRY] has two amendments which he desires to offer to this bill. These amendments have been worked out with the staff of the Committee on the Judiciary, and I am satisfied that they will be acceptable to the committee, if the Senator from Nebraska desires to offer them at this time.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, has the Senator finished?

Mr. McCARRAN. I have concluded my statement.

Mr. WHERRY. If the distinguished Senator's time has not been consumed, I should like to ask him a question.

The Senator modifies the amendment which the committee has made relative to the designation of the individual, and the committee recommends changing the words individual "citizen" or "subject" of Germany, Austria, and the other countries listed, to the word "national." I think that is a proper designation. One Senator felt that that minor amendment should be offered. It is really immaterial to me whether we designate such persons as citizens, subjects, or nationals; but I believe "national" is the proper word.

Mr. McCARRAN. That amendment is acceptable.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I offer the amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a request that the same amendment extend to other places in the bill?

Mr. McCARRAN. I make that same request, Mr. President. I think there are some committee amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. We will proceed, first, with the committee amendments.

Mr. WHERRY. The modification, however, is accepted?

Mr. McCARRAN. That is correct.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the next committee amendment.

The next amendment was, on page 2, line 12, to insert:

Provided, That no part of the amount returned under the provisions of this act in excess of 10 percent shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with any claims for return under this act, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment offered by the Senator from Nebraska.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 1, line 6, it is proposed to strike out "subject" and to insert "national"; on page 2, line 2, to strike out "subject" and insert "national"; page 2, line 5, to strike out "subject" and insert "national"; and on page 2, line 5, delete the words "a prima facie showing" and insert in lieu thereof the words "shows by reliable, probative, and substantial evidence."

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, provision is made in the bill that a claimant, in order to be entitled to a refund under the bill, must establish a prima facie case. Fear has been expressed that this might be contrued to mean that the alien property custodian would be unable to rebut a mere statement by the claimant. The amendment offered by the Senator from Nebraska would eliminate any such possibility, by writing into the bill the precise language which the Congress used in the Administrative Procedure Act, to define the nature and extent of proof required; namely, that proof should be made by reliable, probative and substantial evidence.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, the purpose of the amendment is to require that the beneficiary under the bill show by reliable, probative and substantial evidence that he has never been a member of the Nazi party rather than the less stringent requirement that he only make a prima facie showing to that effect. It would seem better that those who wished to benefit under the proposed legislation should bear this additional burden in the interest of justice.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DESIGNATION OF THIRD SUNDAY IN SEPTEMBER AS CHILDREN'S DAY IN SPORTS

The Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 150) designating the third Sunday in September of each year as Children's Day in Sports, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment on page 1, line 3, to strike out "Sunday in" and insert "day"; and in line 4, on page 1, to strike out "in Sports," so as to make the joint resolution read:

Resolved, etc., That the third day of September of each year is hereby designated as Children's Day, and the President of the United States is hereby authorized and requested to issue annually a proclamation setting aside that day and inviting all agencies and organizations interested in child welfare to provide for the proper observance of that day by holding such exercises as will instill in the children of the Nation a zeal for good sportsmanship and teach them to enjoy, appreciate, and conserve our natural resources and wildlife.

The amendments were agreed to.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, was read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "Joint resolution designating the third day in September of each year as Children's Day."

ALEXANDER STEWART

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 1991) for the relief of Alexander Stewart, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with amendments, on page 1, line 8, after the word "lien", to insert "which are based upon the same facts upon which search warrants or orders were issued"; and on page 2, line 2, after the numerals "1947", to insert "upon payment of the required visa fee and head tax."

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, are we now considering House bill 1991?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, this is the case of a young man 21 years old, who as a boy, was adopted as a mascot by the Thirty-fourth Division of the United States Army in Africa. He went on with the division to Anzio and was brought back into the country when the American troops returned here.

As might have been expected, the boy was pretty wild when he arrived in the United States, and apparently had some trouble adjusting himself. He seems to have accomplished that task, is presently employed as a blueprint operator, and is attending night classes in English and mathematics at the University of Houston, Tex.

The purpose of this bill is to let him remain in the United States as a permanent resident.

Many fine American citizens have interested themselves in this case. Letters and statements from some of them are printed in the committee report. The committee also has in its files a petition signed by more than 300 officers and enlisted men of the Thirty-fourth Division, stating that this boy "voluntarily took up arms in defense of the United States and fought with the One Hundred and Thirty-third Infantry Regiment of this division from November 1942 until the end of hostilities in the Italian campaign," and expressing the belief that he is "entitled to the rights of a United States citizen."

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

JIRINA ZIZKOVSKY

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 6461) for the relief of Jirina Zizkovsky, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with amendments on page 1, line 7, after the word "date", to insert "upon the payment of the required head tax and visa fee"; after line 7, to strike out:

SEC. 2. On the passage of this measure, the Secretary of State is directed to deduct one number from the current immigration quota for Czechoslovakia.

And in lieu thereof, to insert:

SEC. 2. Upon the enactment of this act, the Secretary of State shall instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct one number from the appropriate quota for the first year that such quota is available.

The amendments were agreed to.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

BUDGET AND ACCOUNTING PROCEDURES ACT OF 1950

The bill (S. 3850) to authorize the President to determine the form of the national budget and of departmental estimates, to modernize and simplify governmental accounting and auditing methods and procedures, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, this seems to be a very important bill. I think the RECORD should contain an explanation of it.

Mr. MCCLELLAN. Mr. President, this bill, Senate bill 3850, was introduced on June 29, and it was intended to take the place of Senate bill 2054 which was introduced some time ago by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. MCCARTHY] to carry out the Hoover Commission recommendation with reference to this subject matter. The Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments held quite extensive hearings on the original bill.

In the course of the hearings differences of opinion arose particularly with reference to title II of the bill, which proposed to set up an Accountant General's Office in the executive branch of the Government and vest in him certain powers which are now reposed in the Comptroller General. The committee is of the opinion that that provision should not be enacted into law. After working out all the differences that existed at that time with reference to the original bill the committee drafted this bill and introduced it, with 11 members of the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments cosponsoring the bill.

Mr. President, this is a piece of highly technical legislation. I would not undertake to tell the Senate, even after all these studies, that I have a perfect understanding of it. However, I may say that about 3 years ago the Bureau of the Budget, the Comptroller General, and the Secretary of the Treasury initiated a voluntary program dealing with all the accounting phases of the Government. The Hoover Commission recommended that an Office of Accountant General be established in the executive branch of the Government. That recommendation is opposed by these three agencies that are definitely involved. This bill primarily enacts into law the procedures and practices which are now being followed in this voluntary system. After all the work on the bill it has the enthusiastic endorsement and support of these three agencies. Their letters and comments are contained in the report.

I may say, too, that with the one exception, the omission of the establishment of the Accountant General's Office, the bill implements the Hoover Commission recommendations. I do not think there is another provision in the bill which is in any way contrary to the Hoover Commission recommendations. It is designed to implement those recommendations. In my judgment and in the judgment of others, who have carefully studied the bill, it goes 90 percent of the way so far as the Hoover Commission recommendations on this subject are concerned.

The Citizens Committee supporting the Hoover Commission, while not wholly satisfied with the bill, because it does not establish the Office of Accountant General, does give its approval in language, which I shall be very glad to read to the Senate. I hope if I run over the allotted 5 minutes I shall be granted another few minutes. The Citizens Committee says:

> Certain definite operating improvements and economies in line with the recommendations of the Hoover Commission should result from the accounting provisions of the bill, despite the variance from major policy proposals.

That has reference to the establishment of the Office of Accountant General.

> The powers given to the Comptroller General would center responsibility for accounting to an extent that is lacking at present. These powers would be such as to make possible, the implementation of accounting reforms developed in the Hoover report and in the present joint voluntary program of the Comptroller General, the Secretary of the Treasury, and the Director of the Budget. Progress can be made toward elimination of duplicative and cumbersome procedures, and inconsistent and improper application of accounting principles and practices.

I shall not take further time in explanation of the bill unless it is necessary to read the comments of the Honorable Lindsay C. Warren, the Comptroller General, the Honorable John W. Snyder, Secretary of the Treasury, and the Honorable Frederick J. Lawton, Director of the Budget Bureau, all of whom enthusiastically support the bill.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCLELLAN. I yield.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator from Arkansas has expired. Does the Senator wish additional time in order to yield to the Senator from North Dakota for a question?

Mr. McCLELLAN. If I may.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LANGER. What would the bill do aside from changing the method of accounting?

Mr. McCLELLAN. I shall read the general description:

> The bill is in full accord with S. 2054 as it relates to performance budgeting and amendments to existing law in the auditing fields, but it does not implement the recommendation relative to the creation of an Accountant General, in whom would have been vested powers over the prescription of principles, standards, and related requirements for accounting. These functions involve long-established policies and powers of the Congress now vested in the Comptroller General. These provisions are designed to insure proper legislative controls over appropriations and Federal expenditures. It was the view of the committee that the Congress is not willing to surrender these legislative prerogatives to the Executive, and is willing to depart from the practice established by Congress with relation to controls over appropriations so long and so well exercised by its agency, the General Accounting Office.
> Mr. President, S. 3850 covers three major subjects of budgeting, of accounting, and of appropriations, and then repeals a total of 106 out-moded or obsolete financial provisions of law. In the field of budgeting and of appropriation reforms, the proposal follows directly the meritorious recommendations of the Hoover Commission. Its adoption will achieve worth-while results such as modernization of budget practices, notably the adoption of performance budgeting which is designed to indicate not only the Government is to spend each year, but also what results are to be obtained from those expenditures.
> The remaining subject covered by S. 3850 is that of improved accounting in the Government. This is a subject which is highly technical, and with which few of us are fully informed, yet it is the very essence of achieving good administration and good management controls over the far-flung and exceedingly complex operations of the Federal Government.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. McCLELLAN. I am glad to yield.

Mr. McCARRAN. I should like to have the Senator state in what way this bill would affect the present Comptroller General's set-up.

Mr. McCLELLAN. To the extent that it affects the Comptroller General's set-up, it strengthens his power and control in connection with the general accounting system of the Government.

Mr. McCARRAN. The Comptroller General's Office is set up as an agency of Congress.

Mr. McCLELLAN. It is, and that is why the committee felt that it could not support the recommendation of the Hoover Commission that a part of those powers should be divested from the Comptroller General, from the legislative agency, and transferred to the executive branch.

I may say that the Secretary of the Treasury and the Budget Bureau do not want to assume the authority proposed to be created. So the bill gives the Comptroller General more power over prescribing the system of accounting, and places the responsibility on the heads of the various agencies to conform to the general standards set up by the Comptroller General. Then they are to be channeled through the Secretary of the Treasury so that he can coordinate them to the point that any information about accounting can be obtained through that direct channel. The general principles and standards are set up by the Comptroller General.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCLELLAN. I yield.

Mr. LANGER. As I understand, the work for the Federal Government in connection with the State wildlife and game associations is all done through the States.

Mr. McCLELLAN. This bill relates to the accounting of the Government.

Mr. LANGER. I understand, but, as a matter of fact, the Government works through the various States, where the legislatures adopt statutes providing for taking care of the matter, and all that sort of thing. The question I wanted particularly answered is whether this proposed new law would in any manner whatsoever change the relationship between the States and the Federal Government.

Mr. McCLELLAN. It does not change the relationship with the States. It deals with agencies under the Federal Government, setting up an accounting system which will give the Comptroller General the power of general supervision.

I wonder if the Senator is not referring to another bill. Did he have in mind Calendar No. 2040, House bill 3906? Is that the one the Senator asked me about?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Let the Chair make an observation, while the Chair is not making the point, the Senate must decide whether to debate the bill extensively. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, I am wondering if a bill of this magnitude and importance should be passed under the 5-minute rule.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Mr. President, I am not insisting upon that. I was asked for an explanation of the bill, and I was trying to give it.

Mr. McCARRAN. I am going to ask that the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair was not making a point of order on the Senator from Arkansas. But the bill is so important that the Chair was impressed by the gravity of it.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Mr. President, if I may have one more minute, I tried to state that this is highly technical legislation. As I said in the very beginning, notwithstanding all the study of it, and the effort to work over it for a long period of time, the agencies working together in consultation with the staff of the committee, in order to frame a bill upon which everyone could be in general agreement, it is still a bill whose consideration is of major importance. This is regarded as one of the most advanced and important steps that have been proposed possibly for the past 30 years with reference to legislation affecting the general accounting system and fiscal system of the Government. I very earnestly urge Senators to read the report, and let us try to enact the bill at this session.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will go over.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, I wanted to say, regarding this bill, that it is obvious from the remarks of the distinguished Senator from Arkansas that it proposes excellent legislation, which should be seriously considered by the Senate at the earliest possible moment. I wish to associate myself with the bill, and I am sorry it cannot be passed today.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada objected, as the Chair understood.

Mr. McCARRAN. I asked that the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will go over.

MERCHANT SHIP SALES ACT OF 1946—CORRECTION OF ERROR IN PUBLIC LAW 591

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 193) to amend section 14 of the Merchant Ship Sales Act of 1946, as amended, for the purpose of correcting an error in Public Law 591, Eighty-first Congress, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That section 14 of the Merchant Ship Sales Act of 1946, as amended, is amended by striking out the word "or" after the word "contract" where it appears the second time and inserting in lieu thereof the word "of", so that the section as amended will read as follows:

"SEC. 14. No contract of sale shall be made under this act after January 15, 1951, and no contract of charter shall be made under this act after June 30, 1950, except as provided for charter under subsections (e) and (f) of section 5 hereof, as amended."

AMENDMENT OF FEDERAL AID TO WILDLIFE RESTORATION ACT

The bill (H. R. 3906) to amend the Federal Aid to Wildlife Restoration Act, as amended, was announced as next in order.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, I should like to have an explanation of this bill.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. Mr. President, in the United States there is a special levy on arms and ammunition for the purpose of raising money under the Robinson-Pittman Act. That money is divided among the States according to their population, but when it comes to the Territories the amount a Territory receives must be fixed by legislation.

I wish to read one short paragraph from the report to illustrate the inequities which are inflicted upon the Territories by that rule. The purpose of the pending bill is to give the Territories greater equity in the fund collected—an equity to which they are well entitled. I read from the report:

At the present time the Secretary is authorized to apportion out of the total of the special fund not more than $25,000 to the Territory of Alaska, and not more than $10,000 to the Territory of Hawaii. Alaska contains 586,000 square miles of territory, as compared to 267,000 in Texas, our largest State. In 1948 a total of 18,829 hunting licenses were sold in the Territory of Alaska, as compared to the sale of 13,516 hunting licenses in Rhode Island, our smallest State. This year—

Speaking of 1948—

Rhode Island was allotted $53,903.10, in accordance with the provisions of the act of September 2, 1937. Thus, an increase in the allocation to the Territory of Alaska to the sum of $75,000 certainly is not inequitable.

Mr. President, I have stated the purpose of the bill. We have to provide for this matter by law with respect to the Territories. So far as the States are concerned, the total amount is taken and divided up among all the States.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. I yield.

Mr. LANGER. Does not the Senator consider that inequitable? Consider a State of large territorial extent and a small population. Consider Colorado, or North Dakota, or any of the western States. They do not get an equitable proportion.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. That is under the original law. The amendment deals only with the Territories. While Colorado and North Dakota perhaps are not getting an equitable division under the law, the Territories are getting an extremely inequitable division. The purpose of the bill is to correct the law insofar as the Territories are concerned.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. Yes, I am glad to yield.

Mr. LANGER. There is no objection at all to the allotment of the Territories being increased. But I should like to ask the distinguished Senator from Colorado if he will not join with some of us from other States to see if we cannot do now what we did in connection with the building of roads, in which case the division was very inequitable at the beginning, as the Senator knows, but it has gradually been changed over the years, so that other elements aside from population alone are being considered?

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. Yes, I should gladly join the Senator in working out a more equitable formula so far as division among States is concerned. But this particular bill only gives the Territories more of the money which they should have.

Mr. LANGER. There is no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill (H. R. 3906) to amend the Federal Aid to Wildlife Restoration Act, as amended, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ABOLITION OF OBSOLETE REQUIREMENTS RELATING TO USE OF PETROLEUM AS FUEL FOR STEAM VESSELS

The bill (S. 3796) to amend section 4474 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, relating to the use of petroleum as fuel aboard steam vessels, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 4474 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (U. S. C., title 46, sec. 467), is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 4474. When crude petroleum of a flash point not less than 150 degrees Fahrenheit is carried in the double-bottom fuel tanks of steamers using the same for fuel, the crude petroleum carried in such tanks in excess of the necessities of the voyage may be discharged at terminal ports when no passengers are on board the ship. Crude petroleum carried and discharged under these conditions will not be considered stores or cargo within the contemplation of section 4472 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (U. S. C., title 46, sec. 170), and will be considered as only for use as fuel within the contemplation of section 4417a (1) of the Revised Statutes, as amended (U. S. C., title 46, sec. 391a (1))."

AMENDMENT OF TITLE 14, UNITED STATES CODE, ENTITLED "COAST GUARD"

The Senate proceeded to the consideration of bill (H. R. 8617) to amend title 14, United States Code, entitled "Coast Guard."

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, I should like to ask the sponsor of the bill whether the bill is merely an amendment, or is it a revision?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. An explanation is desired. The Senator from Colorado [Mr. JOHNSON] is recognized.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. Mr. President, in explanation of this bill, I will say that the areas of conflict between the two acts have now been delineated. The purpose of the bill is to amend title XIV so as to bring it into agreement with the career compensation act which was clearly intended to supersede all other statutes relating to military pay and the retirement of military personnel by reason of disability. The Comptroller General of the United States advised the committee that the bill may result in savings rather than additional expenditure.

Does the Senator have specific questions?

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I am waiting for the Senator to finish his explanation. I have no objection, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the third reading and passage of the bill.

The bill (H. R. 8617) was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

POLICING OF BUILDINGS AND GROUNDS OF LIBRARY OF CONGRESS

The bill (H. R. 8958) relating to the policing of the buildings and grounds of the Library of Congress was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RESOLUTION PASSED OVER

The resolution (S. Res. 291) to investigate the causes of gasoline price increases during the past 5 years and whether supplemental antitrust legislation is needed, was announced as next in order.

Mr. McFARLAND. Mr. President, on behalf of the senior Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER], I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard. The bill will be passed over.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Maurer, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6073) to amend section 501 (b) (6) of the Internal Revenue Code.

BALTIMORE-WASHINGTON PARKWAY

The bill (H. R. 5990) to provide for the construction, development, administration, and maintenance of the Baltimore-Washington Parkway in the State of Maryland and its extension into the District of Columbia as a part of the park system of the District of Columbia and its environs by the Secretary of the Interior, and other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Mr. President, I understand roughly $14,000,000 is involved in this measure. May we have an explanation of it?

Mr. McCLELLAN. Mr. President, I will make a brief explanation, and then I should like to have the junior Senator from Maryland [Mr. O'CONOR] comment upon it.

The Committee on Public Works heard the testimony. It appears that in 1942 there was allocated $2,000,000 to the Bureau of Public Roads for construction of a limited access highway between the District of Columbia and Fort Meade, to serve that installation and other Government facilities and reservations along the route, a distance of about 14 miles. The funds allocated have been expended for acquiring the rights-of-way required on other than Government-owned land, and for grading operations on certain portions of the parkway.

The parkway is to be extended from Fort Meade to Baltimore, a distance of 12.5 miles, by the State of Maryland, which has awarded contracts for construction of 7.2 miles of this reach. This section is being undertaken as a Federal-aid project. That is the part which Maryland is constructing. Maryland is constructing her part of this highway from Baltimore to Fort Meade.

The present Baltimore Boulevard is crowded beyond its maximum safe capacity. Numerous traffic accidents occur on it.

I should like Senators to bear in mind that this is primarily in large measure a military project to serve the Fort Meade installation and to serve also one of the largest airports, I think, in the Nation, which was recently constructed in that vicinity. It is an airport. The camp there is a facility which is vital to the defense of the National Capital.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCLELLAN. I am glad to yield. I am glad to see the senior Senator from Maryland on the floor. He is most anxious about this project. I know he can make a better explanation of the bill than can I and point out the very important reasons, as he convinced the committee, why the bill should be enacted. I am glad to yield to the senior Senator from Maryland.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I simply wish to say to the Senator from Arkansas and for the information of the Senate that the Friendship Airport, which lies between Washington and Baltimore, is perhaps the most modern airport in America. It is about three or four times as large as the LaGuardia Airfield in New York. It is several times larger than the Capital airfield here in Washington. The runway of the main take-off is two or three hundred feet wide and about 2 miles long. There are no obstructions around this airport of any kind in the form of buildings, towers, high-tension wires, or what not. It is built on top of a plateau.

I do not think I am disclosing any secrets when I say that in the event of war between the United States and any foreign power that airport would be the most important airport in America for the defense of the Nation's Capital. It will take any plane that is now in existence, that is now being built, or that is now on the drawing boards. It was built for that purpose, so as not only to serve present and reasonably future needs but to serve the needs of any plane that is now conceivable.

In the event of an attack on the Capital, which is not an improbability, and I remind the Senate that we did not think an attack on Korea was a probability not long ago, or in the event of war, this airfield will be taken over by the Army, and will be the major defense of the Capital of the United States.

Many Senators have introduced bills to move the Capital of the United States during wartime. I think some work is being done on that particular objective, which has not been fully discussed on the floor of the Senate for obvious reasons. But so long as the Capital remains here, the attack must come in this direction. So, along with the other reasons why this access road should be built there is the additional reason that the life of the Capital may depend largely on the efficiency of this airport.

Senators may smile and laugh about it, just as they smiled and laughed about the wind tunnel bill I was trying to get through the Senate a year ago, and the bill relating to the Central Intelligence Agency, and bills with respect to many other things that did not look like they had applicability, at the time. But we live and learn that this is a very fast-moving world. I say to the Senate, and I think I can say it with the backing of every military man of consequence in Washington, that this airport, Friendship Airport, lying between Washington and Baltimore, the most modern airport in America, and for which the city of Baltimore has bonded itself and spent an enormous amount of money, is in the nature of things the most important airport to the defense of the Capital that we have.

This road will be used to supply that airport with gasoline and other fuel. In addition, the road will take care of any planes which may have to land and which may not be able to land or be accommodated at the airfield at Washington.

If there are other questions, I shall be glad to have them asked.

Mr. O'CONOR. Mr. President, let me ask whether it is not a fact that, in addition to the important considerations my colleague has advanced, there is also the important consideration in respect to the enhancement of the value of property presently owned by the Federal Government, such as that at Greenbelt and elsewhere; and that by reason of the construction of the most desirable type of road, with access roads, lanes, and so forth, there will actually be enhancement of the value of property now owned by the Federal Government. Does not the Senator agree as to that?

Mr. TYDINGS. There can be no question about that, Mr. President. The highway runs through one Federal reservation after another—including Greenbelt, and Fort Meade, which is one of the largest military reservations in the country.

Mr. President, I should like to say that if the United States should ever be at war with a major power and if the atomic bomb should be brought into play, this airfield would be the interceptor field. There can be no question about that. In such case, we would crowd that field with all the interceptor planes we could get, and we would thank God that the field was there, if we should become involved in a major war in which the atomic bomb is thrown around. Then we shall thank our lucky stars for having the airfield constructed and available. Let there be no misunderstanding as to that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator from Maryland has expired.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the time of the Senator from Maryland may be extended for an additional 3 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered; and the Senator from Maryland may proceed.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, will the Senator give us an approximate idea of the cost?

Mr. TYDINGS. I would rather have the Senator from Arkansas answer that question. My impression is that the cost will be $3,000,000 each year for 2 years.

Mr. McCLELLAN. No, that is not correct. The cost to the State of Maryland for the part of the project it is building from Baltimore toward Washington will be $14,685,000.

Mr. TYDINGS. That is correct.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Maryland has already completed a large portion of that highway, and has contracted for the remainder, as I recall.

The part to be built by the Federal Government will cost $13,000,000.

In connection with the Federal-aid highway bill, which the Public Works Committee has reported, in the committee we gave consideration to this measure, and in that bill we have authorized for the next 2 years an expenditure of $3,000,000 each year, with a provision that, if needed, the second year's authorization may be stepped up and obligations may be made against it during this year, because we felt that this project is of vital importance as a military highway. It is to be built primarily for the purpose of serving Camp Meade and to provide access to the new airport. All of us know the crowded conditions at the present time. Obviously a new highway must be constructed at some time. We think that delay in handling this matter might be most regrettable, to say the least.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, does the Senator know how many miles of the highway the Government will build?

Mr. McCLELLAN. The mileage from Baltimore to that point is 12.5. That is the part the State of Maryland is constructing.

The distance from Washington to that point is 19 miles, in total.

Mr. LANGER. In other words, the highway will cost approximately $1,000,000 a mile; is that correct?

Mr. TYDINGS. Seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars a mile.

Mr. LANGER. Is not that a terrific price per mile?

Mr. McCLELLAN. I agree with the Senator from North Dakota; but in the United States there are many urban or suburban areas where construction of a highway costs more than that.

Mr. LANGER. This highway is to be built over level country, is it not?

Mr. TYDINGS. No; it is rolling country.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Mr. President, I am not prepared to challenge the estimates of the engineers, of course. However, this highway is to have four lanes, as I understand, and is to be built in such a way as to be adequate to meet the requirements over a considerable period of time. While we are constructing it, we might as well build it in that way.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator from Arkansas has expired.

Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill (H. R. 5990) to provide for the construction, development, administration, and maintenance of the Baltimore-Washington Parkway in the State of Maryland and its extension into the District of Columbia as a part of the park system of the District of Columbia and its environs by the Secretary of the Interior, and other purposes, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

INTERSTATE PACT BETWEEN MISSOURI AND ILLINOIS

The Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 174) granting the consent of Congress to the entry, by the State of Missouri and by the State of Illinois, into a compact or agreement between the State of Missouri and the State of Illinois creating the Bi-State Development Agency and the Bi-State Metropolitan District, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment on page 8, line 2, after the word "thereof", to insert:

And provided further, That no power or powers shall be exercised by the Bi-State Agency under that certain portion of article III of such compact which reads:

"8. To exercise such additional powers as shall be conferred on it by the legislature of either State concurred in by the legislature of the other or by act of Congress."

unless and until such power or powers shall have been conferred upon the Bi-State Agency by the legislature of one of the States to the compact and concurred in by the legislature of the other and shall have been approved by an act of Congress.

So as to make the joint resolution read:

Resolved, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby given to the entry, by the State of Missouri and by the State of Illinois, into the compact or agreement set forth above, and to said compact or agreement and to each and every term and provision thereof: Provided, That any obligations issued and outstanding, including the income derived therefrom, under the terms of the compact or agreement, and any amendments thereto, shall be subject to the tax laws of the United States: And provided further, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to affect, impair, or diminish any right, power, or jurisdiction of the United States or of any court, department, board, bureau, officer, or official of the United States, in, over, or in regard to the territory which is embraced in the district created by the aforesaid compact or agreement or any navigable waters, or any commerce between the States or with foreign countries, or any bridge, railroad, highway, pier, wharf, or other facility or improvement, or any other person, matter, or thing, forming the subject matter of the aforesaid compact or agreement; or otherwise affected by the terms thereof: And provided further, That no power or powers shall be exercised by the Bi-State Agency under that certain portion of article III of such compact which reads:

"8. To exercise such additional powers as shall be conferred on it by the legislature of either State concurred in by the legislature of the other or by act of Congress."

unless and until such power or powers shall have been conferred upon the Bi-State Agency by the legislature of one of the States to the compact and concurred in by the legislature of the other and shall have been approved by an act of Congress: And provided further, That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this resolution is hereby expressly reserved.

The amendment was agreed to.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

ACQUISITION OF OLD STONE HOUSE IN DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA—BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (H. R. 7722) to provide for the acquisition and preservation, as a part of the National Capital Parks system, of the Old Stone House in the District of Columbia, was announced as next in order.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. By request, I ask that the bill be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I wonder if there is anything in the bill which the Senator from Kansas has asked to have passed over which the Senator who wishes to have the bill passed over would wish amended.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. The Senator who asked me to request that the bill go over is not now on the floor of the Senate.

Mr. WHERRY. Will the Senator from Kansas agree to have the bill placed at the foot of the calendar?

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Yes.

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, do I correctly understand that the request is that the bill be placed at the foot of the calendar?

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. The Senator from Nebraska has made that request, and I accede to it.

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, I hope very much the bill may be considered at this time. It comes on the calendar by unanimous consent of the Public Works Committee. The bill has to do with the most ancient standing structure in the entire city of Washington, a structure of great historic value.

I shall not go into detail about the matter at this time, but I wish to say that I sincerely hope that the Senator who objects to consideration of the bill, and who may have questions to ask about it, will be on hand so that we can discuss this measure and, I very much hope, pass it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. What is the request?

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, under the objection which I have lodged, let me say that I have no objection at this time to having the bill passed over and go to the foot of the calendar today.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request that the bill be placed at the foot of the calendar?

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I do object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. HICKENLOOPER. Mr. President, was objection made?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Yes.

Mr. HICKENLOOPER. I wonder whether the Senator will withhold his objection until I can ask what building is involved in this connection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senator withhold his objection?

Mr. LANGER. I withhold the objection temporarily.

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, this is a building known as the Old Stone House, on M Street and Jefferson Street, in old Georgetown, less than a block from the Georgetown Canal, and in the block joining that in which is located the old Masonic Lodge.

This house is, authentically, the oldest building in the District of Columbia. There is tremendous interest in it, and tremendous support of the effort to have it become a museum and handled as an historic monument.

Mr. HICKENLOOPER. I should like to ask a further question: How much is it proposed that the Government pay for the building?

Mr. HOLLAND. The bill as it came from the House contained a limitation of $90,000. The Senate committee actually would have substituted for the House bill the Senate bill, which contains no such limitation. However, the committee requested the advice of the attorney of the Department of Justice on this point, and received from him assurance that under the type of condemnation which would be employed, there would be no declaration of price in connection with the taking, but the matter of the value would be passed on by the condemnation jury, before there would be any actual taking.

Mr. HICKENLOOPER. Mr. President, further reserving the right to object, or speaking further, under the temporary withholding of the objection by the Senator from North Dakota, I ask the Senator from Florida whether the amount proposed in the House bill contemplated the cost of remodeling or putting this property into proper condition.

Mr. HOLLAND. The amount placed in the House bill was simply an over-all limitation of $90,000, and I do not know upon what basis the House arrived at that amount. It is not the judgment of the Senator from Florida that that would be sufficient to acquire the property and also to do the necessary remodeling.

I may say, however, to the Senator, that the exterior of the building is reported to be as originally constructed, that much of the interior is still in its original shape, and that there is much documentation from authentic historic sources to show that it is an original building, built in pre-Revolutionary days and associated with many historic incidents.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Let the Chair observe that there are a large number of bills on the calendar, and that many Senators awaiting at least a chance to have them considered. The Chair feels that we should follow the rules rigidly.

Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. LANGER. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard, and the bill will be passed over.

CONTINUATION OF CONSTRUCTION OF HIGHWAYS UNDER FEDERAL-AID ROAD ACT—BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (H. R. 7941) to amend and supplement the Federal-Aid Road Act, approved July 11, 1916 (39 Stat. 355), as amended and supplemented, to authorize appropriations for continuing the construction of highways, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. LODGE. Over.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Mr. President, with reference to House bill 7941, as indicated on the calendar, it is the regular Federal-aid highway-authorization bill. I did not of course expect that it should be passed today by unanimous consent, but it is important, if we are to have a Federal-aid highway program after this year, that this bill be enacted during the present session of the Congress.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for an inquiry?

Mr. McCLELLAN. Yes.

Mr. DONNELL. I understand there was objection to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. McCLELLAN. There was objection.

Mr. DONNELL. But I should like to address an inquiry to the Senator so that it may be considered. Doubtless it has already been considered by the Senator, but I should like at least to address an inquiry to the Senator in connection with the matter.

I refer to page 13 of the committee amendment where, on the subject of local rural roads, or county roads, it is stated that—

> The projects for construction shall be selected by the State highway departments and by the appropriate local officials with respect to their areas in cooperation with each other.

The query I present to the Senator is whether the committee deems it advisable to leave this to joint selection between the State highway departments and the appropriate local officials. The points which occur to me are, first, the possible danger that in the event of the local officials having a determinative power, certain local interests might enter into it, by reason of which it might not be advisable. In the second place, the bill contains no provision for the contingency of the conflict of opinion as between the State highway department and the appropriate local officials.

I am wondering whether the Senator would consider whether or not the bill should be amended by a proviso that, in the event of conflict of opinion between the State highway department and the appropriate local officials, the opinion of the State highway department shall prevail. That is the question I should like to have the Senator consider.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Mr. President, I merely wish to make a brief observation in answer to the question of the able Senator from Missouri. We must bear in mind that in this bill we are undertaking to channel money further into the secondary road system. There has been a great deal of complaint that the money provided does not spread out far enough or reach into what we call the country roads and the rural roads and enable actual farm-to-market roads and access roads to be constructed. Heretofore the work has all been done by the State highway officials. This is an effort to require the consultation with the counties and with the local officials in order to develop the plans for the expenditure of the money in the development of projects. Of course, as I have said, I did not expect the bill to be passed by unanimous consent, but there are certain problems involved and certain provisions in the bill which merit study. I can appreciate that there is a measure of departure with respect to the secondary road system, from past legislation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Let the Chair observe that objection has been made to the present consideration of this bill. It is not before the Senate. The bill will go over. The clerk will state the next business on the calendar. If any Senator wishes to speak on the bill, he may then do so. Let the clerk state the next bill.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I objected to this bill's being considered by unanimous consent, because with my colleague and certain other Senators, I intend to offer some amendments to it at the proper time, because of the feeling which I have that there are certain features of the bill which militate against attempts to solve traffic congestion in our great metropolitan centers.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Very well. Objection is heard, and the bill will go over.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, in connection with this bill, I merely wish to associate myself with the remarks of the Senator from Massachusetts. I feel exactly as he does about the bill.

JEANNETTE PASSAYANNI-COPODISTRIA

The bill (H. R. 4601) for the relief of Jeannette Passayanni-Copodistria was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EXAMINATION FOR FLOOD CONTROL OF LAS VEGAS WASH, NEV.

The bill (S. 3898) to authorize a preliminary examination and survey for flood-control and allied purposes of Las Vegas Wash and its tributaries, Las Vegas, Nev., and vicinity, was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. HENDRICKSON. By request, I ask that the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

Mr. MALONE. Mr. President, does the Senator have detailed objections to the bill?

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I withdraw the objection to the bill, for the purpose of an explanation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is withdrawn.

Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. WHERRY. Did the distinguished Senator from New Jersey withhold his objection temporarily or permanently?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator withdrew his objection.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I withdrew my objection, in order that we might have an explanation. I have not heard the explanation.

Mr. MALONE. I should simply like to say that there is a dangerous flood condition in the Las Vegas area, resulting from flash floods from cloudbursts. The authorization for the survey is merely for a routine preliminary survey, with no appropriation whatever requested by the Army engineers. It would be reported upon later, and, if requested, the matter would then come before the Public Works Committee.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I thank the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill (S. 3898) to authorize a preliminary examination and survey for flood-control and allied purposes of Las Vegas Wash and its tributaries, Las Vegas, Nev., and vicinity, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 3873) to amend the Hatch Act, was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. HENDRICKSON. By request, I ask that this bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

OFFICE OF CIVIL DEFENSE, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

The bill (H. R. 8909) to authorize the District of Columbia government to establish an Office of Civil Defense, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, the junior Senator from Nebraska has no objection to the immediate consideration of this bill. I think a bill for the defense of the District of Columbia is mandatory. I do say, however, with all due respect to the distinguished Senator from Wyoming, that I do not feel that this bill has had proper consideration. I feel that it has been rushed in order to get it ready for the civilian defense that is needed.

If the distinguished Senator will permit, I have at least three amendments I should like to offer. Personally, I prefer, if the Senator will agree, to ask unanimous consent that the bill go back to the committee, and present the amendments there. However, if the Senator feels that the bill can be passed on the floor, I have no objection to its immediate consideration, but I should like to offer certain amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. HUNT. Mr. President, I may say to the distinguished Senator that the chairman of the subcommittee, the junior Senator from Wyoming, has no objections to the offering of amendments. There is, however, a feeling of great urgency for the passage of this bill. I think we should consider the bill now.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The offering of amendments is in order.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I desire to submit an amendment. On page 2 of the bill there is a provision for establishing a director and a staff. The director is given a great deal of power. In fact, on the floor of the House it was thought that the director would have power equal, if not superior, to that of the military. The establishment of the program will require money, and the director and his staff will require salaries.

I offer the amendment which I send to the desk and ask to have stated. I hope that the chairman of the committee will consider accepting it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 3, line 22, it is proposed to insert "in accordance with civil service laws and regulations."

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, my purpose in offering the amendment is to assure that if there is to be a paid staff as provided for in the bill, the members of the staff shall have the ability which is required under civil service standards. The bill provides that the compensation shall be fixed without reference to the Classification Act of 1949. I feel that the salaries should come within the act of 1939. I should like to make it clear that the amendment does not apply to the voluntary help. It applies only to the staff which is to be established, with a director to prepare the plans, and possibly an engineer to carry them out. It seems to me they should come under the requirements of the Civil Service Act, and should come within the provisions of the Classification Act, so far as salaries are concerned. They certainly should not be overpaid, but should be paid what is fair.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, I ask that the bill be passed over.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator withhold his request, so that I may send to the desk two other amendments?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Let the amendments be filed.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment which would require the staff members to be investigated by the FBI. The third amendment would require the staff to report to the Congress of the United States as to their activities. I think if those amendments are added to the bill the Senate might approve it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendments will be received.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, I should like to have the bill go over, because I do not know what the implications of the amendments may be.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard, and the bill will be passed over.

Mr. HUNT. Mr. President, there are some provisions of the amendments which I think we would be glad to accept. Many of the things which the Senator from Nebraska has in mind are already taken care of. I agree with him wholeheartedly. I should like to say that there is already an arrangement whereby the Commissioners of the District of Columbia will select personnel from the civil service register. That is an understanding in writing between the Commissioners and the Civil Service Commission, and it is now in force and effect. It is expected that that procedure will be followed.

I should like to say with reference to the loyalty check which has been suggested, that I shall be only to happy to have the bill amended so that all employees will come under such a check. Most certainly that should be done. I can accept the amendments offered by the distinguished Senator from Nebraska, and I have an amendment which I should like to have accepted, so that if we can be in agreement, the bill will be behind us.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection has been heard, and has not been withdrawn. The Chair will have to rule that the bill go over.

Mr. HUNT. Mr. President, will the Senator withdraw his objection?

Mr. CHAVEZ. Not at the moment.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, would the Senator from New Mexico permit the bill to go to the foot of the calendar, with the thought that we might confer with the Senator?

Mr. CHAVEZ. I appreciate the significance of the bill and the urgency of getting a bill of this type passed, but I do not like to have such as bill as this passed in a moment, with all due respect to the chairman of the committee. I think I should be willing to have it placed at the end of the calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico withdraws his objection and asks that the bill be carried to the foot of the calendar. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Clerk will call the next bill on the calendar.

FRED P. HINES

The bill (S. 2618) for the relief of Fred P. Hines was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money available for the payment of compensation and allowances to veterans, to Fred P. Hines ([redacted], of Minot, N. Dak., the sum of $718.78, representing the amount necessary to pay private medical and hospital expenses incurred by him incident to an emergency operation when his physical condition was such that he could not be removed to a Veterans' Administration hospital: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

AMENDMENT OF WAR CLAIMS ACT OF 1948

The bill (S. 3000) to amend the War Claims Act of 1948, as amended, was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, may we have a brief explanation of the bill?

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. President, this is a bill which seeks to correct what we think is an unintentional error in the handling of claims of prisoners of war, principally those who died in the Philippines. It so happens that most of the men who reached the Philippines early were from National Guard units, and those young men did not have dependent parents. A great proportion of the young men were not married. The bill provides one dollar a day pay for each day they were held prisoners of the Japanese, and adequate food was not furnished them. All the bill does is to strike out "dependents" and to provide that a dollar a day shall be given to the parents of the boys. There were 13,000 American prisoners of war who died in the Philippines, and approximately 30,000 Filipinoes. Nearly all the Filipinoes are able to prove dependency, but, since the American prisoners of war lost their records, dependency was not proved because they were not able to remit anything to their parents. If they had had a chance to send out mail they would have been able to send money to their parents, and dependency could be proved. There is a letter from the War Claims Commission showing that fact.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill (S. 3000) to amend the War Claims Act of 1948, as amended, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 6 of the War Claims Act of 1948 (Public Law 896, 80th Cong., 62 Stat. 1240), as amended, be amended by striking therefrom part 4 of subsection (c) and inserting in lieu thereof: "(4) Parents (in equal shares) if there is no widow, dependent husband, or child."

WAR CONTRACT HARDSHIP CLAIMS

The bill (S. 3906) to amend the War Contractors Relief Act with respect to the definition of a request for relief, to authorize consideration and settlement of certain claims of subcontractors to provide reasonable compensation for the services of partners and proprietors and for other purposes was announced as next in order.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, may we have an explanation of the bill? I understand it is an amendment to the so-called Lucas Act, which was vetoed by the President. Will the distinguished Senator from Nevada tell us approximately what this measure would cost if it should be enacted into law?

Mr. McCARRAN. Senators may remember I put in the RECORD, at the time I introduced this bill, a lengthy statement concerning it. The background of the bill is this: Earlier in the present session, Congress passed a bill (H. R. 3436) designed to amend the War Contractors Relief Act, commonly referred to as the Lucas Act. The President vetoed that bill, and in his veto message he stated the grounds for the veto, and outlined the seven points which he said he would be willing to approve. This bill was drafted to conform to the President's expressions. It does exactly what the President said he would approve. In order to be frank with Senators, I think I should say that this bill also does everything that the previous bill, which was vetoed, would have done, except to provide for the payment of interest on money borrowed in the performance of war contracts. That was a point the President said he would not approve, and so it has been eliminated from this bill. In my judgment, if the bill should be amended so as to provide for the payment of such interest, the President would probably veto it.

The broad purpose of this bill is the same as the broad purpose of the bill which was vetoed, namely, to effectuate the original intent of the Congress in passing the Lucas Act and provide relief to a number of war contractors who suffered loss or damage without fault or negligence on their own part. It is meritorious legislation and should be passed. In the form in which it comes to the Congress, it contains all the provisions which the President has said he would approve, and no other provisions. I hope it may be passed speedily so that there will be time for House action before adjournment.

Mr. McFARLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. McFARLAND. As the Senator from Nevada will recall, when this bill was introduced the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LUCAS] expressed his keen interest in it and his willingness to secure its passage. He has asked that I state on his behalf that he hopes very much action may be taken on the bill today.

Mr. McCARRAN. That is correct. I hope the bill may now be passed because I feel from the veto message of the President he will approve this bill.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Mr. President, I ask the distinguished Senator this further question: Does the Senator think it will give adequate protection to the small contractors who have heretofore been the ones who have suffered?

Mr. McCARRAN. In my opinion, it will give them as adequate protection as legislation of this kind can afford.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill (S. 3906) to amend the War Contractors Relief Act with respect to the definition of a request for relief, to authorize consideration and settlement of certain claims of subcontractors to provide reasonable compensation for the services of partners and proprietors and for other purposes was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act of August 7, 1946 (Public Law No. 657, 79th Cong., ch. 864, 60 Stat. 902), as amended (sec. 37 of the act of June 25, 1948, ch. 646, 62 Stat. 869, 992), is hereby amended by adding the following section thereto:

"SEC. 7. Within the limitations stated in this act and no others—

"(1) for the purposes of this section and except as otherwise provided by paragraph (5) hereof, all departments, agencies, or the heads or duly designated representatives thereof authorized to consider, adjust, and settle claims under this act are hereby directed, on request filed not more than 60 days after the effective date of this section and after affording claimants reasonable opportunity to amend or supplement their claims, to reconsider claims heretofore filed in accordance with the provisions of this act and rejected or disallowed in whole or part;

"(2) notwithstanding anything in section 3 of this act with reference to the necessity of a request for relief filed on or before August 14, 1945, claims otherwise payable under this act shall be allowed to the extent that they include losses with respect to which in a writing submitted to a department or agency concerned on or before August 14, 1945, the claimant (a) requested relief available under the First War Powers Act, (b) demanded payment thereof, or (c) gave notice of such sustained or impending loss; but nothing in this paragraph shall be taken to limit or exclude other requests for relief otherwise sufficient under section 3 of this act;

"(3) claims otherwise payable under this act as amended shall include those of subcontractors on the same basis as the claims of prime contractors if the request for relief, demand for payment, or notice of sustained or impending loss required by section 3 of this act or defined by paragraph (2) of this section was submitted in writing by such claimants on or before August 14, 1945, to either (a) a department or agency concerned or (b) the prime contractor or other subcontractor involved;

"(4) claims otherwise allowable under this act as amended shall include reasonable compensation for the services of working partners and proprietors of unincorporated claimants during the period of performance of the contracts or subcontracts involved;

"(5) the jurisdiction of courts over suits now pending under this act is hereby preserved and, notwithstanding paragraph (1) of this section, no plaintiff in such action shall be required either to present his claim again to the department or agency concerned or to begin his action in court anew; but nothing in this act or amendment shall prevent any department or agency, in agreement with the plaintiff claimant, from reconsidering any claim for the purpose of paying it or entering into an agreement for the compromise or settlement of the whole or any part thereof and, to the extent that hereafter such payments are made or such settlements are executed pursuant to any such agreement, court actions shall thereupon be limited accordingly or dismissed as the case may be;

"(6) where necessary to effectuate the purposes of this section the court in any case heretofore filed under this act shall, upon motion filed by the plaintiff not more than 60 days after the effective date of this section, (a) permit the plaintiff to amend his claim or pleadings, (b) vacate any adverse judgment or ruling, or (c) revive the action; but nothing in this paragraph shall be deemed to require any plaintiff to seek any such action where it is unnecessary for the preservation of his rights under this act and section in accordance with the existing practice, procedure, or course of judicial proceedings; and

"(7) as used in this act, as amended, the term 'contractors', 'subcontractors', and 'materialmen' include individuals, partnerships, joint ventures, business associations, and corporations and mean with respect to partnerships, joint ventures, or business associations, the partnerships, joint ventures, or business associations themselves, and not the individual members thereof."

The bill (H. R. 2851) for the relief of Carl L. Sexauer was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMENDMENT OF SECTION 34 OF THE TRADING WITH THE ENEMY ACT

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 3901) amending section 34 of the Trading With the Enemy Act of October 6, 1917 (40 Stat. 411), as amended, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 34 of the Trading With the Enemy Act of October 6, 1917 (40 Stat. 411), as amended, is hereby further amended by adding at the end thereof the following subsection:

"(j) If the property or interest vested in or transferred to the Alien Property Custodian was owned, either directly or beneficially, immediately prior to such vesting or transfer, by an ineligible corporation, or other business association, then after final disposition of the debt claims described in subsection (g) hereof the Custodian shall pay out of the remaining balance, if any, of the money from which in accordance with subsection (d) hereof payment of debt claims may be made, claims based on ownership by eligible owners of less than all of the common or preferred stock of such ineligible corporation or of less than the entire proprietary and beneficial interest in such ineligible association. For the purpose of this section a claim based on such ownership shall be treated as a debt claim, except that the time for filing such claim shall expire 2 years from the date of the last vesting in or transfer to the Custodian of any property or interest of an ineligible corporation or association in which there is such ownership, or from the date of the enactment of this subsection, whichever is later.

"Such remaining balance shall be equitably applied by the Custodian to such claims of eligible owners taking into consideration the nature, preferred or common, of the claim of each such owner. The amounts payable on such claims shall be based on the proportionate stock or proprietary and beneficial interest of each eligible owner and in the case of an eligible owner of common or capital stock or an interest in the nature thereof shall equal that proportion of the vested assets remaining after taking into account claims otherwise payable under this act (including claims of creditors otherwise payable under this section and claims of a preferred nature of eligible owners payable under this subsection) which corresponds to such owner's proportionate common or capital stock interest or proprietary and beneficial interest in the nature thereof in such corporation or association: Provided, however, That this subsection shall not be deemed to require payment of any claim otherwise payable pursuant to any international agreement.

"For the purposes of this subsection 'ineligible corporation or association' means a corporation or association which is determined to be ineligible for return of vested property pursuant to section 32 of this act, and 'eligible owner' means the owner of any part of the stock of an enemy corporation or of any part of the proprietary and beneficial interest in an enemy association, or the legal representative or successor in interest by inheritance, devise, bequest, or operation of law of such owner, if such ownership of such stock or proprietary and beneficial interest existed immediately prior to vesting in or transfer to the Alien Property Custodian and continuously thereafter to the date of payment pursuant to this subsection (without regard to purported divestments or limitations of such ownership by the Government of Germany, Japan, Bulgaria, Hungary, or Rumania) and if such owner and his legal representative or successor in interest, if any, are persons, corporations, or associations determined to be eligible for return of vested property under section 32 of this act."

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask that it be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 3, lines 15 and 17, it is proposed to strike out the word "enemy" and to insert in lieu thereof the word "ineligible."

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of the amendment?

Mr. McCARRAN. The purpose of the amendment is to clarify the bill, by the use of the word "ineligible," which by virtue of the definition in the same paragraph becomes a word of art.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. It is merely a technical amendment.

Mr. McCARRAN. That is correct.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Nevada.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK IN RICHMOND, CALIF.

The bill (H. R. 6198) for the relief of the First National Bank in Richmond, Calif., was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, I believe this bill requires an explanation.

Mr. McCARRAN. The War Department entered into a guaranty agreement with the claimant under which the War Department agreed to bear 90 percent of all losses on a loan made by the bank to one R. J. Minton Construction Co. and also to assume the same proportion of all expenses incurred by the bank after default in the enforcement of such loan. The borrowers defaulted, and the surety companies which had been obliged to pay claimed for labor and material while in suit against the bank. Judgment was entered in the sum of $51,964, together with interest of 70 percent. By June 1949 the accrued interest amounted to approximately $21,000, raising the judgment to $73,000. Under the terms of the compromise agreement, surety companies accepted $50,000 in full satisfaction of their judgment, $27,000 being paid by the War Department. Attorneys' fees and total losses and expenses on the loan actually brought the total to $60,000. The purpose of this bill is to pay the difference between the $27,000 paid by the War Department and the 90 percent under the original guaranty.

The Board of Governors, Federal Reserve System, believe that the bill is meritorious, and the Department of the Army has no objection to the passage of the bill.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, may I ask the distinguished Senator if the bank is profiting at all under the proposed legislation?

Mr. McCARRAN. No. So far as we understand, the bank is still the loser.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

The concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 187) favoring the granting of status of permanent residence to certain aliens was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, this is a concurrent resolution relating to the adjustment of status of certain aliens. The resolution contains 11 names. Three of them were names referred to the Congress by the Attorney General on February 1, 1950; seven were referred to the Congress on March 1, 1950; and one case was referred to the Congress on April 14, 1950. The committee has satisfied itself that all of those named in the resolution are eligible under the law and are worthy cases.

For the information of the Senate, I may say that this is not the same type of resolution as the suspension of deportation cases which we have been handling right along during the present Congress. These are cases of adjustment of status under the Displaced Persons Act. Senators will note this resolution originated in the House of Representatives. Under an arrangement worked out with the House committee, the House will hereafter originate resolutions with respect to cases in this category, that is, adjustments of status under the displaced-persons law, while the Senate committee will continue to originate resolutions with regard to suspensions of deportation under the general immigration laws.

The Senate proceeded to consider the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 181) favoring the grant of status of permanent residence to certain aliens, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with amendments, on page 1, after line 9, to insert "[redacted], Fortunescu, Radu Constantine"; on page 2, after line 1, to insert: "[redacted], Gyarfas, John Erving"; on page 2, after line 6, to insert: "[redacted], Lazlo, Ervin; [redacted], Lazlo, Mary"; and on page 2, after line 9, to insert: "[redacted], Marinescu, Mihail or Mihai Z. Marinescu."

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, this is another resolution concerning the adjustment of status of certain aliens, under the Displaced Persons Act. The Senate committee has amended the resolution by adding five names. These are all names which have been submitted by the Attorney General since the resolution was acted upon by the House, and which the House committee, as well as the Senate committee, desires to have added to the list.

Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment which I desire to offer to the concurrent resolution.

The amendment adds one name to the concurrent resolution. The alien whose name would be added represents a case which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary subsequent to the approval by the committee of House Concurrent Resolution 181. It is not contemplated that the committee will process any more of the suspension cases during this Congress. The case which will be added to the concurrent resolution, pursuant to the amendment, has been carefully checked and meets all of the requirements of the law. The reason for the amendment, which in effect advances the case out of order, is that the alien has, for a considerable period of time, been separated from his wife and two small children, who are temporarily residing in Paris. The inclusion of his case in the concurrent resolution will enable him to procure a reentry permit, so that he may visit his wife and children in Paris, and thereafter be readmitted into the United States.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 2, immediately following line 3, it is proposed to insert:

[redacted], Hasek, Joseph Karel alias Joseph Karel Jisa.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. Mr. President, I have a similar amendment to offer. It has to do with a college student, Lidia Maria Forostyna.

Lidia is the young college student, a displaced person, from Poland. She and her family escaped to Danzig and thence to Sweden. She obtained a student visa, and has been in the United States 2½ years, all that time as a college student. She is an accomplished pianist, and speaks several languages. Her father was a judge in Poland, and was on the Communists' "wanted" list. This appears in the Department of Justice report requesting that she be included in a resolution of the type that is now pending. The request reached the Senate after the committee had already reported the last resolution of the session, hence the necessity for the amendment. It will save her possibly 2 years. Lidia's father and mother are in Argentina, where the father does translating and teaches languages. Her mother has been desperately ill, and Lidia would like to file her declaration of intention to become a citizen as soon as this resolution is adopted; then go for a few weeks to visit her parents, and return to continue her college work. She needs 1½ or 2 years more of study before getting her degree. This young lady cannot go to Argentina to see her desperately ill mother until some such provision is enacted.

Mr. President, as I have stated, this young lady is a displaced person. Fifteen thousand displaced persons are permitted to come into the United States. This would not add another, and make it 15,001. She has to become part of the total. She is a fine girl, of excellent character. She is receiving a good education. As I have said, she is a talented pianist, and speaks several languages.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, the Senator from Colorado knows, as I know, that we would like to make progress so far as the philosophy of citizenship is concerned. Does the Senator from Colorado feel that this young lady would fit into our scheme of things, so far as American concepts of government are concerned?

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. I believe it would be of extreme advantage to the United States to admit a girl like this one. We are admitting displaced persons, and as to many of them I lack faith to believe they would fit into our scheme of things. I wish all the displaced persons had half the qualifications this young lady possesses.

Mr. CHAVEZ. The Senator from Colorado knows I am extremely liberal with respect to displaced persons and anyone who can fit into our scheme of things. If the Senator from Colorado will tell me that he is satisfied so far as this particular person is concerned, I shall be content.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. I am very happy to give the Senator full and complete assurance along that line.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment offered by the Senator from Colorado.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 1, after line 9, to insert:

[redacted], Forostyna, Lidia Maria.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. McCARRAN. As soon as I learned that an amendment was to be offered to the pending House concurrent resolution to embrace Lidia Maria Forostyna, I checked with the staff of the Immigration Subcommittee, and have been advised that the alien meets all the requirements of the displaced-persons law for adjustment of status and is otherwise qualified.

The effect of the amendment is to advance her case so that adjustment of status may become final during this session of the Congress, and thus enable her to procure a reentry permit so that she may visit other members of her family who are presently residing in South America.

Accordingly, I support the amendment of the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, I am most sympathetic with the amendment of the Senator from Colorado, and I have no objection whatsoever, but I do happen to have under consideration at this particular time the case of a Filipino girl who is situated similarly, and a bill relating to her case is pending before the committee of the Senator from Nevada. I should like at the moment to have this resolution go to end of the calendar. I do not think I shall have any objection, but at the moment I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Unanimous consent is requested that the resolution now under discussion, with all the amendments, be placed at the foot of the calendar. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The clerk will state the next order of business.

TRANSFER OF CERTAIN PROPERTY IN BOISE BARRACKS

Mr. McCLELLAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for immediate consideration of House bill 7667. The companion Senate bill was passed, and then the vote by which it was passed was reconsidered, and it went to the foot of the calendar.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, I have no objection, so far as I am concerned. I originally asked for time to study the bill. I have studied the bill. I have no objection to it.

IMPLEMENTATION OF THE TUNA CONVENTIONS—BILL PLACED AT FOOT OF CALENDAR

The bill (S. 2633) to give effect to the Convention for the Establishment of an International Commission for the Scientific Investigation of Tuna, signed at Mexico City January 25, 1940, by the United States of America and the United Mexican States, and the Convention for the Establishment of an Inter-American Tropical Tuna Commission, signed at Washington May 31, 1949, by the United States of America and the Republic of Costa Rica, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

Mr. GREEN subsequently said: Mr. President, before the next measure on the calendar is reached, I ask unanimous consent that we may return to Calendar No. 2099, Senate bill 2633.

This bill will carry into effect two international treaties, one with Mexico and one with Costa Rica. This measure is of very great importance, not to New England, from which I come, but to the Pacific Coast States. This bill has been given most careful consideration by the Foreign Relations Committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection previously was made to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. President, I think the objection has been withdrawn. Is that correct?

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, after the Senator from Rhode Island, in whose faith and sincerity of purpose and international good will I have the utmost confidence, has urged me to withdraw my objection, I do withdraw it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to returning to Senate bill 2633?

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, to do so would be a violation of the principle we have followed all afternoon. Once before, in connection with a similar matter, I objected. Therefore, I will object now. I shall not have any objection to considering this bill later, if the Senator wishes to have the bill placed at the foot of the calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. For the present, objection has been made.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, of course I do not wish to discriminate against any Senator or against a bill in which any Senator is interested.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. President, then may the bill go to the foot of the calendar? I ask unanimous consent for that purpose.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to placing at the foot of the calendar Senate bill 2633? Without objection, it is so ordered.

INTERNATIONAL BOUNDARY AND WATER COMMISSION, UNITED STATES AND MEXICO

The bill (S. 3934) to amend the act of May 13, 1924 (43 Stat. 118), as amended, relating to the United States-Mexican boundary, was announced as next in order.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Has any Senator offered an amendment to the bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No amendment has been offered to the bill.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of the bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. An explanation is desired.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, this bill amends existing law under which the International Boundary and Water Commission is constructing a dam on the Rio Grande and arranging to supply certain water from the Colorado River to Mexico. The legislation is in furtherance of our commitments under the 1944 treaty with Mexico.

The bill does three things. First, it authorizes the American section of the Boundary Commission to buy land and facilities which will be flooded when the Falcon Dam in Texas is completed. Second, it authorizes the purchase or condemnation of about 470 acres of land near Andrade, Calif., from the Imperial irrigation district. This is all right with the district and with the Senators from California. Third, the bill authorizes the Commission to do some things which have been authorized heretofore on an annual basis in the appropriations bills.

There is no opposition to the bill, and it does not authorize the appropriation of new money.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill (S. 3934) to amend the act of May 13, 1924 (43 Stat. 118), as amended, relating to the United States-Mexican boundary, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted etc., That the act of May 13, 1924 (43 Stat. 118), as amended by the public resolution of March 3, 1927 (44 Stat. 1403), the act of August 19, 1935 (49 Stat. 660), and the act of May 22, 1936 (49 Stat. 1370), is hereby further amended by adding thereto the following sections:

"SEC. 6. The Secretary of State, acting through the United States Commissioner, International Boundary and Water Commission, United States and Mexico, in connection with any project under the jurisdiction of the United States section, International Boundary and Water Commission, United States and Mexico, is authorized, (a) to purchase, or condemn, lands, or interests in lands, for relocation of highways, roadways, railroads, telegraph, telephone, or electric transmission lines, or any other properties whatsoever, the relocation of which, in the judgment of the said Commissioner, is necessitated by the construction or operation and maintenance of any such project, and to perform any or all work involved in said relocations on said lands, or interests in lands, other lands, or interests in lands, owned and held by the United States in connection with the construction or operation and maintenance of any such project, or properties not owned by the United States; (b) to enter into contracts with the owners of said properties whereby they undertake to acquire any, or all, property needed for said relocation, or to perform any, or all, work involved in said relocations; and (c) for the purpose of effecting completely said relocations, to convey, or exchange Government properties acquired or improved under clause (a) above, with or without improvements, or other properties owned and held by the United States in connection with the construction or operation and maintenance of said project, or to grant term or perpetual easements therein or thereover. Grants or conveyances hereunder shall be by instruments executed by the Secretary of State without regard to provisions of law governing the patenting of public lands.

"SEC. 7. The United States Commissioner is authorized to construct, equip, and operate and maintain all access roads, highways, railways, power lines, buildings, and facilities necessary in connection with any such project, and in his discretion to provide housing, subsistence, and medical and recreational facilities for the officers, agents, and employees of the United States, and/or for the contractors and their employees engaged in the construction, operation, and maintenance of any such project, and to make equitable charges therefor, or deductions from the salaries and wages due employees, or from progress payments due contractors, upon such terms and conditions as he may determine to be to the best interest of the United States, the sums of money so charged and collected or deducted to be credited to the appropriation for the project current at the time the obligations are incurred.

"SEC. 8. The United States Commissioner, in order to comply with the provisions of articles 12 and 23 of the treaty of February 3, 1944, between the United States and Mexico, relating to the utilization of the waters of the Colorado and Tijuana Rivers and of the Rio Grande below Fort Quitman, Tex., is authorized to acquire, in the name of the United States, by purchase or by proceedings in eminent domain, the physical properties owned by the Imperial Irrigation District of California, located in the vicinity of Andrade, Calif., consisting of the Alamo Canal in the United States, the Rockwood Intake, the Hanlon Heading, the quarry, buildings used in connection with such facilities, and appurtenant lands, and to reconstruct, operate, and maintain such properties in connection with the administration of said treaty.

"SEC. 9. Funds heretofore or hereafter appropriated to the Department of State under the heading 'International Boundary and Water Commission, United States and Mexico' or for the use of the United States Section of said Commission shall be available for construction, operation, and maintenance of stream gaging stations, and their equipment and sites therefor; personal services and rent in the District of Columbia and elsewhere; services, including those of attorneys and appraisers, in accordance with the provisions of section 15 of the act of August 2, 1946 (5 U. S. C., sec. 55a), at rates for individuals not in excess of $100 per diem, and the United States Commissioner is hereby authorized, notwithstanding the provisions of any other act, to employ as consultants, by contract or otherwise, without regard to the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, and the civil-service laws and regulations, retired personnel of the Armed Forces of the United States, who shall not be required to revert to an active status, and who shall be entitled to receive, as compensation for such temporary service, the difference between the rates of pay established therefor and their retired pay during the period or periods of such temporary employment; travel expenses, including, in the discretion of the Commissioner, expenses of attendance at meetings of organizations concerned with the activities of the International Boundary and Water Commission which may be necessary for the efficient discharge of the responsibilities of the Commission; hire, with or without personal services, of work animals, and animal-drawn and motor-propelled (including passenger) vehicles and aircraft and equipment; acquisition by donation, purchase, or condemnation, of real and personal property, including expenses of abstracts, certificates of title, and recording fees; purchase of ice and drinking water; inspection of equipment, supplies, and materials by contract or otherwise; drilling and testing of foundations and dam sites, by contract if deemed necessary; payment for official telephone service in the field in case of official telephones installed in private houses when authorized under regulations established by the Commissioner; purchase of firearms and ammunition for guard purposes; and such other objects and purposes as may be permitted by this act and other laws and treaties applicable, in whole or in part, to the United States section: Provided, That, when appropriations have been made for the commencement or continuation of construction or operation and maintenance of any project, the United States Commissioner, notwithstanding the provisions of sections 3679, 3732, and 3733 of the Revised Statutes or any other law, may enter into contracts beyond the amount actually appropriated for so much of the work on any such authorized project as the physical and orderly sequence of construction makes necessary, such contracts to be subject to and dependent upon future appropriations by Congress."

COLLECTION, ETC., OF DEMAND ITEMS BY DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA BANKS

The bill (H. R. 8055) relating to the collection, payment, and dishonor of demand items, and to the revocation of credit for, and payment of, such items, by banks in the District of Columbia was announced as next in order.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of the bill?

Mr. HUNT. Mr. President, this bill simply allows banks in the District of Columbia to post checks to individual accounts on the day following the receipt of the checks. It is similar to legislation which is in effect in about six States of the Union at the present time. The practice has been authorized by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve Board. It is approved by the American Bankers Association. It is approved and requested by the District of Columbia Bankers Association.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. HUNT. I yield.

Mr. LANGER. Can the Senator give us a concrete example of exactly how the bill would operate?

Mr. HUNT. I think I can. If the Senator should write a check and it were to be presented to the bank today, under this bill it would be legal for that check to be taken into the bank account as of tomorrow.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill (H. R. 8055) relating to the collection, payment, and dishonor of demand items, and to the revocation of credit for, and payment of, such items, by banks in the District of Columbia was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

TWO ADDITIONAL DISTRICT JUDGES FOR NORTHERN DISTRICT OF ILLINOIS

The bill (S. 2707) to authorize the appointment of two additional district judges for the northern district of Illinois was announced as next in order.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, there is a companion House bill which has just come to the Senate. It is House bill 6454. The companion House bill should be amended and then substituted for the Senate bill. The Senate bill increases the number of judgeships in the northern district of Illinois from six to eight. The evidence presented before the committee justifies this increase. The Justice Department favors the bill. The six present district judges favor the bill. The Judicial Conference favors the bill. The chief judge of the Court of Appeals of the Seventh Circuit favors the bill. The Administrative Office of the United States Courts has submitted statistics to justify the bill. This district is comparable to the northern district of California and the eastern district of Pennsylvania, both of which received two additional judges a year ago.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, may I ask the distinguished Senator from Nevada whether the Committee on the Judiciary was unanimous in reaching the decision that there was need for these two judges?

Mr. McCARRAN. Yes; it was unanimous in its opinion.

Mr. President, the House bill should be considered. The House bill should be amended to conform to the Senate bill and then the Senate bill should be indefinitely postponed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the substitution of the House bill for the Senate bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to to consider the bill (H. R. 6454) to authorize the appointment of two additional district judges for the northern district of Illinois.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Permit the Chair to state the situation before the Senate. The Senator from Nevada offers an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause in the House bill, and to substitute therefor the language of the Senate bill. The amendment, which is the language of the Senate bill, will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. It is proposed to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the President shall appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, two additional district judges for the northern district of Illinois. Accordingly, title 28, United States Code, section 133, is amended to read as follows with respect to said district:

"Districts	Judges
Illinois
* * * * *
Northern	8
* * * * *

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WATKINS. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, let me ask what was done when the bill increasing the number of judicial posts throughout the United States was passed a year ago. Was not this matter considered at that time?

Mr. McCARRAN. It was not considered at that time. However, since then it has been brought to the attention of the various authorities, including the Judicial Conference and others, and is now approved by all of them.

The workload of the northern district, which embraces the city of Chicago, shows the necessity for additional judicial officers.

Mr. WATKINS. Why was not this matter considered at the time when the general increase of judicial posts was made, under a previous bill?

Mr. McCARRAN. At that time the Judicial Conference had not passed on the subject. It was pending before the Judicial Conference at that time. I am advised that since then, they have passed on it and have approved it.

Mr. WATKINS. There was provision in the other bill for an increase in the number of judgeships in the city of Chicago, was there not?

Mr. McCARRAN. Not for the northern district, as I recall.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment of the amendment and the third reading of the bill.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill (H. R. 6454) was read the third time and passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, Senate bill 2707 will be indefinitely postponed.

MAILING OF OBSCENE MATTER

The bill (S. 3800) to amend title 18 of the United States Code, relating to the mailing of obscene matter, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the first paragraph of section 1461 of title 18 of the United States Code is amended to read as follows:

"Every obscene, lewd, lascivious, indecent, filthy or vile article, matter, thing, device, or substance; and * * *."

SEC. 2. The fifth paragraph of section 1461 of title 18, United States Code, reading "Every letter, packet, or package, or other mail matter containing any filthy, vile, or indecent thing, device, or substance; and" is hereby repealed.

TEMPORARY APPOINTMENT OF REFEREES IN BANKRUPTCY

The bill (S. 3921) to provide for the temporary appointment of referees in bankruptcy, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. President, I have not had time to take up this matter with the chairman of the Judiciary Committee. The bill was reported recently. After it was reported, I appeared before the House Judiciary Committee, because the matter constitutes an emergency in my State, and it may become an emergency in other States.

The members of the House committee declined to go along with our theory regarding the bill, which calls for the temporary appointment of referees in the case of the absence because of illness of the regular referees in bankruptcy. Instead, the House committee reported yesterday an amendment providing for the assignment of referees from other districts by the senior circuit court judge. Such a provision is proposed in order to remove all the red tape now existing, for at the present time in order to have a referee appointed, to replace a referee who is ill, it is necessary to obtain permission from the referee who is ill, and also from the referee who is requested to temporarily take the place of the referee who is ill; and permission must also be obtained in regard to the payment of the expenses of the referee who takes the place of the one who is ill. Then it is necessary to obtain the permission of the district judge, and then the permission of the administrative officer in Washington, and then the permission of the conference of senior circuit court judges.

The amendment proposed by the House of Representatives provided that the judge of the district court in which the situation arises shall certify or pass on to the senior circuit court judge of his circuit the request for the appointment of a temporary referee, and the senior circuit court judge of the circuit shall assign a referee from another district, who simply would have to take the place of the sick referee, either temporarily or until a new referee was available and entered upon the performance of the duties.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, will the Senator inform the Senate what is meant, in the title of the bill, by the words "and for other purposes"?

Mr. KILGORE. I suppose those words are simply the customary ones, and were placed there by the legislative drafting service, because actually there are no other purposes to be served—nothing except to make it possible to obtain a temporary referee in bankruptcy.

Mr. President, I now ask for the substitution of the House version, in order to expedite this matter.

In my State the situation is desperate. We have a referee who has been sick for 6 months; and as a result, bankrupt estates are being wasted and coal mines are being wrecked, and many other serious problems have developed. We are simply desperate to get a referee; but under the present procedure we have not been able to get one.

So, to expedite the handling of this matter, I shall offer the amendment to which I have referred, and shall ask to have the present text of the Senate bill stricken out.

Mr. President, I ask that the amendment be stated, for the information of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. First of all, the question is, Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I should like to ask the distinguished Senator from West Virginia a question. If the referee is in the physical condition which has been described, why does he not resign? If the referee is incompetent because of illness, why does he stay in office?

Mr. KILGORE. He thinks he will recover. The doctors say he will recover. Of course, referees are appointed for a term of 4 years, but the appointment is actually a lifetime one. Under the circumstances, they naturally hesitate to give up their jobs; and they cannot be removed from office, except for misconduct.

There is no way to get a temporary replacement, except by the long-drawn-out process I have mentioned.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I do not like to object; but if the bill is going to take the course the Senator from West Virginia has proposed, I think I shall be constrained to object.

There is a reason for the objection. I now address myself to the amendment which I understand the Senator from West Virginia is prepared to offer. Referees in bankruptcy are on salary. The salaries differ, as between different locations and different referees in bankruptcy—depending upon the particular locality in which the referee serves.

There may be a referee in bankruptcy who receives a salary of $2,400 a year or $2,000 a year, and he may not have a great workload. However, as I understand the language proposed, it would permit the selection of a referee receiving such a salary to serve in a district where the salary being paid is $6,000. Under such circumstances, who would receive the salary of $6,000? Would the referee who was ill and could not then do the work receive the $6,000 salary, or would that salary be received by the referee who came there to do the work for the temporary period?

So it seems to me that inasmuch as this matter has not been considered by the Judiciary Committee, the bill should be sent back to the Judiciary Committee, if this amendment is to persisted in.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question before the Senate is, Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, let me inquire the calendar number of the bill, please.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is Calendar No. 2104.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I do not wish to object. The bill was approved by the Judiciary Committee in the form in which it was presented by the Senator from West Virginia. I do not wish to object to consideration of the bill; I would rather have it go through.

However, if the amendment which has been referred to is to be persisted in, I shall be forced to object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 3921).

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Let the amendment of the Senator from West Virginia be stated.

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. President, under the circumstances I would rather take the bill to conference. Therefore, I withdraw the amendment, and ask for consideration of the bill in the form in which it was reported and placed on the calendar; and I shall try to obtain a speedy conference with the House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no amendment to be proposed, the question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill (S. 3921) was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 43 of the act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States," approved July 1, 1898, as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"d. Whenever the office of a referee is vacant the judge or the chief judge of the district may, with the approval of the Director as to the necessity therefor, appoint temporarily a referee who shall serve at such salary as may be fixed by the Director to serve until the conference shall have acted with reference to the vacancy as provided by section 43b. Whenever a referee is temporarily absent or unable because of illness or for other reasons to act, the judge or the chief judge of the district may, with the approval of the Director as to the necessity therefor, appoint temporarily a referee who shall serve at such salary and for such period of time as may be fixed by the Director. Any salary fixed pursuant to this subsection shall be subject to the limitations prescribed by section 40 of this act."

RETURN OF VESTED PROPERTY TO WOMEN WHO ARE NOW AMERICAN CITIZENS—BILL PLACED AT FOOT OF THE CALENDAR

The bill (S. 1292) to amend sec. 32 (a) of the Trading With the Enemy Act was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, may we have an explanation of the bill?

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I ask that the bill go to the foot of the calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Unanimous consent is requested that the bill be placed at the foot of the calendar. Is there objection. Without objection, it is so ordered.

DODGE COUNTY, WIS.

The bill (S. 3585) for the relief of Dodge County, Wis., was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior is authorized and directed to pay, out of funds appropriated for the Fish and Wildlife Service, to the Wisconsin State Highway Commission for credit to the Dodge County allotment for State trunk highway improvement, the sum of $37,638, in full settlement of all claims against the United States for compensation for the abandonment of that portion of the Marsh Road, known as STH No. 49, within the boundary limits of the Horicon National Wildlife Refuge.

Mr. McCARRAN subsequently said: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent at this time to revert to Senate bill 3585, My reason for making this request is that the Senator from Wisconsin requested that I ask that it be amended when it was being considered. I overlooked the matter. There should be an amendment, "not to exceed 10 percent shall be paid for attorneys' fees," in proper language.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request? The Chair hears none, and the Senate will return to the consideration of Calendar No. 2106, the bill (S. 3585) for the relief of Dodge County, Wis.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I move as an amendment, at an appropriate place, the insertion of a provision that "not to exceed 10 percent shall be paid for attorneys' fees."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FORMER SHAREHOLDERS OF GOSHEN VENEER CO.—BILL PLACED AT FOOT OF CALENDAR

The bill (S. 410) for the relief of the former shareholders of the Goshen Veneer Co., an Indiana corporation, was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. CHAVEZ. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection being heard, the bill will be passed over.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, in connection with Senate bill 410, I should like to ask for certain information. I did not hear it announced. I should like to ask, if I may, who was the objector to that bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It was objected to by the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ].

Mr. DONNELL. I thank the Chair.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, I may say that my reason for asking that the bill go over was the fact that the Senator from Indiana [Mr. CAPEHART] was absent. It appears that he was the author of the bill. The bill provides for the sum of $513,434, a little more than half a million dollars. The Senator was not on the floor at the time, and I wanted an explanation as to the amount of money proposed to be appropriated.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I may say to the senior Senator from New Mexico that the Senator from Indiana [Mr. CAPEHART] knew that this matter was coming up this afternoon, and spoke to me about it. I did not take any action, when there was objection. I should like, if there is no objection by the Senator from New Mexico, to have this bill go to the foot of today's calendar, and be considered later.

Mr. CHAVEZ. I do not know anything about that, but it appears to me that when a bill providing for such a large sum of money is on the Consent Calendar, it should at least be explained.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I had intended to explain it. I presented the report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the bill being placed at the foot of the calendar? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

APPROVAL OF CONTRACT WITH OGDEN RIVER WATER USERS' ASSOCIATION

The bill (S. 3832) to approve a contract negotiated with the Ogden River Water Users' Association, to authorize its execution, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, the junior Senator from New Jersey will appreciate an explanation of the bill.

Mr. WATKINS. Mr. President, am I correct that we are now considering Senate bill 3832?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. WATKINS. That is a bill to authorize a new repayment contract between the Ogden River Water Users' Association and the United States Government, and it has to do with a reclamation project which was completed a number of years ago. The water users had been paying for a number of years, and they now find that the terms of the contract required them to pay out too rapidly. They cannot meet the annual payments. The area is largely a fruit-growing section, and, by reason of the heavy losses caused by hard winters and frosts and the rather speculative nature of fruit-growing in general, they cannot meet their payments. They have been going along doing the best they could. They have asked for relief.

Under the act passed by the Congress, the Bureau of Reclamation has negotiated with them a new contract which gives them additional time. They still must pay all the money, but it gives them additional time in which to pay it. The contract has been negotiated, it is approved by the Bureau of Reclamation, the bill was reported unanimously by our committee, and in my opinion, it is a good one. I know the people personally. I have gone over the contract with them. I have gone over their reasons for requiring additional time, and I am satisfied that it is a good contract. The fact of the matter is, I had a bill prepared and was going to introduce it, when I found that my colleague had already introduced one, so I urged in committee that his bill be favorably reported.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 3832) to approve a contract negotiated with the Ogden River Water Users' Association, to authorize its execution, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs with an amendment after line 8, to strike out:

SEC. 2. This act is declared to be a part of the Federal reclamation laws as these are defined by the Reclamation Project Act of 1939 (53 Stat. 1187).

So as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the contract dated May 23, 1950, negotiated by the Secretary of the Interior with the Ogden River Water Users Association pursuant to subsection (a) of section 7 of the Reclamation Project Act of 1939 (53 Stat. 1187), is approved, and the Secretary is hereby authorized to execute it on behalf of the United States.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

APPROVAL OF CONTRACT WITH SOUTH CACHE WATER USERS' ASSOCIATION

The bill (S. 3833) to approve a contract negotiated with the South Cache Water Users' Association, to authorize its execution, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Reserving the right to object, may I ask the distinguished Senator from Utah whether the explanation given on the preceding bill likewise applies to this bill?

Mr. WATKINS. Not exactly. The reasons are not the same. It is an extension of time within which to repay the costs of this reclamation project. But in this particular instance, the original incorporators and the original signers of the contract thought they were going to have additional stock sold for this irrigation project, but some 3,000 or 4,000 shares were unsold. It was on the basis of a larger selling of shares and a greater participation that they agreed to pay on the terms they agreed to. It has proved as a matter of practice that they cannot meet those payments. The additional stock was not sold, so the original farmers on this particular project have had to take on the additional burden. The Bureau of Reclamation has renegotiated a contract under existing law, which gives them additional time—some 16 years—in which to repay. It has been approved all along the line. I think it is a good bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 3833) to approve a contract negotiated with the South Cache Water Users' Association, to authorize its execution, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs with an amendment after line 8, to strike out:

SEC. 2. This act is declared to be a part of the Federal Reclamation laws as these are defined by the Reclamation Project Act of 1939 (53 Stat. 1187).

So as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the contract dated May 24, 1950, negotiated by the Secretary of the Interior with the South Cache Water Users' Association pursuant to subsection (a) of section 7 of the Reclamation Project Act of 1939 (53 Stat. 1187), is approved, and the Secretary is hereby authorized to execute it on behalf of the United States.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

REGULATION OF FUNDS OF SENECA INDIANS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 4942) to regulate the collection and disbursement of moneys realized from leases made by the Seneca Nation of Indians of New York, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs with amendments on page 2, line 3, after the word "leases", to insert a colon and the following additional proviso:

Provided further, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to authorize the city of Salamanca to grant new leases, or to modify, change, or alter existing leases, except with the consent of the Seneca Nation and upon terms agreeable to the Seneca Nation, such consent and such agreement to be obtained from such officer or agency of the Seneca Nation as may be duly authorized by the Seneca Nation to give such consent or arrive at such agreement.

On page 2, after line 11, to insert:

SEC. 2. Nothing in this act shall be construed as waiving the rights or title of the Seneca Nation to the lands referred to in the first section of this act, nor shall such rights or title be abridged except as may be hereafter provided by the United States in full consideration of the rights of the Seneca Nation.

In line 18, to change the section number from "2" to "3"; in line 23, after the word "basis.", to insert "The Council of the Seneca Nation shall keep complete and detailed record of all payments and disbursements from the sum so set aside, and shall make such records available for inspection by members of the Seneca Nation at all reasonable times."; on page 3, line 3, to change the section number from "3" to "4"; in line 7, after the word "an", to strike out "he" and insert "the treasurer of the Seneca Nation"; in line 10, after the word "act", to insert "and shall transmit a copy of this report to the Council of the Seneca Nation and shall make a copy available for inspection by members of the Seneca Nation at all reasonable times."; in line 14, to change the section number from "4" to "5"; after line 24, to strike out:

SEC. 5. The Secretary of the Interior is authorized, in his discretion, to transfer to the State of New York or any agency thereof, or to the proper officials of the several tribes any of the official records affecting the Indians of New York State.

And in lieu thereof to insert the following:

SEC. 6. The Secretary of the Interior is directed to give to the State of New York or to any authorized agency thereof or to the proper officials of the several tribes copies of official records required by the State, or by any authorized agency thereof or by the officials of the several tribes, to carry out the purposes of this act or other purposes which, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior, are in the interests of the welfare of the Indians of New York State: Provided, That copies as are given to the State of New York or to any authorized agency thereof shall be available for inspection at all reasonable times by duly authorized representatives of such tribes or of the Six Nations of New York.

And on page 4, line 17, to change the section number from "6" to "7."

The amendments were agreed to.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. LEHMAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have inserted in the RECORD a statement which I prepared on the bill which has just been passed.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT BY SENATOR LEHMAN

The purpose of this bill is very simple. The purpose is to make it possible for the city of Salamanca to enter into an arrangement with the Seneca Nation of Indians, on whose property the city of Salamanca stands, for the regular payment of the rental by the city instead of by the individual property holders in Salamanca.

This bill, in association with a law enacted by the New York Legislature in 1948, authorizes the city to collect the lease rentals from each lessee on the annual tax bill and then to pay the Indians the annual rental in a lump sum. The city would be authorized to make this payment regardless of whether it collected from the lessee or not. Such an arrangement would obviate the instability that has been caused by forfeiture of leases on the small plots of land into which the holdings of the Indians are divided.

The whole amount of money involved is very small. These leases were originally made almost a hundred years ago when Salamanca was but a small village. The total amount of the lease rent due the Indians is about $12,000 a year. This covers property on which the entire city of Salamanca is located.

The city claims that it has been held back in its expansion by the uncertainty of its relationship with the Indians. Now, under the terms of this bill, this relationship is to be stabilized and formalized.

This bill has been passed by the House and came to the Interior Committee. The subcommittee, of which I was chairman, held hearings and then drafted a series of amendments designed primarily to safeguard the rights of the Indians, not only now but at a future time when the leases expire. That will be in 1991.

This bill was voted out of the Interior Committee by unanimous vote. It has the support of my colleague, the senior Senator from New York. It has the support of the city officials of Salamanca. I believe it has the support of most of the Indians. Every effort was made to meet the objections of the Indians to this measure.

Mr. IVES. Mr. President, I also ask unanimous consent that I may have inserted in the RECORD at this point a statement which I had prepared on the bill just now passed.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT BY SENATOR IVES

At the present time, the Seneca Indian Nation owns—in title fee simple—a considerable section of lands in upper New York State. These lands are in possession of diverse leaseholders whose interests have been created by some 3,000 99-year leases, made pursuant to the act of September 30, 1890.

Responsibility for collection of the annual rents due on these leaseholds is now vested in an agency of the United States Government, the Bureau of Indian Affairs. The purpose of this bill is to permit the Seneca Nation to take over this function of collection, now carried on by the Federal Government.

Two thousand eight hundred of these three thousand Seneca-held leases are located within the city of Salamanca, N. Y. The common council of the city has expressed its willingness to assume the responsibility for collection of rents within Salamanca and to pay this total amount to the Seneca Nation. This means that the Indians will be able to collect the great bulk of rents—in a lump sum—from the city. The Seneca Nation, acting through its lease committee, has likewise adopted a resolution agreeing to this procedure.

The proposed bill would also increase the tribal council's annual expense allowance, in accordance with their oft-repeated request, from $2,500 to $5,000. The treasurer of the Seneca Nation would be required to distribute moneys collected to registered members of the tribe, and to file annual reports on such financial transactions.

This legislation represents a further step in the direction of assumption by the Indians of the full responsibilities of citizenship. Its enactment would be a furtherance of the announced congressional policy of withdrawing Federal supervision, wherever possible, and of placing management of tribal affairs in the hands of the Indians.

AMENDMENT OF DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA REVENUE ACT OF 1937

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 3659) to amend title IV of the District of Columbia Revenue Act of 1937, as amended, so as to provide for the issuance of dealers' identification tags for use on trailers, to provide for the revocation and suspension of dealers' registration and identification tags, to change the fee for dealers' identification tags, to provide for the issuance of temporary identification tags, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia with amendments on page 2, line 14, after the word "a", to strike out "temporary use" and insert "special use"; on page 3, line 23, after the word "a", to strike out "temporary" and insert "special"; in the same line, after the word "and", to strike out "temporary" and insert "special use"; on page 4, line 6, after the word "a", to strike out "temporary" and insert "special"; in the same line, after the word "and", to strike out "temporary" and insert "special use"; in line 8, after the word "a", to strike out "temporary" and insert "special"; in line 9, after the word "and", to strike out "temporary" and insert "special use"; on page 5, line 17, after the word "a", to strike out "temporary" and insert "special"; in line 18, after the word "and", to strike out "temporary" and insert "special"; in line 20, after the word "of", to strike out "temporary" and insert "special"; on page 6, line 8, after the word "dealer", to insert "subject to review by the Commissioners under rules and regulations prescribed by them. Pending such review, any such order of revocation or suspension shall be stayed unless the Commissioners shall otherwise direct. No order of the director or the Commissioners hereunder shall be set aside or suspended by any court unless such order is arbitrary or capricious."; on page 8, line 16, after the word "covered", to insert "by a dealer's registration or"; in line 17, after the word "a", to strike out "temporary" and insert "special"; in line 20, after the word "therefore", to strike out "and" and insert "or"; in line 23, after the word "or", to strike out "temporary" and insert "special", and on page 9, line 5, after the word "a", to strike out "temporary" and insert "special", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That paragraph (e) of section 1 of title IV of the District of Columbia Revenue Act of 1937, as amended, is amended to read:

"(e) The term 'dealer' means any person engaged in the business of manufacturing, distributing, or dealing in motor vehicles or trailers."

SEC. 2. That section 1 of such title, as amended, is amended by adding at the end of such section the following:

Upon receipt of an application from the owner of a motor vehicle or trailer and (except in the case of a motor vehicle or trailer covered by subsection (b) (2) of this section) payment of a registration fee computed as provided in section 3, and if there is in force with respect to such motor vehicle or trailer a valid certificate of title issued under the District of Columbia Traffic Act, 1925, as amended, the director shall issue to such owner a registration certificate and identification tags for such motor vehicle or trailer.

"(b) The Commissioners of the District of Columbia by regulation shall provide for the issuance by the director—tion fee originally paid and the fee computed for such other motor vehicle or trailer under section 3, in case the latter is the greater. Upon the death of a joint owner of a motor vehicle or trailer registered under this title the registration thereof shall be transferred to the survivor or survivors and the fee for such transfer shall be $1.

"(f) The Commissioners of the District of Columbia are further authorized to prescribe regulations under which the director may revoke or suspend the registration of any dealer who shall cease to be a dealer as defined in this title, or who shall have violated the provisions of this title or the regulations promulgated thereunder by the Commissioners, and to revoke or suspend and provide for the return to the director of all dealers' identification tags issued to such dealer, subject to review by the Commissioners under rules and regulations prescribed by them. Pending such review, any such order of revocation or suspension shall be stayed unless the Commissioners shall otherwise direct. No order of the director or the Commissioners hereunder shall be set aside or suspended by any court unless such order is arbitrary or capricious."

SEC. 4. That paragraph (a) of section 3 of such title, as amended, is amended to read:

AUTHORIZATION FOR EXECUTION OF OIL AND GAS LEASE IN PARK COUNTY, WYO.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I desire to make a unanimous-consent request, but before doing so, I should like to invite the attention of the Senate to the fact that earlier in the day Senate bill 3315, which had been reported by the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, was passed. That bill was placed on the calendar of the Senate on the 19th of June. An identical bill was reported from the House Committee on Public Lands on the following day and was passed by the House, so that, in the interest of efficient legislative operation, my request is that the House bill, which is identical in all respects with the bill which the Senate has passed, may be substituted for the Senate bill.

So, Mr. President, with that explanation, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate may revert to Calendar 1848, that the vote by which Senate bill 3315 was passed may be reconsidered, and that House bill 7916, which I understand is now on the desk, may be substituted therefor and passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to returning to Calendar No. 1848 for the purpose stated?

Mr. WHERRY. I have no objection, but I should like to ask the distinguished Senator a question after we return to Calendar No. 1848.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the action by which the Senate passed Senate bill 3315 is reconsidered.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, the House bill was introduced by my colleague in the House, Representative BARRETT, and the Senate bill was introduced by my colleague the junior Senator from Wyoming [Mr. HUNT] and myself.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, there is no objection to the substitution of the House bill, but I should like to ask another question of the Senator from Wyoming. Why is the measure necessary?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. It is necessary because as to certain mineral claims which have been operating in the Elk Basin for more than 30 years, a contest arose between the Federal Government and the lessees as to the legality of the title. The claimants were operating under placer-mining location and had been producing oil since before 1916. This bill represents a compromise by which the claimants surrender three-fourths of their claim.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. As the Chair understands, the request is that the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs be discharged from further consideration of House bill 7916 and that the bill be substituted for Senate bill 3315 and be now considered. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the bill (H. R. 7916) to authorize and direct the Secretary of the Interior to execute an oil and gas lease on a certain tract of land in Park County, Wyo., was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, Senate bill 3315 is indefinitely postponed.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, I should like the RECORD to show that by not objecting at this time I am not discriminating against Senators who have previously asked the privilege of returning to prior calendar numbers. I want the Senate to understand that I feel this request falls into a different category.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the next bill on the calendar.

O. O. HAUGEN

The bill (S. 2614) for the relief of O. O. Haugen was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary, with an amendment on page 1, line 6, to strike out "$800" and insert "$456."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to O. O. Haugen, route 3, box 147, Port Orchard, Wash., the sum of $456, in full satisfaction of his claim against the United States for compensation for a fence removed from his land near Charlson, N. Dak., by the Works Project Administration: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

CANADIAN RIVER RECLAMATION PROJECT—BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (H. R. 2733) to authorize the construction, operation, and maintenance by the Secretary of the Interior of the Canadian River reclamation project, Texas, was announced as next in order.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, I ask that the bill be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of the bill?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I am very happy to make an explanation of the bill.

The island of Guam, in the Pacific Ocean, came under the jurisdiction of the United States following the Spanish-American War. There was no civil government for the people of that island except by Executive order of President McKinley. The island was governed by naval officers in a very excellent manner, I may say, but without any participation by the people of the island. An Executive order was recently issued by President Truman which transferred the jurisdiction from the Navy to the Department of the Interior. The purpose of the bill is to provide an organic act by which the people of Guam may participate in governing their own affairs. It is in accordance with the program of our Government to encourage self-government throughout the world.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, is this in any way preliminary to the establishment of a State government?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. No, it is not.

Mr. McKELLAR. May I have the assurance of the Senator to that effect?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The Senator has my assurance. In order that this may be entirely clear, I ask unanimous consent that there may be printed in the RECORD, at this point, certain pages of the committee report on this bill.

There being no objection, excerpts from committee report (No. 2109) were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

REPORT No. 2109

(To accompany H. R. 7273)

The Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7273) to provide a civil government for Guam, and for other purposes, having considered the same, report favorably thereon with amendments and unanimously recommend that the bill, as amended, do pass.

PURPOSE OF THE BILL

The purpose of H. R. 7273, as amended, is to provide, in compliance with their wish, a civil government in the American pattern for the inhabitants of Guam, a Pacific island which has been under the jurisdiction of this country for more than half a century. Guam came under the American flag by virtue of the Treaty of Paris at the end of the Spanish-American War in 1898 (30 Stat. 1754). Up to and including the present, all the powers of government have been exercised under two Presidential Executive orders, issued by President McKinley in 1898 and by President Truman in 1949, and a series of intervening administrative orders of United States naval governors.

The two-sentence Executive order of President McKinley, set forth in appendix 2, without whereases or qualification placed the island completely under the control of the Navy. Pursuant thereto, a succession of naval governors exercised all legislative and judicial, as well as executive authority. The revoked existing laws, rewrote and promulgated new ones, created courts, acted as judges, levied, collected, and disbursed revenues, and, in general, directed the fiscal, economic, and political well-being of the Guamanians according to their own best judgment. That the powers of the naval governors were used wisely and in an efficient and beneficial manner is attested by the very substantial economic, social, and political development that has taken place on the island.

This bill is reported in the belief that the time has come for the Congress to pass an organic act permitting the people of Guam to govern themselves. The measure has the support of the Departments of Defense, State, Navy, Justice, and Interior, as well as that of the President of the United States.

It establishes democratic local government for the island, and guarantees human freedoms under the authority of the Congress rather than the executive branch. American citizenship would be conferred on the approximately 27,000 native Guamanians who gave such valiant proof of their loyalty to the United States and American traditions in two world wars, including 4 years of enemy occupation by the Japanese armed forces. A bill of rights is provided; a representative local government formed in the American tradition; an independent judiciary created, administering a system of law based on local needs and local traditions, all within the American framework of fundamental fairness and equality; and the scope of executive authority is defined and limited.

RESPONSIBILITY OF CONGRESS

All American tradition and history dictates that government shall rest upon law, rather than upon executive decree. By international treaty also, the Congress has a direct responsibility for the government of Guam. The second paragraph of article IX of the treaty ceding Guam to the United States provides:

"The civil rights and political status of the native inhabitants of the Territories hereby ceded to the United States shall be determined by the Congress (30 Stat. 1759)."

In addition to the obligation under the Treaty of Paris, the United States has additional treaty obligations with respect to Guam as a non-self-governing Territory. Under chapter XI of the Charter of the United Nations, ratified by the Senate June 26, 1945 (59 Stat. at p. 1048), we undertook, with respect to the peoples of such Territories, to insure political advancement, to develop self-government, and taking "due account of the political aspirations of the peoples, * * * to assist them in the progressive development of their free political institutions."

The facts that the island has been well governed by the Navy and that the people have made great economic, political, and social progress during the Navy administration, only emphasize the desirability of providing self-government.

HISTORY OF LEGISLATION

On October 20, 1945, the President requested the Secretaries of State, War, Navy, and Interior to submit recommendations concerning the administration of Guam and the other Pacific islands under the aegis of the United States. The report of the four Secretaries, submitted on June 18, 1947, by then Secretary of State George Marshall to the President, is set forth in the appendix to this report (appendix 3). As to Guam, the Cabinet officers recommended:

"Separate organic legislation for Guam to provide civil government and to grant citizenship, a bill of rights, and legislative powers to Guamanians should be enacted this session."

Pursuant to the recommendations of his four departmental heads, the President issued Executive Order 10077 on September 7, 1949, transferring the administration of Guam from the Secretary of the Navy to the Secretary of the Interior. The text of this order is set forth in the appendix to this report (appendix 4). Although the order originally set the time of transfer as July 1, 1950, its execution has been postponed for 30 days in view of the pendency of this legislation.

A draft of model legislation on which H. R. 7273 and allied bills in the House and Senate were based was submitted to the Speaker of the House and the President of the Senate by the Secretary of the Interior. Full hearings were conducted by both the House and Senate committees at which a number of representatives of the people of Guam were heard. No one appeared in opposition to the proposed legislation. As a result of the Senate hearing, amendments have been provided to make the government less expensive and more efficient. The measure was passed by the House, on voice vote, on May 23 of this year.

In a statement at the Senate committee hearing, the Secretary of the Interior said:

"Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I am very gratified at this opportunity to appear before your committee to present my views on S. 1892, entitled 'A bill to provide a civil government for Guam, and for other purposes.'

"This bill deals with a subject upon which there has long been agreement among all the interested executive departments of our Government in recommending congressional action. So far as I know, no opposition whatever has been voiced to the passage of this legislation.

* * * * *

"Enactment of S. 1892 would not only be a fulfillment of our country's treaty pledge of 1898, but would further evidence its traditional policy, in which it takes such rightful pride as the champion among nations of extending representative government, justice under law, and fundamental rights and human freedoms, not only to our dependent peoples but to everyone everywhere.

"For over 50 years, in the absence of congressional action and except during the period of Japanese occupation in World War II, the inhabitants of Guam, their lives and affairs, have been entrusted by a Presidential Executive order of December 23, 1898, to the Department of the Navy for exclusive control and administration.

"The Guamanian people have repeatedly petitioned the Federal Government for United States citizenship, a bill of rights, organic legislation, and civilian administration. S. 1892 will accord such rights and privileges to a people who have amply and heroically demonstrated their devotion to American ideals, and than whom there are none more loyal and patriotic under the American flag today.

"World War II made us mindful of our political neglect of our Guamanian nationals, and over the past 4 years the establishment of civil government under law on Guam has been under active consideration.

* * * * *

"In a letter addressed to the Secretary of the Interior under date of May 14, 1949, with reference to the present bill S. 1892 under consideration by your committee here today, President Truman stated:

"'I have today informed the Director of the Bureau of the Budget that the drafts of organic legislation for Guam and American Samoa, prepared by the Department of the Interior, have my approval. The Department of the Interior will have the responsibility of presenting the measures to the Congress. I have asked the Secretary of the Navy to assist you. * * *

"'It is the announced aim of this Government to accord civil government and a full measure of civil rights to the inhabitants of its Pacific territories. The accomplishment of this objective will be furthered by the transfer of these territories to civilian administration and the enactment of organic legislation at the earliest practicable date.'

"Other members of the Cabinet, high-ranking officers of the Army and Navy, business people, and many others have testified at previous hearings in support of organic legislation for Guam. It is significant that, at recent House hearings on the companion bill to S. 1892, not a single person testified against passage of the measure. That measure is presently pending on the House Calendar.

"It should also be noted that high military as well as civilian officials of this Government have stated that establishment of civil government under an organic act would in no way impair our national security. To the contrary, I hold with them the view that in Guam, a bastion of our Pacific defenses, measures taken to satisfy the legitimate aspirations of our Guamanian nationals will in fact enhance our security by binding these people more closely to the rest of the United States, and to its ideals. I urge the speedy passage of S. 1892."

PROVISIONS OF THE BILL

A detailed sectional analysis of H. R. 7273 is set forth in the appendix. Three points, however, may require further explanation.

Citizenship for Guamanians was unequivocally recommended to the President in the report of the Secretaries of State, War, Navy, and Interior. The House of Representatives approved provisions in the bill to give effect to this recommendation. The Senate committee gave the question careful consideration, both as to the principle involved and the language of the section. In order that the wording might be precise, the advice of the Attorney General of the United States was sought. The Attorney General's report, based on a study by the Immigration and Naturaliaztion Service, is set forth herein. The committee amended the bill in accordance with the Attorney General's recommendation.

Another section to which the Senate committee devoted considerable time and though was that concerning the establishment of a court system on Guam.

Given a period of peace, the growth of Guam as a transportation and commercial center for American interests in the Far East seems almost a foregone conclusion. American business enterprise in the area will want, and need, a center in which it can have the full protection of American laws and legal procedure.

Formerly this need was supplied by the United States Court for China, which had its headquarters in Shanghai, but that court was abolished by the treaty with China ending extraterritoriality. The nearest American court to far eastern economic centers is that in Hawaii, which is 12 or more hours away from Guam by air. If Guam is to afford American business enterprise the protection and stability needed, a court in Guam will have one-the-spot jurisdiction in matters involving admiralty and business reorganization is clearly indicated.

Section 3 of the bill sets forth in specific language that Guam is declared by the act to be "an unincorporated territory." Thus it has the same legal status as Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands, and is not similar to that of Alaska and Hawaii.

No commitment as to statehood, express or implied, is held out in the measure. The representatives of the people of Guam who came to Washington to appear at the hearings, concur in the committee's views in this respect.

Also, as head of the government of Guam, the Honorable Carlton Skinner, sent the following telegram to the committee:

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 3, 1950.

Senator JOSEPH C. O'MAHONEY,
Chairman, Senate Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.:

I am informed that in hearings before your committee on Hawaiian statehood a question was raised as to a possible obligation to grant statehood to Guam. Please inform the committee that the people of Guam do not envision or desire statehood. They do ardently desire passage of your bill (S. 1892), now being considered by your committee, which will give them citizenship and right of self-government, which they have patiently sought for the 51 years that they have been under the American flag. The bill for organic act on which Senator ANDERSON'S subcommittee has already held an excellent and sympathetic hearing contains absolutely no promise, direct or implied, of statehood for Guam. By its language describing Guam as an unincorporated territory, the pending bill clearly rejects the possibility of statehood. With citizenship and self-government provided in your bill (S. 1892), the people of Guam will be happy and contented as to their political ambitions and will have the foundation they need to fulfill their destinies politically, economically, and socially.

CARLTON SKINNER,
Governor of Guam.

REPORTS OF EXECUTIVE AGENCIES

The favorable reports on this measure or on similar bills by the Departments of Navy, Interior, and Justice, as well as the comments of the chairman of the Chief Justice's Judicial Conference Committee are set forth in full.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
Washington, D. C., May 3, 1949.

Hon. ALBEN W. BARKLEY,
President of the Senate.

MY DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: Enclosed herewith is a draft of a proposed bill to provide a civil government for Guam and for other purposes. I request that the proposed bill be referred to the appropriate committee for consideration and I recommend that it be enacted.

The United States acquired Guam from Spain, under the Treaty of Paris of December 10, 1898. That treaty provided that the Congress should determine the civil rights and political status of the native inhabitants of the territories ceded by Spain. Organic legislation was enacted for the Philippine Islands and for Puerto Rico, acquired under the same treaty, but although 50 years have passed the United States has not yet fulfilled its commitment with respect to Guam. The American tradition of self-government and our adherence to the principles of the United Nations Charter require that Guam be provided with a civil government as Alaska.

Hawaii, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and the Philippine Islands have been. Guam has been subject to the jurisdiction of the Department of the Navy by virtue of Executive order, and the Navy has been responsible for civil affairs there.

On October 20, 1945, President Truman requested the Secretaries of State, War, the Navy, and the Interior to submit recommendations to him on problems arising in connection with the administration of the Pacific islands. On June 18, 1947, the four Secretaries recommended that administrative responsibility for Guam, American Samoa, and the trust territory of the Pacific islands be assigned to a civilian agency, at the earliest practicable date as determined by the President, and that the administrative responsibility of the Navy Department for the islands be continued upon an interim basis only. The Secretaries also recommended that organic legislation be drafted by the executive departments and submitted to the Congress. These recommendations were forwarded by the President to the Congress on June 19, 1947.

In accordance with that recommendation, the enclosed draft of organic legislation for Guam has been prepared in consultation with the Department of the Navy. The bill is modeled upon the organic acts of the other Territories. It would provide for a local government consisting of the traditional three branches—executive, legislative, and judicial—to be under the supervision of such civilian department or agency as the President may direct. It would make the people of Guam citizens of the United States. The draft contains a bill of rights, modeled upon the Bill of Rights in the Constitution, but granting express authority to the Legislature of Guam to enact such legislation as may be necessary to protect the lands and business enterprises of persons of Guamanian ancestry, notwithstanding a general provision in the bill of rights that there shall be no discrimination against any person on account of race, sex, language, or religion, and no denial of the equal protection of the laws. Such authority is considered to be essential in order that the local people may be protected against economic exploitation.

Executive authority would be vested in a Governor, either a civilian or a retired officer of the Armed Forces, appointed by the President, with the advice and consent of the Senate, to hold office at the President's pleasure. The Governor would have general supervision and control of all executive agencies and instrumentalities of the local government, and would coordinate all activities of a civil nature carried on by agencies of the Federal Government in the island. The President would also appoint a Lieutenant Governor, who would serve as Governor in case of a vacancy in the office of Governor or the temporary removal, absence, resignation, or disability of the Governor. The head of the department or agency with supervision over the local government would designate the head of a local government department to serve as Governor when neither the Governor nor the Lieutenant Governor is available. Heads of executive agencies or instrumentalities in the local government would be appointed by the Governor, unless the organic legislation or local law otherwise provides. Salaries of employees of the local government would be fixed by the local legislature and paid from local funds, unless otherwise provided in the organic legislation.

The legislature would consist of one or two houses, as determined by the legislature itself. Legislative power would extend to all subjects of local application not inconsistent with the organic act and such other laws of the United States as might apply to the island. No person may sit in the legislature who is not a United States citizen, at least 25 years old, domiciled in Guam for 5 years immediately preceding the legislative session in which he seeks to sit, or who has been convicted of a felony or crime involving moral turpitude and has not received a pardon restoring his civil rights. The existing laws governing elections to the legislature would continue, subject to amendment by the legislature. These laws now provide for election by secret ballot. Provision would be made for regular and special sessions of the legislature. The Governor would have a suspensive veto. If a bill should be reenacted over his veto, and he does not then approve it, it would be submitted to the President for his approval or disapproval.

All laws enacted by the legislature would be reported by the governor to the head of the supervisory civilian agency and by him to the Congress. If not annulled by the Congress within 1 year after date of its receipt, the law would be deemed to be approved. Appropriations would be made by the legislature, except such as may be made by the Congress from time to time or as otherwise provided in the organic legislation. The legislature or any person or group of persons would have the right of petition. Guam would be represented in the House of Representatives by an elected Resident Commissioner, with the right to debate but not to vote, and with the same privileges, compensation, travel allowance, and other allowances as the Members of the House of Representatives. The first Resident Commissioner would be elected at the first general election, his term to expire on January 1, 1951. Terms of succeeding Resident Commissioners would be 4 years, in view of the fact that local elections, under existing law, are quadrennial.

The judicial branch would consist of a supreme court, with a single justice appointed by the President, with the advice and consent of the Senate for a 6-year term, and of such inferior courts as the legislature might create. The judicial district of Hawaii would be extended to include Guam so that the United States District Court for the District of Hawaii would have jurisdiction over certain cases arising in Guam. It would review final judgments of the Supreme Court of Guam in certain classes of cases.

Laws in force in Guam on the date of enactment of the bill, except as the bill may amend them, would be continued in force, subject to modification or repeal by the Congress or the legislature. Except as otherwise provided by the act, no law of the United States hereafter enacted would apply to Guam unless expressly made applicable by the Congress. The President would be directed to appoint a commission of seven persons, at least three of whom would be residents of Guam, to survey the field of Federal laws and to recommend to the Congress within 12 months after the date of enactment of the act, which laws of the United States not now applicable to Guam should be made applicable, and which laws already applicable, should be declared inapplicable.

The Governor's salary would be $16,000. Should he be a retired officer of the Armed Forces, the Governor would receive such sum as when added to his pay and allowances as a retired officer would total $16,000. The Chief Justice and the Lieutenant Governor would receive $13,000 annually. Members of the Guam Legislature would receive $15 a day for each day of the legislative session, to be paid by the United States. Other legislative expenses would be met from local revenues. Officers and employees whose homes are outside Guam would be transported to Guam with their families and household goods at the expense of the United States and would be returned at Federal expense if they had served 2 years. They would also be allowed travel time not to exceed 30 days once every 2 years in which to return to their homes on leave, transportation for this purpose to be at United States expense. Officers or employees whose salaries are not fixed by the act would receive such compensation and allowances as might be provided by local law, or by the civilian department or agency if employees of such agency.

Title to property owned by the United States and employed by the naval government in administration of civil affairs would be transferred to the local government within 90 days after the date of enactment of the act. All other property owned by the United States and not reserved by the President within said 90 days would be placed under control of the local government to be administered for the benefit of the people of Guam. Property title to which or control of which is not transferred to the local government would be transferred to the administrative supervision of the head of the civilian department or agency, except as the President may from time to time prescribe, and the head of that department or agency would be authorized to lease or sell, on terms he deems advantageous to the United States, any such property not needed for public purposes.

The Governor would be responsible for the establishment and maintenance of public-health services and a public-school system.

Customs duties and Federal income taxes collected in Guam, proceeds of taxes collected under United States internal-revenue laws on products of Guam, fees for passports, immigration, etc., would be covered into the local treasury to be expended by the government of Guam in accordance with the annual budget.

There would be expressly reserved to the President power to designate parts of the island as military or naval reservations, or to treat the island as a closed port with respect to vessels and aircraft of foreign nations.

The authority and powers conferred by the proposed organic legislation would come into force immediately upon enactment. However, the President would be authorized, during not more than 1 year from date of enactment, to continue the administration of Guam as provided by law, Executive order, or local regulation in force on the date of enactment of the act. The President would be further authorized to place any or all of the provisions of the act in force before the expiration of the 1-year period, if practicable.

Enactment of this legislative proposal would confer upon the people of Guam the measure of self-government and civilian administration to which they have long been entitled. It would contribute toward fulfillment of the obligation assumed by the United States under article 73 of the United Nations Charter to promote the political, economic, social, and educational advancement of the inhabitants of the non-self-governing Territories under United States administration. It would confer upon the people of Guam the privileges of United States citizenship and participation in their own government which have long since been granted to people in the other territorial areas of the United States, and I therefore recommend that it be enacted.

The Director, Bureau of the Budget, has advised me that there is no objection to the submission of this report.

Sincerely yours,

J. A. KRUG,
Secretary of the Interior.

THE SECRETARY OF THE NAVY,
Washington, August 8, 1950.

Hon. J. HARDIN PETERSON,
Chairman of the Committee on Public Lands, House of Representatives.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: The chairman of the Subcommittee on Territorial and Insular Possessions of the Committee on Public Lands, during the course of the hearings on H. R. 4499, a bill to provide a civil government for Guam, and for other purposes, and

H. R. 4500, a bill to provide a civil government for American Samoa, and for other purposes, requested that the Department of the Navy submit a formal statement regarding its position with respect to organic legislation for those islands.

The enclosed statement sets forth the position of the Navy Department with regard to the proposed legislation which would provide organic acts for Guam and American Samoa and confer United States citizenship upon the indigenous inhabitants of those islands.

Sincerely yours,

DAN A. KIMBALL,
Under Secretary of the Navy.

STATEMENT OF THE POSITION OF THE DEPARTMENT OF THE NAVY WITH RESPECT TO CURRENT PROPOSED LEGISLATION TO PROVIDE AN ORGANIC ACT FOR GUAM AND AMERICAN SAMOA AND TO CONFER UNITED STATES CITIZENSHIP UPON THE INDIGENOUS INHABITANTS THEREOF

The Department of the Navy desires to endorse most strongly the proposal now before the Congress to grant United States citizenship to the peoples of Guam and American Samoa and to provide an organic act for each of these insular possessions. This endorsement is in effect a reiteration of the recommendations contained in the joint statement of the Secretaries of Navy and Interior before the Subcommittee on Territorial and Insular Possessions of the House Public Lands Committee on May 28, 1947.

The type of legislation best designed to accomplish the above objectives is, of course, a matter for the Congress to determine. The function of the executive departments concerned with the administration of insular affairs is considered as being to offer recommendations, on the basis of their backgrounds of experience in this field, as a guide to the Congress in the consideration and enactment of legislation.

The Department of the Navy, in reviewing the 50 years of its administration of Guam and American Samoa, feels a pride which is believed justifiable in the progress made on these islands. At the turn of the century when the administration of Guam and American Samoa was assigned to the Navy, the sanitary and health conditions of these islands were deplorable. The indigenous population had been decimated by disease. At once a vigorous public-health program was instituted on each of these islands. Medical treatment and hospitalization were provided for all. Programs for training medical practitioners and nurses have been promoted. Since 1900 the population of each island has almost trebled. Health conditions are now considered excellent. There has been a steady increase in the participation of the people of Guam and American Samoa in their local governments. The development of this participation has proceeded in accordance with the culture and institution of the people. Today the people of Guam are represented by the Guam Congress upon which certain legislative powers were conferred in 1947. The Samoans are represented by the Fono of American Samoa, a general assembly constituted according to Samoan tradition, upon the recommendations of which the Governor relies heavily. Guamanians and Samoans occupy responsible positions in the executive branch of their local governments and sit on the island courts. Similar substantial progress might be noted in the fields of education, commerce, and agriculture. Progress along these lines will be greatly accelerated, under whatever civilian department or agency is designated to have responsibility for the administration of Guam and American Samoa, by the enactment of organic legislation for these islands.

On behalf of the Department of the Navy, it is strongly urged that prompt and favorable consideration be given to legislation designed to provide an organic act for Guam and American Samoa and confer United States citizenship on the loyal inhabitants of these islands.

This statement has been coordinated within the National Military Establishment in accordance with procedures prescribed by the Secretary of Defense.

The Bureau of the Budget has advised that there is no objection to the presentation of this statement to the Congress.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,
OFFICE OF THE DEPUTY ATTORNEY GENERAL,
Washington, July 13, 1950.

Hon. JOSEPH C. O'MAHONEY,
Chairman, Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR: This is in response to the oral request of Mr. Stewart French of your staff for the views of the Department of Justice relative to the citizenship provisions of the bill (H. R. 7273) to provide a civil government for Guam, and for other purposes.

You are advised that the Department of Justice has no objection to the enactment of the afore-mentioned provisions in the form contained in section 4 of the bill, except that it is recommended that the proposed section 206 (b) be amended by deleting the period which appears on line 13 of page 3 of Committee Print No. 2, dated July 11, 1950, and inserting in its place a colon and the following proviso: "Provided, That in the case of any person born before the date of enactment of this section, he has taken no affirmative steps to preserve or acquire foreign nationality."

The recommended proviso is intended to insure again any construction which would permit the conferring of citizenship upon any person born on the island of Guam who has since assumed a status inconsistent with, if not antagonistic to, the interests of the United States.

Very sincerely,

PEYTON FORD,
Deputy Attorney General.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Yes.

Mr. ELLENDER. Has the committee gone into the question of the probable cost? Will the cost be higher, under this proposal, with a civilian form of government than under the Navy?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The committee has examined into the subject, and it is satisfied that the cost will be less.

Mr. ELLENDER. Does the Senator know how much less?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I do not recall.

Mr. ELLENDER. But it would be less?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Yes.

Mr. McKELLAR. What proportion of the cost would the United States Government bear and what proportion of the cost would the island bear?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The United States Government bears all of it now. I believe the cost would be reduced and shared with the island, under the provisions of this bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment of the amendments and third reading of the bill.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

LT. COMDR. EDWIN M. ROSENBERG

The bill (S. 3446) to authorize the restoration of Edwin M. Rosenberg, lieutenant commander, retired, to the active list of the United States Navy, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the President of the United States is hereby authorized to appoint Edwin M. Rosenberg, now an officer on the retired list of the United States Navy, an officer on the active list of the line of the United States Navy with the permanent rank of lieutenant commander and with the date of rank October 3, 1945. Upon such appointment the said Edwin M. Rosenberg shall be given the same precedence on the lineal list of officers of the United States Navy to which he would have been entitled had he not been placed on the retired list of officers of the United States Navy.

ATTENDANCE OF NAVY BAND AT CONFEDERATE VETERANS REUNION

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 8139) to authorize the attendance of the United States Marine Band at the annual reunion of the United Confederate Veterans to be held in Biloxi, Miss., September 27 through September 30, 1950, which had been reported from the Committee on Armed Services with amendments on page 1, line 4, to delete the words "Marine Corps" and insert "Navy"; and

On page 2, line 2, to delete the words "Marine Band" and insert "Navy Band."

The amendments were agreed to.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to authorize the attendance of the United States Navy Band at the annual reunion of the United Confederate Veterans to be held in Biloxi, Miss., September 27 through September 30, 1950."

UNLAWFUL ENTRY ON PUBLIC OR PRIVATE PROPERTY IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

The bill (S. 3522) to amend section 824 of the Code of Laws for the District of Columbia was announced as next in order.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, I should like to have an explanation of the bill.

Mr. HUNT. Mr. President, I should like to advise the distinguished Senator from North Dakota that this bill would make trespass upon public property or grounds, or upon the grounds of private residences in the District of Columbia, a misdemeanor. The present law of trespass covers only private buildings. The bill would cover the grounds of public buildings and private residences as well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill (S. 3522) was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 824 of the Code of Laws for the District of Columbia as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 824. Unlawful entry on public or private property: Any person who, without lawful authority, shall enter, or attempt to enter, any public or private dwelling, building, or other property, or part of such dwelling, building, or other property, against the will of the lawful occupant or of the person lawfully in charge thereof, or being therein or thereon, without lawful authority to remain therein or thereon shall refuse to quit the same on the demand of the lawful occupant, or of the person lawfully in charge thereof, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $50 or imprisonment in jail for not more than 6 months, or both, in the discretion of the court."

CONSTRUCTION OF PRIVATE AND SEMIPUBLIC BUILDINGS IN GEORGETOWN AREA

The bill (H. R. 7670) to regulate the height, exterior design, and construction of private and semipublic buildings in the Georgetown area of the National Capital was announced as next in order.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. May we have an explanation of the bill?

Mr. HUNT. I should like to advise the distinguished Senator from Kansas that the purpose of this bill is to preserve the early architecture of Georgetown. Under the bill the District Commissioners, upon recommendation of the Fine Arts Commission, would issue permits for the construction, reconstruction, or remodeling of the exterior of buildings which face on public streets in Georgetown. Similar ordinances are in effect in many of our older, finer cities, such as Alexandria, New Orleans, Charleston, and other cities throughout the United States. The bill authorizes an appropriation of $8,000 to survey the Georgetown area in order to obtain necessary information concerning the historical buildings in Georgetown.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. I am wondering how much this type of legislation, if it is permitted to continue, will cost the taxpayers. In many instances the addition of a story, in a practical way, to existing buildings might save the taxpayers millions of dollars. I think we should be sensible enough to consider that aspect of the matter.

Mr. HUNT. I do not know just how far this type of legislation would carry us, except that it would lie in the good judgment of the people who are in control of the matter. In this particular case, it is the Fine Arts Commission of the District of Columbia, for whose ability we all have very high regard. They have done a fine job in the city of Washington up to this time. Of course personnel may change and the situation may change, but there is a great desire in this respect on the part of the people of Georgetown and the District as a whole that the architectural beauty of Georgetown be preserved.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Mr. President, I object to the bill.

Mr. ELLENDER. I understand that $8,000 would be authorized under the bill. Would that come out of the District fund?

Mr. HUNT. I think it would be a direct appropriation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection has been heard to the bill. The bill will go over.

AMENDMENT OF DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA TEACHERS' SALARY ACT OF 1947

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 3180) to amend the District of Columbia Teachers' Salary Act of 1947, which had been reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia with amendments on page 6, to strike out all of section 6; on page 7, to change "SEC. 7." to "SEC. 6."; on page 7, line 8, to change the figure "1930" to "1950"; and on page 7, line 10, to change "SEC. 8." to "SEC. 7."; so as to make the bill read:

"(l) Research assistants shall be transferred and assigned as follows:

"(1) Research assistants now assigned to salary class 6, group A, shall be transferred and assigned to salary class 6, group A, of the foregoing schedule;

"(2) Research assistants now assigned to salary class 6, group B, shall be transferred and assigned to salary class 6, group A, of the foregoing schedule;

"(3) Research assistants now assigned to salary class 6, group C, shall be transferred and assigned to salary class 6, group C, of the foregoing schedule; and

Every teacher, librarian, research assistant, counselor, and instructor in the teachers colleges appointed on or after July 1, 1947, shall be assigned according to eligibility either to group A or to group C if the salary class to which he is appointed be divided into group A and group C. Every teacher, librarian, research assistant, and counselor transferred and assigned on July 1, 1947, to a group A, or appointed to group A on July 1, 1947, or thereafter shall be promoted to group C on the basis of documentary evidence establishing the attainment of a recognized master's degree: Provided, That after June 30, 1948, all promotions to group C shall be made on the first day of the month immediately following the date on which documentary evidence is submitted to the Board of Education establishing to the Board's satisfaction the attainment of a recognized master's degree."

SEC. 6. The appropriations for general administration, general supervision and instruction, and vocational education, George-Barden program, under the caption "Public schools" contained in the District of Columbia Appropriation Act of 1950, approved June 29, 1949, are hereby made available for the purposes of this act.

SEC. 7. This act shall take effect July 1, 1947.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, was read the third time, and passed.

SUSPENSION OF RESTRICTIONS ON AUTHORIZED PERSONNEL STRENGTH OF ARMED FORCES

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 3939) to suspend restrictions on the authorized personnel strength of the Armed Forces, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I should like to make a brief explanation of this bill. Senators will recall that the number of men who can serve in the Navy, Army, Air Force, and Marine Corps is fixed by law. None of the branches of our armed services may have more men than Congress permits. The number of men in the Marine Corps is fixed at 20 percent of the number of men in the Navy. At the present time it is contemplated that the ceiling which the present laws have already imposed on the services will not allow the expansion of the Armed Forces which is desired in order to meet the emergency in Korea and elsewhere. The House of Representatives has already passed a bill removing the ceiling, because we do not know how large a force we may need. In any event it cannot be larger than appropriation which we make for these purposes will permit. Inasmuch as the House yesterday passed an identical bill with the one now under consideration I ask that the bill (H. R. 9178) be substituted for this bill, that the House bill be passed by the Senate, and that the Senate bill be indefinitely postponed.

Mr. DOUGLAS and Mr. WHERRY addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator yield; if so, to whom?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield first to the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. DOUGLAS. May I ask if the House bill removes the restriction on the Marine Corps?

Mr. TYDINGS. All restrictions go off together, on the Marine Corps, Navy, Army, and Air Force.

Mr. DOUGLAS. The point is, Will the strength of the Marine Corps be tied to the strength of the Navy?

Mr. TYDINGS. The bill eliminates that restriction, so that there is no tying in of the Marine Corps with the Navy.

Mr. DOUGLAS. So that if the Navy should go up 20 percent, the Marine Corps could go up more than that?

Mr. TYDINGS. Fifty, or 100 percent, if that were desired.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I am glad the Senator from Maryland, the chairman of the Armed Services Committee, has recognized the Marine Corps as a combat unit.

Mr. TYDINGS. Let me clear this question up. Not only is the Senator's assumption correct, as he has stated it to me, but the Marine Corps Reserve, which can be called, is unlimited, so that we now have both ceilings off, and there is no limit.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield to the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. WHERRY. Does the House bill provide a time limitation?

Mr. TYDINGS. No; not that I recall.

Mr. GURNEY. Mr. President, the Senate committee adopted an amendment, as the Senator well remembers, and I wonder if the House bill contains that amendment.

Mr. TYDINGS. I am advised by one of the experts of our committee that the House did include an amendment, and that it is the same amendment the Senate committee adopted.

Mr. GURNEY. That is fine, then.

Mr. WHERRY. What is the amendment?

Mr. TYDINGS. The extension originally recommended was to July 9, 1951. We were advised by the military leaders that it would be better, as is customary in every national emergency, not to fix a limit. Each time we have gotten out from an emergency we have fixed a limit on the Army, Navy, Air Force, and so forth, but we have never done so until the emergency had passed. For that reason both the House and the Senate committee struck out the time limit of July 9, 1951.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I am a member of the Committee on Appropriations, and of the subcommittee handling appropriations for the armed services. I have voted for all the appropriations for the military, both in war and in peace, for our own national defense, and I am perfectly willing to vote the necessary appropriations now just as quickly as is the Senator from Maryland.

Mr. TYDINGS. I am sure of that.

Mr. WHERRY. But I believe there should be some limitation on the time. I am not complaining about the removal of the limitation on the number or about the appropriations, which will be handled in the Committee on Appropriations. I think it is necessary to grant the President the powers he asks, and I am in favor of that. But it does seem to me that there should be some limitation on the time. If we strike out the language referred to, there is no limit on the time, and it seems to me some limitation is justified.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, whenever these matters have been dealt with for the future, in line with the Senator's suggestion, when the emergency is over, the forces have been "phased" down gradually, as it is called, as the troops come back, if they are abroad, and are deactivated, their equipment turned in, and they go back to civilian life. How quickly that can be done depends largely on where the troops are, and what the situation is at the end of the war.

I would say to the Senator that I do not remember of an emergency in which our troops have ever fought, when real battle conditions have prevailed, when there has been a limitation on our armed forces, either in numbers or as to time.

I see what the Senator has in mind, and I think it is a good point, but I suggest to him that one of the greatest values of this bill is not only the provision to take the limits off the Army, Navy, and Air Force in the matter of such men as we need, but to show the world that whatever is needed, we are putting ourselves in the position to produce. One of the great values of this is as a psychological factor, that for the time being the wraps have been taken off, until the dove of peace shall come down a little closer to terra firma.

Mr. WHERRY. I agree completely with the observations of the distinguished Senator, with one exception. I am willing to expand the Army to the number the Army requests, for the need which is to be confronted. The number of men, the number of units, and the appropriations, are one thing, but I think that after that is done, there should be some time limit on these extraordinary powers. That is what I am discussing. I think some year should be inserted. If 1 year is not enough, make it 2 years. Certainly the Congress will be in session, and if there is a desire to extend the power and fix another limitation, that is all right so far as I am concerned, but not only as to this bill, but as to any other bill which comes before the Senate which asks for extraordinary powers, whether it has to do with appropriations, the number of the men in the armed forces, or whether it relates to powers to be imposed upon the economy, I believe there should be some time limit during which such powers should exist.

Mr. TYDINGS. Let me point out another very practical mechanical difficulty which intervenes. When we get together armed forces, we quite often organize them with different kinds of enlistments. Some enlistments are for 1 year, some are for 2 years, some for 3 years, some are for the duration of the war. Whenever we impose a cut-off date arbitrarily on the Military Establishments, we make it very difficult to get the kind of long-range enlistments beyond that cut-off date which the establishment would normally like to have.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the rules of the Senate, the time of both Senators has expired.

Mr. GURNEY. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Dakota.

Mr. GURNEY. I yield time to the Senator from Maryland.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. As the Chair understands, unanimous consent is requested that the Senator from Maryland be allowed 5 minutes extra. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the Senator may proceed.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, as the Senator from Nebraska well knows, the size of the Military Establishment, first of all, is fixed by the amount of the appropriations. Even though now we have authorized the strength of the Army, Navy, and Air Corps, we have far less than is authorized, because we have appropriated only sufficient money to keep in being a force less than that which has been authorized.

Having said that, let me move on to the difficulty of putting in the law a cut-off date. When a man comes forward to enlist, he is asked if he wants to enlist for the duration. He is asked quite often whether he wants to enlist for this, that, or the other period of time. Boys who are going to college like to make their enlistments so that if the war terminates quickly, they may get out of the service and go back and finish their schooling, or they may have other commitments of a similar nature, not necessarily tied to education.

If we put in the law an arbitrary cut-off date, and are going to assemble a large force, when young men come in to enlist, if there is no limitation on the size of the force, we are compelling the organization of the armed establishment to be limited to the year. If the Senator wanted to make it 4 years, the argument I make would not hold.

Mr. WHERRY. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield.

Mr. WHERRY. If we imposed a limitation of 2 years, does not the Senator feel every argument he has made would be met, because certainly if we are in a four-alarm war, as we hear it spoken of, there would be no question about extending the time. All I am asking is that some reasonable time be fixed in the bill when the powers will cease to exist. I certainly want such a provision in effect until any emergency is over.

Mr. TYDINGS. There would be no quarrel about extending it. The Senator and I would both extend it at the end of a 2-year period, if necessary.

Mr. WHERRY. Certainly.

Mr. TYDINGS. My point is that when a man undertakes to enlist for 4 years, the Army takes him for 4 years. If at the end of 2 years the component parts are to be changed, it makes it pretty hard for the Army establishment to plan just what kind of force they are going to have after the cut-off date.

Mr. WHERRY. I am not going to argue about the length of time; the Senator feels that it should be 4 years, or 3 years, or 2 years, but I think there should be some limit. Does not the Senator agree with me?

Mr. TYDINGS. I would say the Senator had a point. My suggestion would be that it be 4 years, because enlistments are for 4 years. We can at any time cut it down from four to two.

Mr. WHERRY. I will not take any more time of the Senate. I believe we are in complete accord.

Mr. TYDINGS. Yes.

Mr. WHERRY. We can reduce it from four to two, just as well as we can increase it from two to four. But I wish the Senator would make it 3 years. That is the ordinary term of enlistment. Will the Senator accept 4 years?

Mr. TYDINGS. I will.

Mr. WHERRY. That will give some definite time to which it must be limited.

Mr. TYDINGS. I will make it July 30, 1954, which is approximately 4 years from now, and have it end at the end of the month.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does either Senator offer that as an amendment?

Mr. WHERRY. I will offer that as an amendment, if the Senator from Maryland will accept it.

Mr. TYDINGS. I will accept it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska has offered an amendment which will be inserted in the proper place. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Maryland that the language of of the House bill be substituted for the language of the Senate bill, and that the amendment as last offered by the Senator from Nebraska and agreed to by the Senator from Maryland, be added?

Mr. WHERRY. Make the date July 31.

Mr. TYDINGS. Very well; make it the 31st of July.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The language of the two bills is identical.

The Senator from Maryland has asked that House bill 9178, a bill identical with the Senate bill, be substituted for the Senate bill. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 9178) to suspend restrictions on the authorized personnel strength of the armed forces, and for other purposes.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I now ask unanimous consent to amend the bill by inserting on page 1, line 9 of the engrossed House bill, after the word "suspended" the words "until July 31, 1954."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Maryland.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill (H. R. 9178) was read the third time and passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Senate bill will be indefinitely postponed.

LOYALTY IN THE ARMED SERVICES

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. TYDINGS. There is on the calendar a bill dealing with loyalty in the armed services which is some distance down. I am not going to ask that it be considered now, because that would be unfair, but I hope that if it is not reached before the end of the day, the minority leader and the acting majority leader will be given an opportunity for the consideration of the bill, which is a "must." It is on page 45, and is Calendar No. 2156, House bill 7439, an act to protect the national security of the United States by permitting the summary suspension of employment of civilian officers and employees of various departments and agencies of the Government, and for other purposes. It is a very important bill, and I do not want the Senate to recess today without considering it.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield.

Mr. WHERRY. Is there a time limitation on the life of the bill? That is, when are the powers granted to end?

Mr. TYDINGS. I think this is a permanent policy, so far as I know.

Mr. WHERRY. I will look into the matter.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, I desire to address myself very briefly to the remarks of the Senator from Maryland. I am very much involved in that bill, and very much concerned about it, because, as the bill comes to the floor of the Senate, it represents a complete misunderstanding, so far as the junior Senator from Oregon is concerned, as to what he at least thought was going to be the amendment for which he fought in committee to be incorporated in the bill. The amendment as written in the bill is entirely unacceptable by the Senator from Oregon. Therefore, I shall object to the bill when it is reached on the calendar.

I ask the Senator from Maryland, is it not true that the power which the bill seeks to make permanent already exists in the Military Establishment, and therefore it is not a "must" bill so far as an immediate timetable is concerned, because they have the power and have been exercising the power for some time to do the very thing the bill seeks to give them the power to do permanently.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, the statement of the Senator from Oregon is correct insofar as it deals only with the military. There are other departments of the Government to which up to the present the law does not extend. Let me say to the Senator from Oregon that I would be very glad to have one of the experts from the committee who had a part in drafting the amendment confer with the Senator from Oregon to see whether or not the amendment is in the shape that I think we all agreed to when the bill was in the committee.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, I have no objection to that, but so no one will misunderstand my position let me make clear my objection, and I can do it very quickly. I thought we were reaching an agreement that would give to the individual employee, as a matter of right, an appeal to the Civil Service Commission. I find now, as I read the final draft of the bill, that he gets an appeal to the Civil Service Commission only if some department head decides to consider him for a job after some other official of government has decreed that he is a bad security risk.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MORSE. No, not at the moment. I want it clearly understood for the record, Mr. President, that I will endeavor to preserve to any department head during this emergency, whether it is Justice or Treasury or Navy or Air Force or any place else where we say there is security sensitivity, the right to say that under no circumstances shall an official have to accept in his employment any person in whom he does not have complete confidence. But I am going to insist, so far as I am concerned, and within my power, on trying to secure an amendment under which once the official says that with regard to Mr. X, then Mr. X shall have a right to appeal that decision to the Civil Service Commission for the purpose of getting his record clear. Not for the purpose of coming back to work in the department that has decreed him to be a bad security risk, but for the purpose of having his record clear as to whether or not the department made a mistake on the evidence. It is an arbitrary power which I am not going to vote to give to any man in government without a check upon his judgment. In my judgment that cannot be reconciled with a fair hearing.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator from Oregon has expired.

Mr. WHERRY subsequently said: Mr. President, I desire to take time to state that after looking over House bill 7439, Calendar No. 2156, the bill to which the Senator from Maryland has referred, while it might need some modification, I am not sure about the point raised by the distinguished Senator from Oregon. As a general principle I am for the bill and I will do my level best to see that the bill, if it can be modified so as to suit everyone's wishes, is passed. It is a good bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The next bill on the calendar will be stated.

LAND RADIO MONITORING STATIONS

The bill (H. R. 4251) to amend section 4 (g) of the Communications Act of 1934 to permit the Federal Communications Commission to make expenditures for land for radio monitoring stations, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 4251) to amend section 4 (g) of the Communications Act of 1934 to permit the Federal Communications Commission to make expenditures for land for radio monitoring stations, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause, and insert:

That this act may be cited as "Communications Act Amendments, 1950."

SEC. 2 Subsection (o) of section 3 of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"(o) 'Broadcasting' means the dissemination of radio communications intended to be received directly by the general public."

SEC. 3. Section 3 of such act is further amended by adding after subsection (aa) the following:

"(bb) The term 'license,' 'station license,' or 'radio station license' means that instrument of authorization required by this act or the rules and regulations of the Commission made pursuant to this act, for the use or operation of apparatus for transmission of energy, or communications, or signals by radio, whatever name the instrument may be designated by the Commission.

"(cc) The term 'broadcast station,' 'broadcasting station,' or 'radio broadcast station' means a radio station equipped to engage in broadcasting as herein defined.

"(dd) The term 'construction permit' or 'permit for construction' means that instrument of authorization required by this act or the rules and regulations of the Commission made pursuant to this act for the installation of apparatus for the transmission of energy, or communications, or signals by radio, by whatever name the instrument may be designated by the Commission."

SEC. 4. (a) Subsection (b) of section 4 of such act, as amended, is amended by striking out the last two sentences thereof and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "Such Commissioners shall not engage in any other business, vocation, profession, or employment but this shall not apply to the preparation of technical or professional publications for which reasonable honorarium or compensation may be paid. Any such Commissioner serving as such after 1 year from the date of enactment of the Communications Act Amendments, 1950, shall not for a period of 1 year following the termination of his services as a Commissioner represent before the Commission in a professional capacity any person, including all persons under common control, subject to the provisions of this act, except that this restriction shall not apply to any Commissioner who has served the full term for which he was appointed. Not more than four members of the Commission shall be members of the same political party."

(b) Subsection (f) (1) of section 4 of such act is amended to read as follows:

"(f) (1) Without regard to the civil-service laws or the Classification Act of 1949, as amended, (1) the Commission may appoint and prescribe the duties and fix the salaries of a secretary, a chief engineer and not more than two assistants, a chief accountant and not more than two assistants, a general counsel and not more than two assistants, and counsel temporarily employed and designated by the Commission for the performance of specific special services; and (2) each Commissioner may appoint and prescribe the duties of a legal assistant at an annual salary not to exceed $10,000 and a secretary at an annual salary not to exceed $5,600. The chief engineer, the chief accountant, and the general counsel shall each receive an annual salary of not to exceed $11,200; the secretary shall receive an annual salary of not to exceed $10,000, and no assistant shall receive an annual salary in excess of $10,000: Provided, That on and after 1 year from the date of enactment of Communications Act amendments, 1950, the secretary of the Commission, the chief engineer and his assistants, the chief accountant and his assistants, the general counsel and his assistants, and the legal assistants to each Commissioner shall not, for the period of 1 year next following the cessation of their employment with the Commission, represent before the Commission in a professional capacity any person, including all persons under common control, subject to the provisions of this act. The Commission shall have authority subject to the provisions of the civil-service laws and the Classification Act of 1949, as amended, to appoint such other officers, engineers, accountants, attorneys, inspectors, examiners, and other employees as are necessary in the execution of its functions."

(c) The first sentence of subsection (g) of section 4 of such act, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"(g) The Commission may make such expenditures (including expenditures for rent and personal services at the seat of Government and elsewhere, for office supplies, law books, periodicals, and books of reference, for printing and binding, for land for use as sites for radio monitoring stations and related facilities, including living quarters where necessary in remote areas, for the construction of such stations and facilities, and for the improvement, furnishing, equipping, and repairing of such stations and facilities and of laboratories and other related facilities (including construction of minor subsidiary buildings and structures not exceeding $25,000 in any one instance) used in connection with technical research activities, as may be necessary for the execution of the functions vested in the Commission and as from time to time may be appropriated for by Congress."

(d) Subsection (k) of section 4 of such act is amended to read as follows:

"(k) The Commission shall make an annual report to Congress, copies of which shall be distributed as are other reports transmitted to Congress. Such reports shall contain—

"(1) such information and data collected by the Commission as may be considered of value in the determination of questions connected with the regulation of interstate and foreign wire and radio communication and radio transmission of energy.

"(2) such information and data concerning the functioning of the Commission as will be of value to Congress in appraising the amount and character of the work and accomplishments of the Commission and the adequacy of its staff and equipment: Provided, That the first and second annual reports following the date of enactment of Communications Act Amendments, 1950, shall set forth in detail the number and caption of pending applications requesting approval of transfer of control or assignment of a station license, or construction permits for new stations, or for increases in power, or for changes of frequency of existing stations at the beginning and end af the period covered by such reports;

"(3) information with respect to all persons taken into the employment of the Commission during the year covered by the report, including names, pertinent biographical data and experience, Commission positions held and compensation paid, together with the names of those persons who have left the employ of the Commission during such year: Provided, That the first annual report following the date of enactment of Communications Act Amendments, 1950, shall contain such information with respect to all persons in the employ of the Commission at the close of the year for which the report is made;

"(4) an itemized statement of all funds expended during the preceding year by the Commission, of the sources of such funds, and of the authority in this act or elsewhere under which such expenditures were made; and

"(5) specific recommendations to Congress as to additional legislation which the Commission deems necessary or desirable, including all legislative proposals submitted for approval to the Director of the Budget."

SEC. 5. Section 5 of such act, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"ORGANIZATION OF THE COMMISSION

"SEC. 5. (a) The member of the Commission designated by the President as Chairman shall be the chief executive officer of the Commission. It shall be his duty to preside at all meetings and sessions of the Commission, to represent the Commission in all matters relating to legislation and legislative reports, to represent the Commission in all matters requiring conferences or communications with other governmental officers, departments or agencies, and generally to coordinate and organize the work of the Commission in such manner as to promote prompt and efficient disposition of all matters within the jurisdiction of the Commission. In the case of a vacancy in the office of the Chairman of the Commission, or the absence or inability of the Chairman to serve, the Commission may temporarily designate and appoint one of its members to act as Chairman until the cause or circumstance requiring such service shall have been eliminated or corrected.

"(b) Within 60 days after the enactment of the Communications Act amendments, 1950, and from time to time thereafter as the Commission may find necessary, the Commission shall organize its legal, engineering, and accounting staff into (1) integrated divisions, to function on the basis of the Commission's principal work-load operations; and (2) into such other divisional organizations as the Commission may deem necessary to handle that part of its work load which cuts across more than one integrated division or which does not lend itself to the integrated division set-up. Each such integrated division and divisional organization shall include such legal, engineering, accounting, administrative, and clerical personnel as the Commission may determine to be necessary to perform its functions. The general counsel, the chief engineer, and the chief accountant and their respective assistants shall carry out their respective duties under such rules and regulations as the Commission may prescribe. The Commission shall establish a staff, directly responsible to it, which shall include such legal, engineering, and accounting personnel as the Commission deems necessary, whose duty shall be to prepare such drafts of Commission decisions, orders, and other memoranda as the Commission, in the exercise of its quasi-judicial duties, may from time to time direct: Provided, That no member of such staff shall participate in a hearing or represent the Commission, directly or indirectly, in any prosecutory or investigatory function or proceeding.

"(c) Except as provided in section 409 hereof, the Commission, when necessary to the proper functioning of the Commission and the prompt and orderly conduct of its business, is hereby authorized and directed to assign or refer any portion of its work, business, or functions to an individual Commissioner or Commissioners or to a board composed of one or more employees of the Commission, to be designated by such order for action thereon, and by its further order at any time to amend, modify, or rescind any such order or reference: Provided, That this authority shall not extend to duties otherwise specifically imposed by this or any other act of Congress. Any order, decision, or report made or other action taken pursuant to any such order or reference shall have the same force and effect and may be made, evidenced, and enforced as is made by the Commission: Provided, however, That any person aggrieved by any such order, decision, or report may file a petition for review by the Commission, and every such petition shall be passed upon by the Commission. The secretary and seal of the Commission shall be the secretary and seal of such individual Commissioner or board.

"(d) Meetings of the Commission shall be held at regular intervals, not less frequently than once each calendar month, at which times the functioning of the Commission and the handling of its work load shall be reviewed and such orders shall be entered and other action taken as may be necessary or appropriate to expedite the prompt and orderly conduct of the business of the Commission with the objective of rendering a final decision (1) within 3 months from the date of filing in all original application, renewal, and transfer cases and (2) within 6 months from the final date of the hearing in all hearing cases; and the Commission shall promptly report to the Congress each such case which has been pending before it more than such 3- or 6-month period, respectively, stating the reasons therefor."

SEC. 6. Subsection (d) of section 307 of such act is amended to read as follows:

"(d) No license granted for the operation of a broadcasting station shall be for a longer term than 3 years and no license so granted for any other class of station shall be for a longer term than 5 years, and any license granted may be revoked as hereinafter provided. Upon the expiration of any license, upon application therefor, a renewal of such license may be granted from time to time for a term of not to exceed 3 years in the case of broadcasting licenses and not to exceed 5 years in the case of other licenses if the Commission finds that public interest, convenience, and necessity would be served thereby."

SEC. 7. So much of subsection (a) of section 308 of such act as precedes the second proviso is amended to read as follows: "The Commission may grant instruments of authorization entitling the holders thereof to construct or operate apparatus for the transmission of energy, or communications, or signals by radio or modifications or renewals thereof, only upon written application therefor received by it: Provided, That (1) in cases of emergency found by the Commission involving danger to life or property or due to damage to equipment, or (2) during the continuance of any war in which the United States is engaged and when such action is necessary for the national defense or security or otherwise in furtherance of the war effort, the Commission may grant and issue authority to construct or operate apparatus for the transmission of energy or communications or signals by radio during the emergency so found by the Commission or during the continuance of any such war, in such manner and upon such terms and conditions as the Commission shall by regulation prescribe, and without the filing of a formal application, but no such authority shall be granted for a period beyond the period of the emergency requiring it nor remain effective beyond such period."

SEC. 8. Section 309 of such act, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"HEARINGS ON APPLICATIONS FOR LICENSES; FORM OF LICENSES; CONDITIONS ATTACHED TO LICENSES

"SEC. 309. (a) If upon examination of any application provided for in section 308 the Commission shall determine that public interest, convenience, and necessity would be served by the granting thereof, it shall authorize the issuance of the instrument of authorization for which application is made in accordance with said finding.

"(b) If upon examination of any such application the Commission is unable to make the finding specified in subsection (a) of this section, it shall forthwith notify the applicant and other known parties in interest of the grounds and reasons for its inability to make such finding. Such notice, which shall precede formal designation for a hearing, shall advise the applicant and all other known parties in interest of all objections made to the application as well as the source and nature of such objections. Following such notice, the applicant shall be given an opportunity to reply. If the Commission, after considering such reply, shall be unable to make the finding specified in subsection (a) of this section, it shall formally designate the application for hearing on the grounds or reasons then obtaining and shall notify the applicant and all other known parties in interest of such action and the grounds and reasons therefor, specifying with particularity the matters and things in issue but not including issues or requirements phrased generally. The parties in interest, if any, who are not notified by the Commission of its action with respect to a particular application may acquire the status of a party to the proceeding thereon by filing a petition for intervention showing the basis for their interest at any time not less than 10 days prior to the date of hearing. Any hearing subsequently held upon such application shall be a full hearing in which the applicant and all other parties in interest shall be permitted to participate but in which both the burden of proceeding with the introduction of evidence upon any issue specified by the Commission, as well as the burden of proof upon all such issues, shall be upon the applicant.

"(c) When any instrument of authorization is granted by the Commission without a hearing as provided in subsection (a) hereof, such grant shall remain subject to protest as hereinafter provided for a period of 30 days. During such 30-day period any party in interest may file a protest under oath directed to such grant and request a hearing on said application so granted. Any protest so filed shall contain such allegations of fact as will show the protestant to be a party in interest and shall specify with particularity the facts, matters, and things relied upon, but shall not include issues or allegations phrased generally. The Commission shall, within 15 days from the date of the filing of such protest, enter findings as to whether such protest meets the foregoing requirements and if it so finds the application involved shall be set for hearing upon the issues set forth in said protest, together with such further specific issues, if any, as may be prescribed by the Commission. In any hearing subsequently held upon such application all issues specified by the Commission shall be tried in the same manner provided in subsection (b) hereof but with respect of all issues set forth in the protest and not specifically adopted by the Commission, both the burden of proceeding with the introduction of evidence and the burden of proof shall be upon the protestant. The hearing and determination of cases arising under this subsection shall be expedited by the Commission and pending hearing and decision the effective date of the Commission's action to which protest is made shall be postponed to the effective date of the Commission's decision after hearing, unless the authorization involved is necessary to the maintenance or conduct of an existing service, in which event the Commission shall authorize the applicant to utilize the facilities or authorization in question pending the Commission's decision after hearing.

"(d) Such station licenses as the Commission may grant shall be in such general form as it may prescribe, but each license shall contain, in addition to other provisions, a statement of the following conditions to which such license shall be subject: (1) The station license shall not vest in the licensee any right to operate the station nor any right in the use of the frequencies designated in the license beyond the term thereof nor in any other manner than authorized therein; (2) neither the license nor the right granted thereunder shall be assigned or otherwise transferred in violation of this act; (3) every license issued under this act shall be subject in terms to the right of use or control conferred by section 606 hereof."

SEC. 9. Subsection (b) of section 310 of said act is amended to read as follows:

"(b) No instrument of authorization granted by the Commission entitling the holder thereof to construct or to operate radio apparatus and no rights granted thereunder shall be transferred, assigned, or disposed of in any manner, voluntarily or involuntarily, directly or indirectly, or by transfer of control of any corporation holding such instrument of authorization, to any person except upon application to the Commission and upon finding by the Commission that the proposed transferee or assignee possesses the qualifications required of an original permittee or licensee. The procedure for handling such application shall be that provided in section 309."

SEC. 10. Section 311 of such act, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 311. The Commission is hereby directed to refuse a station license and/or the permit hereinafter required for the construction of a station to any person (or to any person directly or indirectly controlled by such person) whose license has been revoked by a court under section 313."

SEC. 11. Section 312 of such act, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"REVOCATION OF LICENSES; CEASE-AND-DESIST ORDERS

"SEC. 312. (a) Any station license may be revoked (1) because of conditions coming to the attention of the Commission since the granting of such license which would have warranted the Commission in refusing to grant such license, or (2) for violation or failure to observe any of the restrictions or provisions of a treaty ratified by the United States, or (3) for violation of or failure to observe the terms and conditions of any cease-and-desist order issued by the Commission pursuant to subsection (b) hereof. The Commission may institute a revocation proceeding by serving upon the licensee an order to show cause why its license should not be revoked. Said orders shall contain a statement of the particulars and matters with respect to which the Commission is inquiring and shall call upon the licensee to appear before the Commission at a time and place therein stated, but in no event less than thirty days after receipt of such notice, and give evidence upon the matter specified in said order: Provided, That where safety of life or property is involved, the Commission may by order provide for a shorter period of notice. If, after hearing, or a waiver thereof by the licensee, the Commission determines that a revocation order should issue, it shall make a report in writing stating the findings of the Commission and the grounds and reasons therefor and shall cause the same to be served on said licensee, together with such order.

"(b) Where any person (1) has failed to operate substantially as set forth in an instrument of authorization, or (2) has failed to observe any of the restrictions and conditions of this act or of a treaty ratified by the United States, or (3) has violated or failed to observe any rule or regulation of the Commission authorized by this act, the Commission may institute a proceeding by serving upon such person an order to show cause why it should not cease and desist from such action. Said order shall contain a statement of the particulars and matters with respect to which the Commission is inquiring and shall call upon such person to appear before the Commission at a time and place therein stated, but in no event less than 30 days after receipt of such notice, and give evidence upon the matter specified in said order. If, after hearing, or a waiver thereof by such person, the Commission determines that a cease-and-desist order should issue, it shall make a report in writing stating the findings of the Commission and the grounds and reasons therefor and shall cause the same to be served on said person, together with such order."

SEC. 12. Part I of title III of such act is amended by adding the following new section:

(a) Any station license granted under the provisions of this act or the construction permit required thereby may be modified by the Commission either for a limited time or for the duration of the term thereof, if in the judgment of the Commission such action will promote the public interest, convenience, and necessity, or the provisions of this act or of any treaty ratified by the United States will be more fully complied with: Provided, That no such order of modification shall become final until the holder of such outstanding license or permit shall have been notified in writing of the proposed action and the grounds and reasons therefor, and shall have been given reasonable opportunity, in no event less than 30 days, to show cause by public hearing, if requested, why such order of modification should not issue: Provided, That where safety of life or property is involved, the Commission may by order provide for a shorter period of notice.

"(b) In any case where a hearing is conducted pursuant to the provisions of this section or section 312, both the burden of proceeding with the introduction of evidence and the burden of proof shall be upon the Commission."

When application is made for renewal of an existing license, which cannot be disposed of by the Commission under the provisions of section 309 (a) hereof, the Commission shall employ the procedure specified in section 309 (b) hereof, except that in any hearing subsequently held upon such application the burden of proceeding with the evidence and of substantiating the grounds and reasons specified by the Commission in the formal notice of hearing issued pursuant to section 309 (b) hereof shall be upon the appropriate division established by the Commission under the provisions of section 5 (b) hereof or upon any party or parties who may oppose such renewal; but as a condition precedent to the renewal the Commission shall affirmatively find that the public interest, convenience and necessity will be served by such renewal. Pending such hearing and final decision pursuant thereto the Commission shall continue such license in effect."

SEC. 14. The heading of section 401 of such act is amended to read: "Jurisdiction to enforce act and orders of Commission; declaratory orders" and such section is amended by adding at the end thereof a new subsection (e) as follows:

"(e) The Commission is authorized, in its sound discretion and with like effect as in the case of other orders, to issue a declaratory order to terminate a controversy or remove uncertainty. Notwithstanding the provisions of section 5 (d) of the act of June 11, 1946 (60 Stat. 239) declaratory orders shall be issued only upon the petition of, and after notice to and opportunity for hearing by, persons who are bona fide applicants for, or the holders of, construction permits or licenses, or otherwise subject to the jurisdiction of the Commission, and shall not bind or affect the rights of persons who are not parties of such proceedings. Such orders shall be available to declare rights and other legal relations arising under the provisions of any treaty ratified by the United States, under any provision of this act, or under any order, rule, regulation, term, condition, limitation, or requirement issued, promulgated, or adopted by the Commission, whether or not involving failure to comply therewith."

SEC. 15. Section 402 of such act is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 402. (a) The provisions of the act of June 25, 1948 (62 Stat. 992), as amended, relating to the enforcing or setting aside of orders of the Interstate Commerce Commission are hereby made applicable to suits to enforce, enjoin, set aside, annual, or suspend any order of the Commission under this act (except those appealable under the provisions of subsection (b) hereof), and such suits are hereby authorized to be brought as provided in that act. In addition to the venues specified in that act, suits to enjoin, set aside, annul, or suspend, but not to enforce, any such order of the Commission may also be brought in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia.

"(b) Appeals may be taken from decisions and orders of the Commission to the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia in any of the following cases:

"(1) By any applicant for any instrument of authorization required by this act, or the regulations of the Commission made pursuant to this act, for the construction or operation of apparatus for the transmission of energy, or communications, or signals by radio, whose application is denied by the Commission.

"(2) By any applicant for the renewal or modification of any such instrument of authorization whose application is denied by the Commission.

"(3) By any party to an application for authority to assign any such instrument of authorization or to transfer control of any corporation holding such instrument of authorization whose application is denied by the Commission.

"(4) By any applicant for the permit required by section 325 of this act whose application has been denied by the Commission or any permittee under said section whose permit has been revoked by the Commission.

"(5) By the holder of any instrument of authorization required by this act, or the regulations of the Commission made pursuant to this act, for the construction or operation of apparatus for the transmission of energy, or communications or signals by radio, which instrument has been modified or revoked by the Commission.

"(6) By any other person who is aggrieved or whose interests are adversely affected by any order of the Commission granting or denying any application described in paragraphs (1), (2), (3), and (4) hereof.

"(7) By any person upon whom an order to cease and desist has been served under section 312 (b) of this act.

"(8) By any party to a proceeding under section 401 who is aggrieved or whose interests are adversely affected by a declaratory order entered by the Commission.

"(9) By any radio operator whose license has been suspended by the Commission.

"(c) Such appeal shall be taken by filing a notice of appeal with the court within 30 days after the entry of the order complained of. Such notice of appeal shall contain a concise statement of the nature of the proceedings as to which the appeal is taken; a concise statement of the reasons on which the appellant intends to rely, separately stated and numbered; and proof of service of a true copy of said notice and statement upon the Commission. Upon filing of such notice, the court shall have exclusive jurisdiction of the proceedings and of the questions determined therein and shall have power, by order, directed to the Commission or any other party to the appeal, to grant such temporary relief as it may deem just and proper. Orders granting temporary relief may be either affirmative or negative in their scope and application so as to permit either the maintenance of the status quo in the matter in which the appeal is taken or the restoration of a position or status terminated or adversely affected by the order appealed from and shall, unless otherwise ordered by the court, be effective pending hearing and determination of said appeal and compliance by the Commission with the final judgment of the court rendered in said appeal.

"(d) Upon the filing of any such notice of appeal the Commission shall, not later than 5 days after the date of service upon it, notify each person shown by the records of the Commission to be interested in said appeal of the filing and pendency of the same and shall thereafter permit any such person to inspect and make copies of said notice and statement of reasons therefor at the office of the Commission in the city of Washington. Within 30 days after the filing of an appeal, the Commission shall file with the court a copy of the order complained of, a full statement in writing of the facts and grounds relied upon by it in support of the order involved upon said appeal, and the originals or certified copies of all papers and evidence presented to and considered by it in entering said order.

"(e) Within 30 days after the filing of an appeal any interested person may intervene and participate in the proceedings had upon said appeal by filing with the court a notice of intention to intervene and a verified statement showing the nature of the interest of such party, together with proof of service of true copies of said notice and statement, both upon appellant and upon the Commission. Any person who would be aggrieved or whose interest would be adversely affected by a reversal or modification of the order of the Commission complained of shall be considered an interested party.

"(f) The record and briefs upon which any such appeal shall be heard and determined by the court shall contain such information and material, and shall be prepared within such time and in such manner as the court may by rule prescribe.

"(g) At the earliest convenient time the court shall hear and determine the appeal upon the record before it in the manner prescribed by section 10 (e) of the act of June 11, 1946 (60 Stat. 243).

"(h) In the event that the court shall render a decision and enter an order reversing the order of the Commission, it shall remand the case to the Commission to carry out the judgment of the court and it shall be the duty of the Commission, in the absence of the proceedings to review such judgment, to forthwith give effect thereto, and unless otherwise ordered by the court, to do so upon the basis of the proceedings already had and the record upon which said appeal was heard and determined.

"(i) The court may, in its discretion, enter judgment for costs in favor of or against an appellant, or other interested parties intervening in said appeal, but not against the Commission, depending upon the nature of the issues involved upon said appeal and the outcome thereof.

"(j) The court's judgment shall be final, subject, however, to review by the Supreme Court of the United States as hereinafter provided—

"(1) an appeal may be taken direct to the Supreme Court of the United States in any case wherein the jurisdiction of the court is invoked, or sought to be invoked, for the purpose of reviewing any decision or order entered by the Commission in proceedings instituted by the Commission which have as their object and purpose the revocation of an existing license or any decision or order entered by the Commission in proceedings which involve the failure or refusal of the Commission to renew an existing license. Such appeal shall be taken by the filing of an application therefor or notice thereof within 30 days after the entry of the judgment sought to be reviewed, and in the event such an appeal is taken the record shall be made up and the case docketed in the Supreme Court of the United States within 60 days from the time such an appeal is allowed under such rules as may be prescribed.

"(2) in all other cases, review by the Supreme Court of the United States shall be upon writ of certiorari on petition therefor under section 240 of the Judicial Code, as amended, by the appellant, by the Commission, or by any interested party intervening in the appeal, or by certification by the court pursuant to the provision of section 239 of the Judicial Code, as amended."

SEC. 16. The heading of section 405 of such act is amended to read: "Rehearings before Commission" and such section is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 405. (a) After a decision, order, or requirement has been made by the Commission in any proceeding, any party thereto, or any other person aggrieved or whose interests are adversely affected thereby, may petition for rehearing. Petitions for rehearing must be filed within 30 days from the entry of any decision, order, or requirement complained of except for those cases in which the decision, order, or requirement challenged is necessary for the maintenance or conduct of an existing service, the filing of such a petition shall automatically stay the effective date thereof until after decision on said petition. The filing of a petition for rehearing shall not be a condition precedent to judicial review of any such decision, order, or requirement, except where the party seeking such review was not a party to the proceedings resulting in such decision, order, or requirement, or where the party seeking such review relies on questions of fact or law upon which the Commission has been afforded no opportunity to pass. Rehearings shall be governed by such general rules as the Commission may establish: Provided, That, except for newly discovered evidence or evidence otherwise available only since the original taking of evidence, no evidence shall be taken on any rehearing. The time within which an appeal must be taken under section 402 (a) hereof shall be computed from the date upon which orders are entered disposing of all petitions for rehearing filed in any case, but any decision, order, or requirement made after such rehearing reversing, changing, or modifying the original determination shall be subject to the same provisions with respect to rehearing as an original order."

SEC. 17. Section 409 (a) of such act is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 409. (a) Notwithstanding the provisions of section 7 (a) of the act of June 11, 1946 (60 Stat. 241), all cases in which a hearing is required by the provisions of this act or by other applicable provisions of law shall be conducted by the Commission or by one or more examiners provided for in section 11 of the act of June 11, 1946 (60 Stat. 244), designated by the Commission. The officer or officers presiding at any such hearing shall have the same authority and duties exercised in the same manner and subject to the same conditions specified in section 7 of that act.

"(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of section 8 of the act of June 11, 1946 (60 Stat. 242), the officer or officers conducting a hearing shall prepare and file an intermediate report. In all such cases the Commission shall permit the filing of exceptions to such intermediate report by any party to the proceeding and shall, upon request, hear oral argument on such exceptions before the entry of any final decision, order, or requirement. All decisions, including the intermediate report, shall become a part of the record and shall include a statement of (1) findings and conclusions, as well as the basis therefor, upon all material issues of fact, law, or discretion, presented on the record; and (2) the appropriate decision, order, or requirement.

"(c) Notwithstanding the provisions of section 5 (c) of the act of June 11, 1946 (60 Stat. 239), no officer conducting a hearing pursuant to (a) and (b) hereof shall, except to the extent required for the disposition of ex parte matters as authorized by law, consult any person or party on any fact or question of law in issue, unless upon notice and opportunity for all parties to participate; nor shall such officer be responsible to or subject to the supervision or direction of any other person engaged in the performance of investigative, prosecuting, or other functions for the Commission or any other agency of the Government. No person or persons engaged in the performance of investigative or prosecuting functions for the Commission or for any other agency of the Government shall participate or advise in the proceedings described in (a) and (b) hereof, except as a witness or counsel in public proceedings. The Commission shall not employ attorneys or other persons for the purpose of reviewing transcripts or preparing intermediate reports of final decisions, except that this shall not apply to the review staff provided by subsection 5 (b) and to legal assistants assigned separately to a Commission member who may, for such Commission member, review such transcripts and prepare such drafts. No intermediate report shall be reviewed either before or after its publication by any person other than a member of the Commission or his legal assistant, as above provided, and no examiner, who conducts a hearing, shall advise or consult with the Commission with respect to his intermediate report or with respect to exceptions taken to his findings, rulings, or recommendations."

(b) Subsections (b), (c), (d), (e), (f), (g), (h), (i), and (j) of section 409 are amended to read subsections (d), (e), (f), (g), (h), (i), (j), (k), and (l), respectively.

SEC. 18. Section 414 of such act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following: "Except as specifically provided in this act the provisions of the act of June 11, 1946 (60 Stat. 237), shall apply in all proceedings under this act."

SEC. 20. If any provision of this act or the application thereof to any person or circumstance is held invalid, the remainder of the act and the application of such provision to other persons or circumstances shall not be affected thereby.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "An act to further amend the Communications Act of 1934."

Mr. McFARLAND. Mr. President, I move that the Senate insist upon its amendment, request a conference thereon with the House, and that the Chair appoint conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Presiding Officer appointed Mr. McFARLAND, Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado, Mr. HUNT, Mr. TOBEY, and Mr. CAPEHART conferees on the part of the Senate.

In the event the marriage between the above-named parties does not occur within 3 months after entry of said Hisako Okamoto, she shall be required to depart from the United States and upon failure to do so shall be deported in accordance with the provisions of sections 19 and 20 of the Immigration Act of February 5, 1917 (U. MIJU ISERI TSUDA

The bill (H. R. 2462) for the relief of Miju Iseri Tsuda was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GRACE G. WALKER

The bill (H. R. 2808) for the relief of Grace G. Walker was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of the bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. An explanation is desired. The Chair recognizes the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN].

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, this is a bill to reimburse a woman for the damage done to her greenhouse located adjacent to an Army modification center, the amount involving $16,000, most of which is for reglazing.

In the early days of the war the Army contracted with Consolidated Vultee to operate a bomber modification center. In said contract, the Government agreed to hold Consolidated harmless for any damage to property arising out of operation of the modification center. The claimant operated a greenhouse adjacent to the center, and claims that the vibrations from the big bombers as they were taxiing around the field damaged the glass in her greenhouse. The House report contains proof of damage. The question of whether the woman should proceed against Consolidated or directly against the Government seems of relative unimportance since, by its contract with Consolidated, the Army would have to make good any claim which Consolidated paid the claimant.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill (H. R. 2808) was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. McFARLAND. Mr. President, I am going to have to insist that the rule be followed from now on. There are many bills on the calendar; and if we permit any Senator to take more than 5 minutes on any bill, it will be impossible for us to conclude the calendar this evening. For that reason, I shall have to insist that the rule be followed.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, of course, under the rule any Senator may take 5 minutes on any measure or on each amendment thereto.

Also, let me say that when we approach the measures at the end of the calendar, I do not believe we should be asked to pass upon bills on which no reports have been made to the Senate.

So I shall ask unanimous consent that when we reach the bills on which no reports have been submitted to the Senate, as a result of which Senators have no opportunity even to see the reports, we end the call of the calendar, and then take up the bills which previously have been ordered to be placed at the foot of the calendar.

Mr. McFARLAND. I shall not object to having that done.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, I concur completely with the Senator from Nebraska, and I wish to commend the Senator from Arizona for urging the enforcement of the rule. It has been violated consistently during the afternoon, despite the length of the calendar. To violate the rule does not expedite the handling of the business of the Senate.

ED HOWARD RUSSELL

The bill (H. R. 6709) for the relief of Ed Howard Russell was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of the bill?

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, this claim is to compensate the driver of a privately owned truck and trailer that was struck by an Army truck that was part of a convoy. There is no question of the liability of the Government in this case, inasmuch as the Army truck was engaged on official business at that time. The claimant was 35 years of age at the time of his injury, was married, and had two children; and as a result of the accident, he has lost the entire use of his arm, and amputation has been recommended. He has incurred over $600 in hospital and medical expenses, and it has been suggested that his arm be amputated, which operation will cost an additional $400. He formerly earned about $55 a week, and is presently employed by his regular employer, as a night watchman, at $20 a week.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Let me inquire whether there is any objection from the Army or from the Bureau of the Budget in regard to this measure?

Mr. McCARRAN. There is none.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill (H. R. 6709) was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Upon the enactment of this act, the Secretary of State shall instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct the required numbers from the appropriate quota for the first year that such quota is available.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

JURISDICTION IN CLAIMS OF PATUXENT DEVELOPMENT CO.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 6363) conferring jurisdiction on the United States District Court for the Middle District of North Carolina to hear, determine, and render judgment upon certain claims of the Patuxent Development Co., Inc., which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That jurisdiction is hereby conferred upon the United States District Court for the Middle District of North Carolina to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claims of the Patuxent Development Co., Inc., of Southern Pines, N. C., against the United States for damages, if any, sustained by reason of the allegedly tortious use and occupancy between August 17, 1943, and August 31, 1943, inclusive, of the Pine Needles Hotel property, at Southern Pines, N. C., by the Army Air Forces Technical Training Command under contract No. W202 eng-16862, dated March 3, 1942.

SEC. 2. Notwithstanding any statute of limitations or lapse of time, suit upon such claim may be instituted at any time within 1 year after the enactment of this act. FRANK J. BOUDINOT

The bill (S. 827) to amend the act of June 16, 1934, to provide for allowances to the heirs, representatives, and assigns of Frank J. Boudinot, deceased, in the event of favorable determination by the Indian Claims Commission of certain claims of the Cherokee Indians, was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, let me say that I think there should be a ceiling on the allowance. So I wish to submit an amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. First of all, the question is whether there is objection to the present consideration of the bill.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with amendments, on page 2, beginning in line 11, after "(47 Stat. 137)," to strike out "or upon final determination of any claim, accruing under authority of such acts, or either of such acts, by the Indian Claims Commission pursuant to the act entitled 'An act to create an Indian Claims Commission, to provide for the powers, duties, and functions thereof, and for other purposes,' approved August 13, 1946; and" and insert "or upon final determination by the Indian Claims Commission of any claim of the said Indians, sometimes known as the 'Cherokee Nation', or by any class, classes, or bands thereof, under the authority of the act entitled 'An act to create an Indian Claims Commission, to provide for the powers, duties, and functions thereof, and for other purposes', approved August 13, 1946 (60 Stat. 1049); and" and on page 3, in line 20, after the word "thereunder", to strike out the period, and insert a colon and the following: "Provided further, That such allowances shall not be construed as a basis for any claim against the United States."

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, at the end of the bill, I propose the following amendment: Add a semicolon and the words "Provided further, That the allowance in the aggregate shall not exceed $100,000."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. McCARRAN. I have no objection.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no further amendment to be proposed, the question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill (S. 827) was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act entitled "An act authorizing and directing the Court of Claims, in the event of judgment or judgments in favor of the Cherokee Indians, or any of them, in suits by them against the United States under the acts of March 19, 1924, and April 25, 1932, to include in its decrees allowances to Frank J. Boudinot, not exceeding 5 percent of such recoveries, and for other purposes," approved June 16, 1934, is hereby amended to read as follows: "That in compliance with request of the Cherokee Indians, the Court of Claims or the Indian Claims Commission, as the case may be—

"(1) upon final determination by the Court of Claims of any suit or suits against the United States by the said Indians, sometimes known as the Cherokee Nation, or by any class, classes, or bands thereof, commenced and prosecuted under the authority of the acts of Congress approved March 19, 1924 (43 Stat. 27), and/or April 25, 1932 (47 Stat. 137), or upon final determination by the Indian Claims Commission of any claim of the said Indians, sometimes known as the Cherokee Nation, or by any class, classes, or bands thereof, under the authority of the act entitled 'An act to create an Indian Claims Commission, to provide for the powers, duties and functions thereof, and for other purposes,' approved August 13, 1946 (60 Stat. 1049); and

"(2) in the event that judgment or judgments shall be rendered by the Court of Claims in favor of said Indians, or any of them, or that favorable determination shall be given by the Indian Claims Commission to any such claim presented to the Commission; is hereby authorized and directed to include in its decrees, or favorable determinations of any such claims, allowances to the heirs, personal representatives, or assigns, of Frank J. Boudinot, deceased, a former member of the Cherokee Tribe of Indians, who for many years was active in pressing the claims of the Cherokees against the United States by their request and direction and at his own expense, of a reasonable percentage, not to exceed 5 percent, of the amount allowed with respect to any such claim: Provided, That such allowances to the heirs, personal representatives, or assigns, of the said Frank J. Boudinot shall be in addition to any and all fees and expenses authorized by said acts of Congress, of March 19, 1924, April 25, 1932, and August 13, 1946; and this act shall not be construed to affect in any way the contracts with attorneys entered into thereunder: Provided further, That such allowances shall not be construed as a basis for any claim against the United States: Provided further, That the allowance in the aggregate shall not exceed $100,000."

JURISDICTION IN CLAIM OF LOUIS J. MARX

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 4528) to confer jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claim of Louis J. Marx, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause, and insert:

That, notwithstanding the provisions of title 28, United States Code, section 2680, jurisdiction is hereby conferred upon the United States District Court for the southern district of New York to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claim of Louis J. Marx, New York, N. Y., against the United States on account of personal injuries sustained allegedly as a result of an assault by a soldier in the United States Army.

SEC. 2. Notwithstanding any statute of limitations or lapse of time, suit upon such claim may be instituted within any time of 1 year of the enatctment of this act. In any such suit brought pursuant to this act, proceedings shall be had and the liability, if any, of the United States shall be determined in accordance with the provisions of law applicable in the case of tort claims against the United States (U. S. C., title 28, sec. 1346 (b)): Provided, however, That nothing in this act does or shall constitute an admission of liability on the part of the United States.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Mr. President, I should like to ask the distinguished Senator how the bill will help the claimant, since the Government will not be liable for the events, under the Tort Claims Act?

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, the bill would give him a right of action, regardless of the Tort Claims Act.

Let me say, in further explanation, and in further reply to the Senator, that the bill confers jurisdiction on the United States District Court to hear, determine and render judgment on this claim growing out of an altercation between this 70-year-old man and a United States soldier.

The altercation, which occurred on or near a United States Army motor pool in New York City, resulted in a hip injury requiring the expenditure of an amount in excess of $10,000; and permanent disability is alleged. Several judicial determinations must be made, and the United States District Court is equipped to make them.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. I thank the Senator. I thought that one phase of this matter should be cleared up, because some of us have thought the question should be raised and cleared.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no further amendment to be proposed, the question is on the engrossment of the amendment and third reading of the bill.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "An act conferring jurisdiction on the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claim of Louis J. Marx."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. DOUGLAS. In checking my copy of the calendar, I do not find a report for this bill. Let me ask whether a report on it has been filed.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Mr. President, what is the calendar number of the bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is Calendar No. 2140.

Mr. DOUGLAS. The report is not in my copy of the calendar, but I now find that a report was filed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill (S. 3959) was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the parenthetical expression appearing in clause (1) of the final sentence of subsection (a) of section 109 of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949 (Public Law 152, 81st Cong.) is amended to read as follows: "(including the purchase from or through the Public Printer, for warehouse issue, of standard forms, blank-book work, standard specifications, and other printed material in common use by Federal agencies not available through the Superintendent of Documents)".

(b) The third sentence of subsection (b) of section 109 of such act is amended to read as follows: "On and after such date, such prices shall be fixed at levels so as to recover so far as practicable the applicable purchase price, the transportation cost to first storage point, inventory losses, the cost of personal services employed directly in the repair, rehabilitation, and conversion of personal property, and the cost of amortization and repair of equipment utilized for lease or rent to executive agencies."

(c) The amendments made by this section shall be effective on the date, not earlier than July 1, 1950, on which the Administrator of General Services shall determine that appropriated funds adequate to effectuate the purposes of such amendments have been made available.

SEC. 3. (a) The final sentence of subsection (b) of section 109 of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949 is amended to read as follows: "Where an advance of funds is not made, the General Services Adminstration shall be reimbursed promptly out of funds of the requisitioning agency in accordance with accounting procedures approved by the Comptroller General: Provided, That in any case where payment shall not have been made by the requisitioning agency within 45 days after the date of billing by the Administrator or the date on which an actual liability for supplies or services is incurred by the Administrator, whichever is the later, reimbursement may be obtained by the Administrator by the issuance of transfer and counterwarrants, or other lawful transfer documents, supported by itemized invoices."

(b) Section 109 of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(g) Whenever any producer or vendor shall tender any article or commodity for sale to the General Services Administration or to any procurement authority acting under the direction and control of the Administrator pursuant to this act, the Administrator is authorized in his discretion, with the consent of such producer or vendor, to cause to be conducted, in such manner as the Administrator shall specify, such tests as he shall prescribe to determine whether such article or commodity conforms to prescribed specifications and standards. When the Administrator determines that the making of such tests will serve predominantly the interest of such producer or vendor, he shall charge such producer or vendor a fee which shall be fixed by the Administrator in such amount as will recover the cost of conducting such tests, including all components of such cost, determined in accordance with accepted accounting principles. When the Administrator determines that the making of such tests will not serve predominantly the interest of such producer or vendor, he shall charge such producer or vendor such fee as he shall determine to be reasonable for the furnishing of such testing service. All such fees collected by the Administrator may be deposited in the General Supply Fund to be used for any purpose authorized by subsection 109 (a) of this act."

SEC. 4. Paragraphs (1) and (2) of section 203 (j) of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949 are amended to read as follows:

"(1) Under such regulations as he may prescribe, the Administrator is authorized in his discretion to donate for educational purposes or public health purposes, including research, in the States, Territories, and possessions without cost (except for costs of care and handling) such equipment, materials, books, or other supplies under the control of any executive agency as shall have been determined to be surplus property and which shall have been determined under paragraph (2) or paragraph (3) of this subsection to be usable and necessary for educational purposes or public health purposes, including research.

"(2) Determination whether such surplus property (except surplus property donated in conformity with paragraph (3) of this subsection) is usable and necessary for educational purposes or public health purposes, including research, shall be made by the Federal Security Administrator, who shall allocate such property on the basis of needs and utilization for transfer by the Administrator of General Services to tax-supported medical institutions, hospitals, clinics, health centers, school systems, schools, colleges, and universities, and to other nonprofit medical institutions, hospitals, clinics, health centers, schools, colleges, and universities which have been held exempt from taxation under section 101 (6) of the Internal Revenue Code, or to State departments of education or health for distribution to such tax-supported and nonprofit medical institutions, hospitals, clinics, health centers, school systems, schools, colleges, and universities; except that in any State where another agency is designated by State law for such purpose such transfer shall be made to said agency for such distribution within the State."

"(e) The head of each Federal agency shall establish such safeguards against the removal or loss of records as he shall determine to be necessary and as may be required by regulations of the Administrator. Such safeguards shall include making it known to all officials and employees of the agency (1) that no records in the custody of the agency are to be alienated or destroyed except in accordance with the provisions of the act approved July 7, 1943 (57 Stat. 380–383), as amended July 6, 1945 (59 Stat. 434), and (2) the penalties provided by law for the unlawful removal or destruction of records.

"(f) The head of each Federal agency shall notify the Administrator of any actual, impending, or threatened unlawful removal, defacing, alteration, or destruction of records in the custody of the agency of which he is the head that shall come to his attention, and with the assistance of the Administrator shall initiate action through the Attorney General for the recovery of records he knows or has reason to believe have been unlawfully removed from his agency, or from any other Federal agency whose records have been transferred to his legal custody.

"(g) Nothing in this title shall be construed as limiting the authority of the Comptroller General of the United States with respect to prescribing accounting systems, forms, and procedures, or lessening the responsibility of collecting and disbursing officers for rendition of their accounts for settlement by the General Accounting Office.

"ARCHIVAL ADMINISTRATION

"SEC. 507. (a) The Administrator, whenever it appears to him to be in the public interest, is hereby authorized—

"(1) to accept for deposit with the National Archives of the United States the records of any Federal agency or of the Congress of the United States that are determined by the Archivist to have sufficient historical or other value to warrant their continued preservation by the United States Government;

"(2) to direct and effect with the approval of the head of the originating agency (or if the existence of such agency shall have been terminated, then with the approval of his successor in function, if any) the transfer of records deposited (or approved for deposit) with the National Archives of the United States to public or educational institutions or associations: Provided, That the title to such records shall remain vested in the United States unless otherwise authorized by Congress; and

"(3) to direct and effect the transfer of materials from private sources authorized to be received by the Administrator by the provisions of subsection (e) of this section.

"(b) The Administrator shall be responsible for the custody, use, and withdrawal of records transferred to him: Provided, That whenever any records the use of which is subject to statutory limitations and restrictions are so transferred, permissive and restrictive statutory provisions with respect to the examination and use of such records applicable to the head of the agency from which the records were transferred or to employees of that agency shall thereafter likewise be applicable to the Administrator, the Archivist, and to the employees of the General Services Administration, respectively: Provided further, That whenever the head of any agency shall specify in writing restrictions that appear to him to be necessary or desirable in the public interest, on the use or examination of records being considered for transfer from his custody to the Administrator, the Administrator shall impose such restrictions on the records so transferred, and shall not remove or relax such restrictions without the concurrence in writing of the head of the agency from which the material shall have been transferred (or if the existence of such agency shall have been terminated, then he shall not remove or release such restrictions without the concurrence of his successor in function, if any, of such agency head): Provided, however, That statutory and other restrictions referred to in the provisos of this subsection shall not remain in force or effect after the records have been in existence for 50 years unless the Administrator by order shall determine with respect to specific bodies of records that such restrictions shall remain in force and effect for a longer period: And provided further, That restrictions on the use or examination of records deposited with the National Archives of the United States heretofore imposed and now in force and effect under the terms of section 3 of the National Archives Act, approved June 19, 1934, shall continue in force and effect regardless of the expiration of the tenure of office of the official who imposed them but may be removed or relaxed by the Administrator with the concurrence in writing of the head of the agency from which material has been transferred (or if the existence of such agency shall have been terminated, then with the concurrence in writing of his successor in function, if any).

"(c) The Administrator shall make provisions for the preservation, arrangement, repair and rehabilitation, duplication and reproduction (including microscopy publications), description, and exhibition of records transferred to him as may be needful or appropriate, including the preparation and publication of inventories, indexes, catalogs, and other finding aids or guides facilitating their use; and, when approved by the National Historical Publications Commission, he may also publish such historical works and collections of sources as seem appropriate for printing or otherwise recording at the public expense.

"(d) The Administrator shall make such provisions and maintain such facilities as he deems necessary or desirable for servicing records in his custody that are not exempt from examination by statutory provisions or other restrictions.

"(e) The Administrator may accept for deposit—

"(1) the personal papers and other personal historical documentary materials of the present President of the United States, his successors, heads of executive departments, and such other officials of the Government as the President may designate, offered for deposit under restrictions respecting their use specified in writing by the prospective depositors: Provided, That restrictions so specified on such materials, or any portions thereof, accepted by the Administrator for such deposit shall have force and effect during the lifetime of the depositor or for a period not to exceed 25 years, whichever is longer, unless sooner terminated in writing by the depositor or his legal heirs: And provided further, That the Archivist determines that the materials accepted for such deposit will have continuing historical or other values;

"(2) motion-picture films, still pictures, and sound recordings from private sources that are appropriate for preservation by the Government as evidence of its organization, functions, policies, decisions, procedures, and transactions.

Title to materials so deposited under this subsection shall pass to and vest in the United States.

"(f) The Administrator is hereby authorized to make and preserve motion-picture films, still pictures, and sound recordings pertaining to and illustrative of the historical development of the United States Government and its activities, and to make provisions for preparing, editing, titling, scoring, processing, duplicating, reproducing, exhibiting, and releasing for nonprofit educational purposes, motion-picture films, still pictures, and sound recordings in his custody.

"(b) The Administrator shall, whenever he finds that any provisions of this title have been or are being violated, inform in writing the head of the agency concerned of such violations and make recommendations regarding means of correcting them. Unless corrective measures satisfactory to the Administrator are inaugurated within a reasonable time, the Administrator shall submit a written report thereon to the President and the Congress.

"LEGAL STATUS OF REPRODUCTIONS

"SEC. 509. (a) Whenever any records that are required by statute to be retained indefinitely have been reproduced by photographic, microphotographic, or other processes, in accordance with standards established by the Administrator, the indefinite retention of such photographic, microphotographic, or other reproductions will be deemed to constitute compliance with the statutory requirement for the indefinite retention of such original records. Such reproductions, as well as reproductions made in compliance with regulations promulgated to carry out this title, shall have the same legal status as the originals thereof.

"(b) There shall be an official seal for the National Archives of the United States which shall be judicially noticed. When any copy or reproduction, furnished under the terms hereof, is authenticated by such official seal and certified by the Administrator, such copy or reproduction shall be admitted in evidence equally with the original from which it was made.

"(c) The Administrator may charge a fee not in excess of 10 percent above the costs or expenses for making or authenticating copies or reproductions of materials transferred to his custody. All such fees shall be paid into, administered, and expended as a part of the National Archives Trust Fund provided for in section 5 of the act approved July 9, 1941. There shall be no charge for making or authenticating copies or reproductions of such materials for official use by the United States Government: Provided, That reimbursement may be accepted to cover the cost of furnishing such copies or reproductions that could not otherwise be furnished.

"LIMITATION ON LIABILITIES

"SEC. 510. With respect to letters and other intellectual productions (exclusive of material copyrighted or patented) after they come into the custody or possession of the Administrator, neither the United States nor its agents shall be liable for any infringement of literary property rights or analogous rights arising thereafter out of use of such materials for display, inspection, research, reproduction, or other purposes.

Mr. MCCLELLAN. Mr. President, in connection with Senate bill 3959, Calendar No. 2140, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD, following the action on the bill, a letter from the Acting Comptroller General. I may say that the bill is approved by him.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

COMPTROLLER GENERAL OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, July 25, 1950.

Hon. JOHN L. MCCLELLAN,
Chairman, Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments, United States Senate.

MY DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: In accordance with informal request of yesterday from a member of the staff of your committee, I am pleased to give you the views of the General Accounting Office on S. 3959, Eighty-first Congress, entitled "A bill to amend the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949, and for other purposes."

The bill is a redraft of S. 3842 which was the subject of my report to you of July 18, 1950. That report contained a section-by-section analysis of S. 3842 and the recommendations of the General Accounting Office thereon. The recommended changes are incorporated in S. 3959, along with certain others of a technical nature. Accordingly, the bill S. 3959 has the approval of the General Accounting Office.

It is understood, also, that your committee desires comment of the General Accounting Office with respect to the desirability of the proposed section 6 of S. 3959, which would be a Federal Records Act of 1950. Although the General Accounting Office is not the agency primarily concerned, it may be said that this section is designed to bring about improved management of Government records. It would impose on the Administrator of General Services the principal responsibility to accomplish this purpose, with the necessary measure of authority to carry out his responsibility in proper balance with the duties and requirements of all the agencies. There would be a central agency, working in cooperation with all others, to lead and coordinate a program of more efficient and effective utilization, maintenance, and disposal of records.

The heads of the Federal agencies would have definite responsibilities in the program, and provision is made for full consideration of their jurisdiction and needs. They would be required to observe standards and principles laid down by the Administrator of General Services, within his authority, and any violation of the act would be reported by the Administrator to the Congress and the President. Adequate safeguards are provided for the performance by the General Accounting Office of its assigned functions.

The Comptroller General and I long have recognized the seriousness of the problems arising from the ever-growing volume of Government records. It is one in the solution of which all of us—the Congress and the President, the departments and agencies, and the taxpayers—have a large stake. A carefully planned, concerted attack on the problem by all concerned is essential. The proposed legislation appears well suited to the undertaking. It would establish a central responsible agency, and call for active participation by all the agencies. It would provide machinery to guide and assist those agencies in the betterment of their own records practices and procedures. Just as is the case in the accounting field, where the Comptroller General, the Secretary of the Treasury, and the Director, Bureau of the Budget—the heads of the three central fiscal agencies—have joined with all the agencies in a cooperative program to improve Federal accounting and financial reporting, a comparable program for Federal records, under the leadership of the Administrator of General Services, should be a significant step toward greater economy and efficiency in Government.

I trust that this information will serve the purpose of your committee.

Sincerely yours,

FRANK L. YATES,
Acting Comptroller General of the United States.

EXCHANGE OF LANDS AT MANHATTAN BEACH, N. Y.

The bill (H. R. 5003) to provide for the exchange between the United States and the State of New York of certain lands and interests in lands at Manhattan Beach, Kings County, N. Y., was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. IVES. Mr. President, at this point, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD, as a part of my remarks, a statement which I have prepared, in support of the bill which has just been passed.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT BY SENATOR IVES

The purpose of this bill is to provide authority for an equitable exchange of certain lands at Manhattan Beach, N. Y., between the Federal Government and the State of New York.

A dispute has arisen between the Federal Government and the State as to the ownership of part of the land in question. The National Government has purchased from private owners some 50 acres of filled-in land extending out into certain inland waters to which the State claims title.

In return for the State's relinquishing its legal claim to these lands, on part of which the Federal Government has built a permanent maritime training station, the State receives under this bill some surplus lands totaling less than the 50 acres the claim to which the State has relinquished.

The Attorney General of the United States and the attorney general of the State of New York had endeavored to reach an amicable settlement of this dispute by arranging for the identical exchange in lands which is herein authorized. Technicalities developed, however, and it was decided that the United States Attorney General required this specific enabling legislation before he could go through with his part of the agreement. It is to enable the State and Federal Governments to consummate this previously agreed upon arrangement that this bill was introduced.

The land to be received by the State of New York is in the midst of a crowded low-income housing area. Existing recreation facilities are severely overloaded and the lack of adequate playground space contributes to the excessive street-accident and juvenile-delinquency rate in the area.

Plans have been completed for utilization of a considerable part of the land to be received by the State as a developed park area. Since the State plans, at considerable cost, to put this land—presently unused by the Federal Government and surplus—to constructive use, the exchange seems in the best interests of both governments.

Mr. LEHMAN. Mr. President, I make a similar request, namely, to have inserted at this point in the RECORD a statement in regard to the bill.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT BY SENATOR LEHMAN

This bill is similar to Senate Joint Resolution 177 which was jointly introduced by the two Senators from New York. This legislation attempts to settle a conflict of property interests between the Federal Government and the State of New York in an equitable manner, and in the interests of both the people of New York and of the Nation.

In my opinion, the single most important result of the passage of this bill will be to permit the city of New York to create a water-front park for the recreational and educational benefit of the many hundreds of thousands of residents of that area. Anyone who has visited that section of New York City knows the disturbing amount of congestion in the two nearest swimming and recreation centers along the ocean front—Coney Island and Brighton Beach. When this bill is passed, New York City will be able to develop this water-front park at Manhattan Beach and thus directly contribute to the health and welfare of the citizens of New York.

Therefore, I am very happy that this bill is now being considered by the Senate and I urge its speedy passage.

TRANSFER OF LAND AND IMPROVEMENTS TO NEW MEXICO STATE FAIR

The bill (H. R. 6247) authorizing transfer of land and improvements thereon by the Secretary of the Interior to New Mexico State Fair, was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, may we have an explanation?

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. President, this bill relates to land originally owned by the New Mexico State Fair. In 1935 or 1936 the United States Government, through its Indian Service, asked for the privilege of erecting at the State fair a building in which there might be displays of Indian arts. The State fair granted the land to the Federal Government, which constructed the building. However, the Federal Government now finds that it is not able to maintain the building.

The State fair has said that if the land is transferred back to it, it will maintain the building and will permit the Indian Service to use any or all of the building that it may desire to use at any time for the purpose of fair exhibits, during the State fair.

Therefore, we feel that the bill is a just bill.

Mr. MORSE. I desire to ask one question. The Senator mentioned it, but I want to emphasize it. The bill provides that the Indian Service, and, through it, the Federal Government, shall continue to have the use of this building for its purposes, when, if, and as needed; is that correct?

Mr. ANDERSON. "When or if" needed.

Mr. MORSE. I think that is a reasonable position. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill (H. R. 6247) authorizing transfer of land and improvements thereon by the Secretary of the Interior to New Mexico State Fair was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ADDITIONAL USES OF CERTAIN LANDS BY BUFFALO, WYO.

The bill (H. R. 7977) to authorize the city of Buffalo, Wyo., to make additional uses of certain lands, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. MORSE. May we have an explanation?

• The PRESIDING OFFICER. An explanation is desired.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, as long ago as the act of February 25, 1907, which is certainly several years ago, the Federal Government transferred for park purposes to the city of Buffalo, Wyo., certain lands within the city. The bill is to permit the city to use the lands for hospital or other specific purposes. As a matter of fact, the conveyance was without limitation of any kind, and I have no doubt that lands could be used for this purpose anyway.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, the reason I asked for an explanation was that I wanted the RECORD to show exactly what the Senator from Wyoming has just pointed out, that under the original grant there did not seem to be any limitation at all on the use. But even if there had been a limitation on the use, I desired the record to be clear. I am not going to object to this particular transfer, because it originally was made under the 1907 act, the spirit and intent of which clearly permit the use of this particular land for public purposes; and this certainly is a public purpose, within the spirit and intent of the original act.

Let me make clear for the record, though, that if an attempt were now made to transfer in the first instance Federal property for such purposes, it would be my position that the city of Buffalo would have to pay 50 percent of the appraised market value of the property.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill (H. R. 7977) to authorize the city of Buffalo, Wyo., to make additional uses of certain lands, and for other purposes, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PAYMENTS TO STATES UNDER OIL LAND LEASING ACT OF 1920

The bill (H. R. 6292) to provide that payments to States under the Oil Land

Leasing Act of 1920 shall be made biannually was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. O'MAHONEY subsequently said: Mr. President, we acted upon Calendar No. 2144, House bill 6292 a few moments ago, and passed the bill. After it had been passed I noted the heading on the report, which is as follows:

Providing that payments to States under the Oil Land Leasing Act of 1920 shall be made biennially.

That is an error. The title should read "semiannually." I do not want the bill to be passed under that mistaken title on the report.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the title of the report will be appropriately amended.

FEES FOR COPIES OF INTERIOR DEPARTMENT RECORDS

The bill (H. R. 6013) to amend an act fixing the price of copies of records furnished by the Department of the Interior was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CONFIRMATION OF TITLE IN V. LEBLANC AND C. RICCARD

The bill (H. R. 2588) to confirm title in V. LeBlanc and C. Riccard to certain lands in West Baton Rouge Parish, La., was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ADDITION OF LAND TO CHICKAMAUGA AND CHATTANOOGA NATIONAL MILITARY PARK

The bill (H. R. 7675), a bill to authorize the addition of certain land to Chickamauga and Chattanooga National Military Park, in the State of Tennessee, was announced as next in order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of the bill?

The VICE PRESIDENT. An explanation is requested.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, this bill, as stated in the report, would authorize the Secretary of the Interior to accept donations of not to exceed 1,400 acres of land and interests in land within the Moccasin Bend of the Tennessee River lying west of the city of Chattanooga, as an addition to the existing park. The bill has the support of the Department, both Senators are for it, and the delegation from Tennessee is for it.

Mr. MORSE. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the bill (H. R. 7675), a bill to authorize the addition of certain land to Chickamauga and Chattanooga National Military Park, in the State of Tennessee, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ABOLISHMENT OF WHEELER NATIONAL MONUMENT, COLO.

The bill (H. R. 7982) to abolish the Wheeler National Monument, in the State of Colorado, and to provide for the administration of the lands contained therein as a part of the national forest within which such national monument is situated, and for other purposes, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ABOLISHMENT OF HOLY CROSS NATIONAL MONUMENT, COLO.

The bill (H. R. 7339) to abolish the Holy Cross National Monument, in the State of Colorado, and to provide for the administration of the lands contained therein as a part of the national forest within which such national monument is situated, and for other purposes, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EXPANSION AND DISPOSITION OF NATIONAL CEMETERIES

The bill (S. 2863) to provide for the expansion and disposition of certain national cemeteries was announced as next in order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2863) to provide for the expansion and disposition of certain national cemeteries, which had been reported from the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs with an amendment on page 5, line 5, after the word "therein", to insert: "under the supervision of the Secretary of the Army, who is hereby authorized and directed to make provision therefor."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment, which I should like to have read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 4, after line 15, it is proposed to strike out down to and including line 7, page 5, as follows:

(b) to the Commonwealth of Virginia, or any political subdivision thereof, all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to that certain tract of land in Loudoun County, Va., comprising approximately fifty-seven one-thousandths acre, which now constitutes the Balls Bluff National Cemetery: Provided, That should the Commonwealth of Virginia or any political subdivision thereof fail to indicate its desire to acquire the property within 90 days after the enactment of this measure then the property shall be disposed of in accordance with existing law, after the removal of the remains interred therein under the supervision of the Secretary of the Army, who is hereby authorized and directed to make provision therefor.

Mr. MORSE. I want to briefly explain my amendment. It is an amendment which seeks to strike from the bill that part which refers to the battlefield of Balls Bluff, near Leesburg, Va. As I said yesterday, I believe it was, it was in that battle that Oliver Wendell Holmes was first wounded in the Civil War. It was in that battle that Senator Baker, of Oregon, was killed, Baker being the confidant of the President of the United States at the time, and recognized as his floor leader on the floor of the United States Senate—one of the most distinguished citizens of my State. The place where he fell in battle is marked on the battlefield at Balls Bluff. I wish to say, and I betray no confidence when I say it, that I have been at work for some time, with the full cooperation of the President of the United States, in an endeavor to have erected on that battlefield a marker, to be provided by the appropriate group in the State of Oregon, at the place where Baker fell in battle. Balls Bluff is one of the most historic battlefields of the Civil War, and, Mr. President, I shall object to this bill unless the part relating to the battlefield of Balls Bluff is stricken from it.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I may say that the information which the Senator from Oregon has now given the Senate comes to me, and I am sure to our committee, for the first time. We were not aware of the fact that Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes was wounded at Balls Bluff, or at least it had not come back to our recollections, and we were not aware of the death of Senator Baker there. This bill was introduced by the Chairman of the Armed Services Committee [Mr. TYDINGS], and I should like to consult him with respect to the amendment. Personally, I should have no objection to the elimination of subsection (b), beginning on page 4.

Mr. TYDINGS. I should like to say to the Senator that his committee considered the bill—not my committee—and he is more familiar with it than am I. However, the bill came up to me from the Department, because it was deemed to be necessary that this expansion take place. I am not well advised as to the situation to which the Senator from Oregon addresses himself, but I should say that whatever the Senator from Wyoming deems it advisable to do, I shall be very glad to cooperate with him in the mater.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, in view of the statement made by the Senator from Oregon and the desire, I am sure, of all Members of the Senate and the Congress to honor the late Justice Holmes, and in view of the Senator's remarks about the very distinguished soldied from Oregon, I am quite willing to accept the amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. MORSE. I want to say to the Senator from Wyoming that I did not know that the bill would be before the Senate for consideration, or I should have asked permission to make available to him the information which I had.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I join with the Senator from Oregon in thanking the Senator from Wyoming for his graciousness in including proper markings for Edward D. Baker, who died in that battle. It so happens that before Mr. Baker moved West and became a Senator from Oregon, he was a Representative in Congress from Illinois, representing the district known as the Abraham Lincoln district in central Illinois. Lincoln and Baker were very close friends. One of Lincoln's children was named after Baker, and a portrait of Baker is in the Governor's office in the statehouse in Springfield. So the Senator from Wyoming, in his typically gracious way, will please the State of Illinois as well as the State of Oregon.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment of the Senator from Oregon is agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Army is authorized and directed—

(a) to expand existing facilities at the Rock Island National Cemetery, Rock Island, Ill., by utilizing not to exceed 30 acres of federally owned lands under the jurisdiction of the Department of the Army adjoining the present national cemetery facility, which are surplus to military needs, and to provide for the care and maintenance thereof under the same regulations as prescribed for other national cemeteries under the jurisdiction of the Department of the Army; and

(b) to expand existing facilities at the Fort Leavenworth National Cemetery, Fort Leavenworth, Kans., by utilizing not to exceed 8 acres of federally owned land under the jurisdiction of the Department of the Army, adjoining the present national cemetery facility, which are surplus to military needs, and to provide for the care and maintenance thereof under the same regulations as prescribed for other national cemeteries under the jurisdiction of the Department of the Army.

SEC. 2. The Secretary of the Navy is authorized to transfer, without compensation therefor, to the Secretary of the Army for cemeterial purposes such Government-owned land under the jurisdiction of the Department of the Navy, located adjacent to the Barrancas National Cemetery near the city of Pensacola, Fla., as may be determined by the Secretary of the Navy to be available for the expansion of said cemetery. The lands transferred pursuant to the provisions of this act shall be constituted a part of the Barrancas National Cemetery.

SEC. 3. That the conditions and the proviso contained in section 1 of the act of March 3, 1911, entitled "An act providing for the taking over by the United States Government of the Confederate Cemetery at Springfield, Mo," which affect the use to which the land comprising the Confederate Cemetery at Springfield, Mo., can be placed, be, and the same hereby are, made inapplicable to that portion of said Confederate cemetery located outside of the walled enclosure which presently contains the graves of men who were in the military and naval service of the Confederate States of America: Provided, That said land located outside of the walled enclosure shall be utilized as a part of the Springfield National Cemetery.

SEC. 4. The Secretary of the Army is authorized to transfer—

(a) to the State of Kentucky, or to a county or municipality thereof, all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to the tract of land acquired for the establishment of the Perryville National Cemetery, under authority of the act of Congress entitled "An act to erect a tablet or marker in the memory of the Federal soldiers who were killed at the Battle of Perryville, and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1928, without cost to said State, county, or municipality: Provided, That should the State of Kentucky or any political subdivision thereof fail to indicate its desire to acquire the property within 90 days after the enactment of this measure, then the property shall be disposed of in accordance with existing law after removal of the monument therefrom. The Secretary of the Army is further authorized and directed to remove the monument which was constructed in the Perryville National Cemetery under authority of the act of Congress approved March 3, 1928, from its present location and to reerect it in the Camp Nelson National Cemetery, Nicholasville, Ky.

SEC. 5. There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act.

ELIMINATION OF LANDS FROM FLATHEAD INDIAN IRRIGATION PROJECT, MONTANA

The bill (H. R. 2196) to authorize the elimination of lands from the Flathead Indian irrigation project, Montana, was announced as next in order.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of the bill?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, this bill involves only 12 acres of land. It is endorsed by the Department of the Interior. It eliminates 12 acres from the Camas division of the Flathead Indian irrigation project. These acres are owned by Grace Prongua, and the land is now under ditch, but it is now wholly unfit for agricultural uses and would entail too much expense to prepare for irrigation and crop production. No water from the irrigation project has ever been utilized, although ditches have been constructed and the owner has been for many years compelled to pay annual water charges assessed against the land. In other words, water is being distributed, the land is utterly unusable, payments are being made, it is not suitable for an irrigation project, and it should be eliminated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill (H. R. 2196) to authorize the elimination of lands from the Flathead Indian irrigation project, Montana, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SALE OF LAND ON ROSEBUD INDIAN RESERVATION

The bill (H. R. 6699) to authorize the sale of certain land on the Rosebud Indian Reservation, S. Dak., allotted to Susan Eagle Dog, was announced as next in order.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, may I inquire how many acres are involved in this transaction?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. It is not a very large area.

Mr. GURNEY. It is 160 acres.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. That is correct.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill (H. R. 6699) to authorize the sale of certain land on the Rosebud Indian Reservation, S. Dak., allotted to Susan Eagle Dog, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PATENT IN FEE TO HOWARD H. MORAN

The bill (H. R. 6697) authorizing the issuance of a patent in fee to Howard H. Moran was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN II ESTATE, LTD.

The bill (H. R. 4989) to provide for the payment of just compensation to John Ii Estate, Ltd., a Hawaiian corporation, for the taking by the United States of private fishery rights in Pearl Harbor, Island of Oahu, Territory of Hawaii, was announced as next in order.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Mr. President, I desire to make some remarks with reference to Calendar No. 2153, House bill 6697. I understand that the Clerk has just called Calendar No. 2155, House bill 4989. What happened to Calendar No. 2154, House bill 6454?

The VICE PRESIDENT. It was substituted for a corresponding Senate bill and passed.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. My remarks will apply to the remainder of the calendar, because no reports have been available to many of the Senators.

Mr. McFARLAND. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the remaining bills on the calendar be not considered and that they stay on the calendar for the next call.

The VICE PRESIDENT. They will automatically be on the calendar at the next call.

Mr. McFARLAND. I should like to have them called at the head of the list.

Mr. WHERRY. I have no objection.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It is not necessary to ask for unanimous consent, because they will be called anyway.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, as I understand, there is a suggestion that we pause in the calling of the calendar here?

Mr. McFARLAND. No; just the remainder of the bills on the calendar. Then we shall revert to the bills which were to be considered in addition to those on the calendar.

Mr. McCARRAN. The report with reference to Calendar No. 2155, House bill 4989, has been in the hands of the clerk of the Judiciary Committee for several days.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, we have been unable to obtain the report on the bill until only a few moments ago. I think it is very unwise and is unsound legislative procedure to consider measures which have not been before Members of the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. All the bills remaining on the calendar were reported yesterday. If the Senate wishes to suspend the call of the regular calendar at this point, the remaining bills will be the first to be called when the calendar is next considered.

Mr. McFARLAND. That was my request a few moments ago.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It is not necessary to make the request, because they would automatically be called first.

Mr. McFARLAND. We have other bills to be considered.

The VICE PRESIDENT. They are not on the printed calendar.

Mr. McFARLAND. They are on the printed calendar, but they were to be called at the foot of the calendar.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair is trying to impress on the Senator that when the calendar is again called, these bills will be the first ones called.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, is it the intention of the distinguished acting majority leader to call the bills at the foot of the calendar, or those which are listed?

Mr. McFARLAND. I should like to call the list, first.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the first bill on the list.

PROVISION BY MARITIME COMMISSION FOR WAR RISK AND OTHER INSURANCE

The bill (S. 2484) to authorize the United States Maritime Commission to provide war risk and certain marine and liability insurance, which had been reported from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, with amendments, was announced as next in order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce with amendments.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will proceed to state the amendments of the committee.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 2, line 10, after the word "the", to strike out "Commission" and insert "Secretary"; after line 17, to insert:

(e) The term "Secretary" shall mean the Secretary of Commerce.

In line 20, after the word "The", where it occurs the first time, to strike out "Commission" and insert "Secretary"; in line 25, after the word "the", to strike out "Commission" and insert "Secretary"; on page 3, line 9, after the word "The", to strike out "Commission" and insert "Secretary"; in line 17, after the words "by the", to strike out "Commission" and insert "Secretary"; on page 4, line 23, after the word "the", to strike out "Commission" and insert "Secretary"; on page 5, line 3, after the words "that the", to strike out "Commission" and insert "Secretary"; in line 7, after the words "from the", to strike out "Commission" and insert "Secretary"; in line 10, after the word "The", to strike out "Commission" and insert "Secretary"; in line 15, after the word "the", to strike out "Commission" and insert "Secretary"; in line 18, after the word "the", to strike out "Commission" and insert "Secretary"; in line 25, after the word "The", to strike out "Commission" and insert "Secretary"; on page 6, line 6, after the word "the", to strike out "Commission" and insert "Secretary"; in line 14, after the word "the", to strike out "Commission" and insert "Secretary"; in line 16, after the word "The", where it occurs the second time, to strike out "Commission" and insert "Secretary"; in line 18, after the word "the", to strike out "Commission" and insert "Secretary"; in line 20, after the word "the", to strike out "Commission" and insert "Secretary"; in line 22, after the words "by the", to strike out "Commission" and insert "Secretary"; in line 19, after the words "that the", to strike out "Commission" and insert "Secretary."

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I have no desire to interfere with the passage of this bill. But so many amendments are being made to the bill that it would take at least half an hour to have them all explained.

Mr. MAGNUSON. I should like to remind the Senator that since this bill was written the Maritime Administration has been reorganized. Instead of using the term "Maritime Commission," the words "Secretary of Commerce" must be used.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I submit it is not good legislative procedure to act on amendments to an important bill without explanation. If merely technical amendments are involved I withhold my objection at this time.

Mr. MAGNUSON. That is what these amendments are.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the next amendment.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 7, line 7, after the word "The", it is proposed to strike out "Commission" and insert "Secretary"; in line 8, after the word "fund", to insert "in the Treasury"; in line 13, after the word "deposited", to insert "in the Treasury."

The amendments were agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the next amendment.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. In line 16, after the word "fund", to insert "through the Division of Disbursement, Treasury Department."

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of that amendment? That does not involve simply a change in names. That says something about the Treasury Department.

Mr. MAGNUSON. It requires the deposit of money in the United States Treasury. I may explain that under the old maritime law the Maritime Commission had a separate fund. Since the transfer of the Commission has been made to the Secretary of Commerce, all moneys that come in must be deposited in the Treasury.

Mr. AIKEN. For what purpose is the money deposited? Is it a revolving fund?

Mr. MAGNUSON. It is a revolving fund.

Mr. AIKEN. I should think that these amendments would be printed. I object to going any further with the bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Vermont objects.

Mr. AIKEN. There has been so much controversy in connection with the Maritime Commission that I want to be sure of what we are passing.

Mr. MAGNUSON. If the Senator will withhold his objection until I make a statement, I think I can clarify the amendments.

Mr. AIKEN. I shall be delighted to have all proposed amendments printed. I do not say that I will object to considering the bill or passing it later on, but I think that when an important measure like this is before us we should know what we are voting on.

Mr. MAGNUSON. If the Senator will withhold his objection——

Mr. AIKEN. I shall be glad to withhold my objection until the Senator from Washington can propose as many amendments as he desires to propose.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, I ask that on page 5, line 20, the word "duing" be stricken and the word "during" be substituted in lieu thereof. That is a typographical error.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. MAGNUSON. I also propose an amendment which would limit the authority of the Secretary of Commerce in the matter of insurance.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair is advised that consideration of the committee amendments has not been completed.

Mr. AIKEN. I objected to further consideration of the bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair understood the Senator to withhold his objection.

Mr. AIKEN. If all the amendments are acted on and objection is then made to the passage of the bill, will the bill go over?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator can object at any time.

Mr. AIKEN. I wanted all proposed amendments to be printed before the bill was considered.

Mr. MAGNUSON. If the Senator will let me make an explanation, I think I can satisfy him on that point. All the amendments have been printed, but since the bill has been introduced we have had to change some words in it. For example, we have had to use the words "Secretary of Commerce" instead of the words "Maritime Commission," and the words "Treasury Department" instead of "Commission." That has reference to the fact that under Reorganization Plan No. 24, the funds involving on insurance, for example, are taken from the old Maritime Commission, and placed in the Treasury.

I hope the Senator will not object to the bill, because its sole purpose is to permit the Maritime Board and the Secretary of Commerce to write war-risk insurance. No shipper today, under the present law, if this change is not made, can get war-risk insurance on his ships. We would turn this authority over to the Secretary of Commerce, and also allow the writing of insurance on ships by certain foreign insurance companies, mainly British, that have insurance pools for shipping. I think there are 14 such companies, when certified by the insurance commissioners of States, with the cooperation of the Secretary of Commerce, or by any American company.

Ships might be torpedoed tonight, and if a ship operator should be leaving port today and wanted war-risk insurance, it is doubtful that he would be able to get it. That is all the bill affects and all the amendments relate to. The old Maritime Commisison would be responsible for this normally, but we had to change "Maritime Commission" to "Secretary of Commerce," and provide that where money comes into the revolving fund because of the change, it shall go into the Treasury instead of to the Maritime Commission. That is all the bill does. It is vitally important, because we are apt to wake up some day soon and find that ships have been sunk and the operators have not had opportunity to get insurance.

Mr. O'CONOR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MAGNUSON. I yield.

Mr. O'CONOR. Is it not a fact that in policies now outstanding there is a cancellation clause, so that in the event of an emergency those policies would be null and void, and therefore the shipping interests would be at a serious disadvantage?

Mr. MAGNUSON. That is correct, because since World War II the automatic cancellation clause has been included in these insurance policies. If an emergency should be declared and ships out at sea were sunk, the operators would have no return whatsoever.

I might point out to the Senator from Vermont that the United States Government has a vital interest financially in most of these ships, and all we are providing is that there shall be opportunity to get war-risk insurance. It costs the Government nothing, and where there is a revolving fund under the Secretary of Commerce, we provide that funds shall be deposited in the Treasury instead of in a separate account, as used to be the case under the old Maritime Commission law.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, I do not believe that 4 or 5 days is going to make much difference. As the Senator from Washington says, we may wake up some morning and find that an American ship has been sunk, but in World War II we woke up and found that 500 ships had been sunk, and some of them had been insured for 65 times their actual value, and we lost hundreds of millions of dollars. It was a peculiar circumstance that it was the older ships that were sunk. I think Congress would do well to scrutinize any bill which deals with insurance issued by the Maritime Commission.

Mr. MAGNUSON. The Maritime Commission does not do it.

Mr. AIKEN. Or anybody else—any insurance plan.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator object to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. AIKEN. I do, until I have a chance to read the proposed amendments and the bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will go over.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Will the Senator yield for one question before he takes his seat?

Mr. AIKEN. I yield.

Mr. MAGNUSON. The Senator has been misinformed about the facts as to what happened during World War II. The agency handling war-risk insurance during World War II, despite all the ships that were sunk, made a profit of $127,000,000.

Mr. AIKEN. And some of the owners made several thousand percent profit.

Mr. McFARLAND. Mr. President, I insist on the rule of the Senate being enforced. I realize the importance of these bills, but this debate clearly demonstrates it does not do any good to violate the rules, because the bills are not passed anyway, and there are Senators here waiting to have bills called which are at the foot of the calendar. I insist on the rule being enforced from now on.

AMENDMENT OF MERCHANT MARINE ACT, 1936

Mr. BREWSTER. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. For what purpose does the Senator rise?

Mr. BREWSTER. I understand it is agreeable that Calendar No. 1836, Senate bill 2801, which is next on the list, should be considered.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Order of business 1835, Senate bill 2786, is next on the list.

Mr. BREWSTER. Then I withhold the request.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will state the next bill on the list.

The bill (S. 2786) to amend the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, as amended, to further promote the development and maintenance of the American merchant marine, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

NORTHWEST ATLANTIC FISHERIES ACT OF 1950

Mr. BREWSTER. Mr. President, I understand that it is agreeable to the acting majority leader, and to those who have heretofore objected, that order of business 1836, S. 2801, which is next on the list, should be taken up at this time.

Mr. McFARLAND. Mr. President, there evidently was a mistake in regard to this bill not being included in the list, and I have no objection to its being included.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Clerk will state the bill by title.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. A bill (S. 2801) to give effect to the International Convention for the Northwest Atlantic Fisheries, signed at Washington under date of February 8, 1949, and for other purposes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce with amendments, on page 2, line 24, after the word "President," to strike out the comma and "as follows: The first, an official of the United States Fish and Wildlife Service, who shall serve for an indefinite term but in no event beyond the period of his employment as an official of that agency; the second, a person who is an officer of the official fishery agency of one of the States contiguous to the convention area or of a State whose vessels customarily fish in such waters, who shall serve for a term of 4 years unless he shall sooner cease to be an officer of such State agency; and the third, a representative of the public at large, who shall serve at the pleasure of the President" and insert "and to serve at his pleasure"; on page 4, line 21, after the words "per diem", to strike out the comma and "as provided in section 14 of this Act,"; after line 23, to insert a new section:

SEC. 5. Service of any individual as a United States Commissioner appointed pursuant to section 3 (a), or as a member of the advisory committee appointed pursuant to section 4 (a) shall not be considered as service or employment bringing such individual within the provisions of sections 281, 283, and 284 of title 18 of the United States Code, of section 190 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 5, sec. 99), or of any other Federal law imposing restrictions, requirements, or penalties in relation to the employment of persons, the performance of services, or the payment or receipt of compensation in connection with any claim, proceeding, or matter involving the United States, except insofar as such provisions of law may prohibit any such individual from receiving compensation in respect of any particular matter in which such individual was directly involved in the performance of such service.

On page 5, line 15, to change the section number from "5" to "6"; after line 23, to strike out:

SEC. 6. Proposals made by the Commission and accepted by the contracting governments, in accordance with the provisions of article VIII of the convention, shall be published in the Federal Register and, on the effective date thereof, shall become regulations applicable to all persons and vessels subject to the jurisdiction of the United States.

On page 6, line 21, after the word "may", to strike out "authorize" and insert "designate"; in line 22, after the word "officers", to strike out "and employees"; in line 25, after the word "so", to strike out "authorized" and insert "designated"; in the same line, after the word "officers", to strike out "and employees may" and insert "are authorized to"; on page 7, after line 2, to strike out:

SEC. 8. Nothing in this act nor in the convention shall be construed to impair the fishery jurisdiction of the several States, nor to prevent in any way the several States from giving protection to stocks of fish not covered by regulations adopted by the United States pursuant to proposals of the Commission, nor from giving additional protection to those stocks of fish covered by such regulations.

The Judges of the United States district courts and the United States Commissioners may, within their respective jurisdictions, upon proper oath or affirmation showing probable cause, issue warrants in all such cases. Any person authorized to enforce the provisions of the convention, this act, or the regulations issued pursuant thereto may, except in the case of a first offense, seize, whenever and wherever lawfully found, all fish taken or retained, and all fishing gear involved in fishing, contrary to the provisions

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMERICAN-FLAG SHIPPING ON THE GREAT LAKES

The bill (S. 3109) to aid the development and maintenance of American-flag shipping on the Great Lakes, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Delaware objects, and the bill goes over.

Mr. THYE and Mr. MAGNUSON addressed the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. THYE. Mr. President, will not the Senator from Delaware withhold his objection until I may make inquiry of him as to why he objects, if I may be so bold as to ask that question? This bill has been up before; it is a very worthy bill, and it should be passed. The season is getting late. When I refer to the season, I may say that the shipping season on the Great Lakes, and I should like to inquire why the Senator objects.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, I object to the bill because under the provisions of the bill the Government would net about 3½ percent, and I am not going to endorse any bill which gives a discount of 96½ percent.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

Mr. THYE. Mr. President, may I inquire of the acting majority leader when there may be an opportunity to consider this bill?

Mr. McFARLAND. Mr. President, I cannot give an answer to that question. Many Senators have minor bills they are waiting to have called, and if we are to discuss the question as to when bills may be considered, we never will get through.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the next bill.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, I wonder if I may be permitted to submit certain amendments to the bill just objected to so they may be printed.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendments will be printed and will lie on the table.

Mr. MAGNUSON. From reading the amendments Senators will better understand the importance of the bill.

CERTIFICATION OF SHIPS' COOKS CONVENTION, 1946

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will state the next bill.

The bill (S. 3244) to give effect to the certification of Ships' Cooks Convention, 1946, adopted at the twenty-eighth—maritime—session of the International Labor Organization, held at Seattle, Wash., June 6 to 29, 1946, was announced as next in order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

FOOD AND CATERING—SHIPS' CREWS—CONVENTION, 1946

The bill (S. 3246) to give effect to the Food and Catering—Ships' Crews—Convention, 1946, adopted at the twenty-eighth—maritime—session of the International Labor Organization, held at Seattle, Wash., June 6 to 29, 1946, was announced as next in order.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, although I shall not object, I merely want to make a statement.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I ask that the bill go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from New Jersey objects to consideration of the bill, and the bill goes over.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, did I not have the floor? I reserved the right to object.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Washington was reserving the right, but an objection takes precedence over a mere reservation to object.

Mr. McFARLAND. Regular order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair will recognize the Senator from Washington if he wishes to make a statement about the bill. Does the Senator wish to make a statement about the bill?

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, I appreciate that there are many objections being made to bills, but in the last few minutes Senators have objected to some bills the enactment of which would help develop the American merchant marine. There may be many little old bills waiting to be passed, but the most important measures on the calendar today are these bills which affect the merchant marine. Fifty percent of our trouble in the Far East today is the result of our not having the right kind of a merchant marine to carry things where they should go.

I do hope that before there are simply perfunctory objections—although some of the bills may be technical in their nature—those who object will at least take time to discuss the subjects. We have passed many bills of an emergency nature. We have enlarged the Army. We have considered appropriations. We have taken care of the draft. But when it comes to the merchant marine, then merely because somebody has some deep-seated prejudice against the merchant marine, because he thinks there was something bad in the old Merchant Marine Commission, he simply, without any consideration whatsoever, objects to a group of maritime bills. We certainly learned a lesson after World War I about our merchant marine. I hope that before Senators object to all these bills pertaining to the merchant marine they will consider the situation we are in and at least do us the courtesy of examining the bills thoroughly.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The next bill will be stated.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 3687) to require the armed services to utilize private American shipping services for the overseas transportation of commodities and civilian personnel was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, I ask that the bill go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

TIME OF TAKING EFFECT OF ANNUITIES OF MEMBERS AND ELECTED OFFICERS OF CONGRESS

The bill (S. 3682) to amend the Civil Service Retirement Act of May 29, 1930, as amended, with respect to the time of taking effect of annuities of Members and elected officers of the Senate and House of Representatives, was announced as next in order.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of the bill?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. JOHNSTON] is recognized.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. The purpose of the bill is to remove an apparent inequity with respect to Members and elected officers of Congress. At the present time Members of Congress go out of office on January 3, and cannot make their application for annuity until February 3. The bill would do away with that inequity.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Members of Congress will be on the Government payroll 3 days in January. Why should they secure retirement pay for those days?

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. They do not go on retirement annuity until the third day of the next month, after their service is severed.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Is it not a fact that if Members of Congress want to go on the retirement list as of January 1 of any year, all they have to do is to resign their seats as Members of the Congress? If they want to remain in Congress until the 3d of January they should not request to be placed on the retirement list for those days because then they will be drawing both retirement pay and regular pay at the same time.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Both retirement and regular service pay is not being paid at the same time. When making application for annuity one says he is off the payroll of the United States. Under the bill it will not be necessary to wait until the 1st of the month to do so. All other employees have that privilege.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Under the existing law all other employees' retirement begins on the 1st day of the month following the time when they remove themselves from the payroll. If a Member wants to go on retirement all he has to do is to resign.

I object.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill wlil be passed over.

PERIODIC CENSUS OF GOVERNMENTS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 7265) to provide for the conduct of a periodic census of governments.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment to the bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 1, line 4, before the word "take" it is proposed to strike out the word "shall" and insert "may at his discretion."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill (H. R. 7265) was read the third time and passed.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Mr. President, I move that the Senate insist upon its amendment, ask a conference with the House thereon, and that the Chair appoint conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to, and the Vice President appointed Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina, Mr. HUMPHREY, and Mr. LANGER conferees on the part of the Senate.

CONVEYANCE OF LAND TO TOWN OF TREMONT, MAINE

The bill (H. R. 4390) to authorize the conveyance, for school purposes, of certain land in Acadia National Park to the town of Tremont, Maine, and for other purposes, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

The VICE PRESIDENT. That completes the bills that were specified to be considered in addition to those after the last call of the calendar. The Secretary will now call the bills that went to the foot of the calendar.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to return to Calendar 1893, Senate bill 2204. There was objection, and the bill went to the foot of the calendar.

Mr. McFARLAND. Mr. President, I ask that the Senate proceed to consider the bills in the order in which they went to the foot of the calendar. Otherwise we will waste a considerable amount of time by Senators making unanimous-consent requests for return to consideration of certain bills.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Arizona object to the request of the Senator from West Virginia?

Mr. McFARLAND. I do.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Objection is heard. The bills will be called in the order in which they went to the foot of the calendar.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, would it not be convenient if the bills were called beginning with the earliest number on the calendar, beginning with Calendar No. 1850, and then proceed in order from that number.

The VICE PRESIDENT. That is what is proposed to be done. The bills will be called in the order in which they were placed at the foot of the calendar. The clerk will call the first bill.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (H. R. 7155) to authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to cooperate with the States to enable them to provide technical services to private forest land owners, and for other purposes, was announced as the first bill at the foot of the calendar.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Kansas has asked that the bill be passed over.

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, I hope the Senator will not object unless he has been requested by some Senator who is not present to do so. I should like to make an explanation of the bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Kansas has objected. The bill will be passed over.

Mr. HOLLAND. Will the Senator withhold his objection so an explanation of the bill may be made?

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. I am glad to do so. I made the objection by request. I shall withhold the objection.

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, I think it might be fitting to put a brief explanation in the RECORD. In the last session there was a bill with four important amendments to the Forestry Act. Three were adopted. The one which is embraced in House bill 7155 was cut out last year.

This year the two committees of the House and Senate have worked very hard in the effort to get together on this particular proposition, which is to extend the forestry services that were heretofore available only to the owners of wood lots on farms to the owners of forestry tracts. In two respects the program which was proposed last year in this field has been very radically affected. One as to the size of it. Last year there was authorized or proposed to be authorized $6,000,000 a year. This year that has been cut to $2,500,000 a year, which is the same amount now in the Norris-Doxey Act. The Norris-Doxey Act is proposed to be repealed by this provision.

There are two differences between this measure and the present law. One is that the owners of forest tracts which are not farm tracts or wood lots are included. A second provision has been put in the bill making it clear that it is the intention of Congress that commercial foresters be not interfered with, but helped by this measure. Senators will find that the committee amendment covers that, and likewise that the report of the committee covers it, so that there can be no possible feeling from here on that this is an effort to displace commercial professional foresters. Anything but that is the case, indeed, the committees are anxious to protect the commercial and professional foresters.

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, will the Senator from Kansas withhold his objection so I may say something about the bill?

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Yes.

Mr. AIKEN. The provisions of the bill with respect to foresters have been in effect in my own State of Vermont for some time. The foresters have been of inestimable value to the landowners of the State. Vermont is the only State that is completely served in this way at this time. So far as I know, and I think I know every State forester in New England, they have all urged passage of the bill. I understand it was objected to by the distinguished Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. SALTONSTALL]. I cannot conceive of any reason under heaven why he would object to the bill, and I hope that when he returns to the floor—I am sorry he is not here now—he will see fit to withdraw his objection.

The bill has been amended to meet all the objections which were raised to it when it was called up before, to the satisfaction of all, so far as I know.

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. AIKEN. Yes.

Mr. HOLLAND. Is it true that after long debate in the last session, and also throughout this session, the measure finally comes out of the committee by unanimous vote of the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry?

Mr. AIKEN. What the Senator from Florida says is true. This is a bill which puts this work squarely under the States, under State direction. It is a bill which would promote the work of the consulting foresters who feared that it might take work away from them. I certainly have hoped that the bill, which, so far as I know, has had the unanimous backing of every State forester in the United States—it certainly has had the backing of the heads of their associations, and I know of no objection on the part of any of them—will be passed.

I hope the senior Senator from Massachusetts will see fit to withdraw his objection, so that the work provided for in this measure, which has done so much good in New England, may be extended to other parts of the country.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Mr. President, I renew the objection.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Objection being made, the bill goes over.

MAINTENANCE OF DOMESTIC TIN-SMELTING INDUSTRY

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 3666) to extend for 5 years the authority to provide for the maintenance of a domestic tin-smelting industry, which was to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That section 2 of the joint resolution entitled "Joint resolution to strengthen the common defense and to meet industrial needs for tin by providing for the maintenance of a domestic tin-smelting industry," approved June 28, 1947 (61 Stat. 190), as amended, is amended by striking out "1951" and inserting in lieu thereof "1956", and by substituting for the period after the word "designate" a colon, and adding the following: "Provided, That such powers, functions, duties, and authority shall be exercised and performed with due regard to the public interest in the maintenance of domestic smelting of Western Hemisphere tin ores and concentrates by American private enterprise."

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I move that the Senate disagree to the amendment of the House, ask for a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Vice President appointed Mr. JOHNSON of Texas, Mr. HUNT, and Mr. MORSE conferees on the part of the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will state the next measure ordered placed at the foot of the calendar.

GRANT OF LAND TO ALBUQUERQUE FOR PUBLIC PURPOSES

The bill (S. 3584) to amend the act of June 9, 1906 (34 Stat. 227), entitled "An act granting land to the city of Albuquerque for public purposes," was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act approved June 9, 1906 (34 Stat. 227), entitled "An act granting land to the city of Albuquerque for public purposes," is hereby amended by adding thereto the following:

"SEC. 2. The city of Albuquerque is authorized to convey, without restrictions as to use, not to exceed one-half of the acreage patented under this act: Provided, however, That all the proceeds derived from such sale or sales shall be used for the construction of a public auditorium, erected either under the sole sponsorship of the city of Albuquerque or, if located upon land owned by the University of New Mexico, as a joint project with that university."

PERFORMANCE OF CERTAIN FUNCTIONS OF THE PRESIDENT BY OTHER OFFICERS

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will state the next measure which has been ordered to be placed at the foot of the calendar.

The bill (H. R. 5526) to authorize the President to provide for the performance of certain functions of the President by other officers of the Government, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, what is the calendar number of the bill?

The VICE PRESIDENT. It is Calendar No. 1871, House bill 5526.

Mr. LANGER. I have no objection.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill (H. R. 5526) was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AUTHORIZATION FOR GRANTEES OF RECREATIONAL DEMONSTRATION PROJECT LANDS TO MAKE LAND EXCHANGES

The VICE PRESIDENT. The next measure ordered placed at the foot of the calendar will be stated.

The bill (H. R. 3284) to authorize grantees of recreational demonstration project lands to make land exchanges relating to such properties, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, a bill with a lower calendar number than the one just announced was previously ordered to be placed at the foot of the calendar. I refer to Calendar No. 1893, Senate bill 2204.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk informs the Chair that it is a bill which the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY] wished to have brought up a moment ago; and it went to the foot of the calendar.

Mr. NEELY. That is correct, and I ask that the Senate return to that bill now.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bills which previously have been ordered to the foot of the calendar are not being called up in accordance with the sequence of their calendar numbers, but are being called up in accordance with the place they took when they were ordered to the foot of the calendar. The bill to which the Senator refers will be reached in due course.

The question now is: Is there objection to the present consideration of House bill 3284, Calendar No. 1937?

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of the bill?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, if my memory serves me correctly, this bill has already been passed. I have previously made an explanation of it, although of course I am glad to do so again.

This bill deals with certain lands which have been conveyed by the Federal Government to the States, and the bill allows the States which have received these grants to make exchanges of lands in order to acquire private property within the exterior boundaries.

As I have said, it is my understanding that the bill has already been passed, because I clearly recall having made an explanation of the bill earlier in the day.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair is advised that the bill has not been passed.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Of course, I am very glad to make the explanation again, but on the previous occasion, there was no objection to the bill, so far as I recall.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair is advised that the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MORSE] asked that the bill go to the foot of the calendar.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Oh, yes, Mr. President; my recollection now returns. The Chair has correctly advised me.

This bill is occasioned by the fact that under the act of June 6, 1942, the Federal Government conveyed to the States certain areas which had been used for recreational development under a program which had been abandoned.

The property now belongs to the States. However, in several instances—notably in Pennsylvania and in Tennessee—within the exterior boundaries of the areas granted, there were privately owned lands.

In order to enable the States to acquire title to those lands, it is necessary that this bill be passed and enacted into law, in order to allow the Secretary of the Interior to grant to the States the right to make exchanges of the lands.

Enactment of the bill will cost the Federal Government nothing.

Mr. LANGER. I thank the Senator.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill (H. R. 3284) was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE MIDDLE DISTRICT OF PENNSYLVANIA—BILL PASSED OVER

The VICE PRESIDENT. The next measure ordered placed at the foot of the calendar will now be stated.

The bill (H. R. 6606) to provide that the district judge for the eastern, middle, and western districts of Pennsylvania shall become a district judge for the middle district of Pennsylvania alone when the first vacancy occurs in that district was announced as next in order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. MARTIN subsequently said: Mr. President, let me inquire in regard to Calendar No. 2007, House bill 6606.

The VICE PRESIDENT. That bill has just been passed.

Mr. MARTIN. I ask unanimous consent for the reconsideration of the vote by which the bill was passed.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the vote by which the bill was passed will be reconsidered, and the bill is again before the Senate.

Mr. MARTIN. Mr. President, my colleague, the senior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. MYERS], and I have been discussing this bill, and we would like to have it placed at the foot of the calendar, so that it can be considered at the next call of the calendar. The bill involves a matter——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Let the Chair state that ordinarily the bill would keep its place on the calendar if it is not acted on today.

If the bill goes to the foot of the calendar now, it will be called again today.

Mr. MARTIN. Then, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the bill now be passed over and be called at the next call of the calendar.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ESTABLISHMENT OF OFFICE OF CIVIL DEFENSE, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

The VICE PRESIDENT. The next measure ordered placed at the foot of the calendar will be stated.

The bill (H. R. 8909) to authorize the District of Columbia government to establish an Office of Civil Defense, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. HUNT. Mr. President, the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. WHERRY], the distinguished minority floor leader, has submitted three amendments. As chairman of the subcommittee handling the bill, I should like to have the amendments stated.

The VICE PRESIDENT. First, the question is whether there is objection to the present consideration of the bill.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk does not seem to have the amendments to which the Senator from Wyoming has referred.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, it is immaterial to me whether the amendments are read; if the chairman of the subcommittee agrees to accept the amendments, we can take the bill to conference, and not have the amendments read at this time.

Mr. HUNT. Mr. President, I accept the amendments.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Nevertheless, it is necessary that the amendments be read.

Mr. HUNT. The amendments have previously been read.

Mr. McFARLAND. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendments be waived.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Arizona?

Mr. LANGER. I object. I think the amendments should be read and voted on.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendments have now been located, and the clerk will proceed to state them.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 3, in line 22, after "(e)", it is proposed to insert "in accordance with the civil service laws and regulations."

The amendment was agreed to.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 3, in line 24, it is proposed to strike out "without reference to" and insert "in accordance with."

The amendment was agreed to.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 4, after the word "Act", before the semicolon in line 3, it is proposed to insert a colon and the words: "Provided, That no person shall be employed pursuant to this paragraph until the Federal Bureau of Investigation shall have made an investigation and a report to the Director concerning the loyalty of such person, and the Director, in accordance with such regulations as he shall issue, shall make a finding on the basis of the report of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, whether the employee is suitable for employment."

The amendment was agreed to.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 5, after line 19, it is proposed to insert a new section as follows:

SEC. 6. The Office of Civil Defense, through the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, shall submit to the Senate and House of Representatives on the first day of each regular session of the Congress, a report of its activities and expenditures under this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I understood from the reading of one of the amendments that it would place Mr. J. Edgar Hoover in the position of evaluating his own reports.

Mr. WHERRY. No; the Director of the Office of Civil Defense will evaluate them. The FBI will make the investigation, and after the Director receives the report he will decide whether the person concerned is loyal or disloyal.

Mr. McCARRAN. Of course, Mr. Hoover is the Director.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. Hoover is Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, but I refer to the Director of the Office of Civil Defense, to be appointed under this measure by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to prepare a defense program.

There is no other way by which to proceed in connection with this matter. The FBI will make the investigations and will report to the Director of the Office of Civil Defense, who will certify as to the person's loyalty.

Mr. HUNT. Mr. President, I offer an additional amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 2, line 8, it is proposed to insert the following:

Notwithstanding the limitation of any law, there may be employed in such Office of Civil Defense any person who has been retired from any of the Armed Forces of the United States or any office or position in the Federal or District governments, and while so employed in such Office of Civil Defense any such retired person may receive the compensation authorized for such employment or the retired pay, retirement compensation, or annuity, whichever he may elect, and upon the termination of his employment in such Office of Civil Defense, he shall be restored to the same status as a retired officer or employee with the same retired pay, retirement compensation, or annuity to which he was entitled before having been employed in such Office of Civil Defense.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

Mr. HUNT. Mr. President, I move that the Senate insist on its amendments, ask a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to, and the Vice President appointed Mr. HUNT, Mr. FREAR, and Mr. HENDRICKSON conferees on the part of the Senate.

GRANT OF PERMANENT RESIDENCE STATUS TO CERTAIN ALIENS

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Clerk will state the next measure which was placed at the foot of the calendar.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. A concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 181) favoring the grant of status of permanent residence to certain aliens.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the consideration of the resolution?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Colorado [Mr. JOHNSON] has an amendment on the desk to this bill.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. The amendment has been read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will restate the amendment.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 1, immediately following line 9, to insert:

A-6843526, Forostyna, Lidia Maria.

The amendment was agreed to.

The concurrent resolution, as amended, was agreed to.

AMENDMENT OF TRADING WITH THE ENEMY ACT

The bill (S. 1292) to amend section 32 (a) (2) of the Trading With the Enemy Act, was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Reserving the right to object, Mr. President, may we have an explanation of this bill?

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, this bill amends the Trading With the Enemy Act, so as to permit the Treasurer of the United States, through the auspices of the Alien Property Custodian, to make returns of property to two classes of individuals, namely: (a) To individuals who, at all times since Pearl Harbor, were citizens of the United States, and (b) those individuals who, having lost United States citizenship solely by reason of marriage to a citizen or subject of a foreign country, reacquired such citizenship prior to the date of enactment of this bill if such individual would have been a citizen of the United States at all times since Pearl Harbor.

During the confusion of the early war years, the Alien Property Custodian vested the property of all United States citizens, who had dual citizenship where half of the duality of citizenship was that of an enemy nation. When time and conditons permitted reappraisal, the Alien Property Custodian declined to vest the property of American citizens who possessed duality of citizenship if there was no history of their bearing aid and succor to the enemy.

Under existing law, the Alien Property Custodian is prohibited from making returns of this vested property, a situation which gives rise to obvious inequities and one toward which this bill is directed.

The bill bears the favorable endorsement of the Alien Property Custodian of the Department of Justice.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I thank the distinguished Senator for his explanation.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1292) which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That subdivision (D) of paragraph (2) of section 32 (a) of the Trading With the Enemy Act, as amended, is amended by inserting after the words "citizenship under the law of such nation" a colon and the following: "And provided further, That, notwithstanding the provisions of subdivision (C) hereof and of this subdivision (D), return may be made to an individual who at all times since December 7, 1941, was a citizen of the United States, or to an individual who, having lost United States citizenship solely by reason of marriage to a citizen or subject of a foreign country, reacquired such citizenship prior to date of enactment of this proviso if such individual would have been a citizen of the United States at all times since December 7, 1941, but for such marriage."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RELIEF OF SHAREHOLDERS OF GOSHEN VENEER CO.—BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 410) for the relief of the former shareholders of the Goshen Veneer Co., an Indiana corporation, was announced as next in order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, in view of the large amount of money involved in this bill, namely $513,000, may we have an explanation of the bill, and of the reasons for the recommendations of the committee?

The VICE PRESIDENT. An explanation is requested.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, the sponsor of this bill, the Senator from Indiana [Mr. CAPEHART], is now on the floor, but I shall, with the permission of the Senate, proceed to explain the bill.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield.

Mr. CHAVEZ. The amount of money involved is so large that notwithstanding any explanation the Senator may make now—and I have the greatest confidence in him both now and at all other times—it appears to me that a bill involving $513,000 should not be passed on the Unanimous Consent Calendar. Hence I shall object to its consideration.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, will the Senator be kind enough to withhold his objection, that I may make a brief statement?

Mr. CHAVEZ. Yes.

Mr. DONNELL. I thank the Senator.

Mr. President, I can well understand the view of the Senator from New Mexico. This is a large amount of money. I shall make the explanation with respect to the bill, a brief one, because of the 5-minute limitation. I make it because of the fact that I am a member of the subcommittee of the Committee on the Judiciary, and I reported the bill after the action taken by the committee.

The subcommittee devoted a very considerable amount of time to studying this bill. Briefly, the bill proposes to pay certain specified sums of money to claimants as shareholders and debenture holders, for their losses, and for their respective property rights, in the Goshen Veneer Co., an Indiana corporation. The facts are, briefly, that this company, organized I think originally as a partnership but subsequently as a corporation, had been in existence since 1892, and had been engaged solely in the manufacture of plywood.

It appears that at the beginning of World War II there was a crucial shortage of aluminum, and the Air Forces of the United States decided to test structural plywood in the fabrication of gliders and glider wings. In that connection, a representative of the Office of the War Department Air Corps, shortly before July 29, 1942, called on this company and spoke to a Mr. John Junior Snoke, who was not a stockholder but who was the operating manager of the company. The purpose of the visit of the emissary of the War Department was to find plants, throughout the district in which this plant was located, which had the facilities and the personnel to manufacture aeronautical plywood for the Air Forces.

Obviously, Mr. President, as the committee developed and found in the course of its study, this was an experimental matter. This company agreed to go into the manufacture of plywood for the Air Forces, to be used in connection with gliders, as I have indicated, and glider wings, and it was found necessary, as it had been told by a representative of the Government, to expand very largely its financial operations. The result was that large borrowings were effected by the company, and finally, about March 25, 1943, when the borrowings had expanded to a point which to this company was a very large amount—within a few hundreds of $600,000—another loan agreement was entered into between the company and First Bank and Trust Co., of South Bend, to effect a situation under which additional loans might be made.

In the course of this loan agreement, which is set forth in the report, provision was made for the turning over of at least 51 percent of the voting shares of the capital stock as collateral for the loan.

Mr. President, it would require much more time than is afforded at this moment for me to develop the situation as it did in fact develop. The situation was that in December 1942, a Mr. Van Antwerp, who was president of the bank by which the loans had been made, came to the company, went over all the bookkeeping, and announced that from that day on the bank was going to countersign all checks issued by the company. It appears, in the opinion of our subcommittee, and, I think, in the opinion of the Judiciary Committee, relying on our subcommittee, that the control of the management of the company was taken out of the hands of the stockholders, at or about the time that Mr. Van Antwerp announced his intention of countersigning all the checks and passing on the financial transactions of the company.

Ultimately, Mr. President—and I am near the end of the story, and I see the hands of the clock indicate the passage of time—ultimately, the situation was that the entire assets of the company became lost to the company. The recital of the facts would take too long, but the outcome was that the company had, at the suggestion of the representative of the War Department, entered into this work, its borrowings expanded, and at least one claim of approximately $800,000 could not be collected and was ultimately settled by the Government, which was, in effect, controlling the situation, for $150,000.

Mr. President, there are many, many more details of this matter which I could amplify if time were available, but the point is that the company became worthless; and it became worthless because it had responded to the suggestion made by the War Department, with the idea of contributing to the victory of our country.

The committee felt that the equities of the case are such that these people should be reimbursed, rather than to send the matter to the Court of Claims. One of the claimants is 87 years old, and an inference derived from the evidence indicates that another one is upward of 80 years of age. It is thought that the matter might be handled by an authorization for an appropriation by the Congress.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, I demand the regular order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the next bill on the list.

RUDOLPH FARCHER

The bill (S. 2204) for the relief of Rudolph Farcher was announced as next in order.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, and I am not going to object, because of a statement made by the distinguished Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY] that there was a unanimous-consent request earlier in the afternoon that the bill go to the foot of the calendar. For that reason, I shall not object. I wish to keep faith with the distinguished Senator. But the bill is not on the list which I received from the desk, and, as I have explained, several Senators have left the Chamber with the understanding that the only bills that would be called were those which went to the foot of the calendar. I am going to object to returning to any other bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. This bill was not sent to the foot of the calendar.

Mr. WHERRY. That is the very point about which I interrogated the Parliamentarian. I understood there had been a request at 2 o'clock with reference to it.

Mr. NEELY. That is correct. The Presiding Officer at that time, the distinguished Senator from Mississippi [Mr. STENNIS], said the bill would go to the foot of the calendar.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, in my judgment, humanity demands that the bill be passed. It provides for the payment of $5,000 to an innocent man who lost a leg because of the careless driving of a truck by a Government employee. The Judiciary Committee has carefully considered the bill, and the distinguished chairman of that committee [Mr. MCCARRAN] is in favor of its passage.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2204) for the relief of Rudolph Farcher, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment, on page 1, line 5, to strike out "$9,250" and insert "$5,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $5,000 to Rudolph Farcher, of Huntington, W. Va., in full satisfaction of his claim against the United States for compensation for injuries sustained by him on August 21, 1939, when he was on a milk wagon which was struck by a truck operated by John Cromwell, an employee of the Work Projects Administration, who was assigned to the United States Engineer Office: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The VICE PRESIDENT. That completes the bills at the foot of the calendar.

DEVELOPMENT OF IMPROVED TRANSPORT AIRCRAFT

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. Mr. President, there is a bill which became lost in the shuffle. I refer to Calendar No. 1754, Senate bill 3504, which has the support of every department of Government, including the President of the United States.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair is advised that that bill is at the point where we began to call the calendar today, and it has not been on the list of bills at the foot of the calendar.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. It was supposed to be on the list of bills back of the call of the calendar today.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It is not on the list which was sent to the desk.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent——

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I hope the Senator will not do that. If the Senator can convince the Chair, there is no one in the Senate whom I would rather accommodate than the distinguished Senator from Colorado.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. I withdraw the request.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk advises the Chair that the bill was not on the list of bills at the foot of the calendar, nor is it on the special list to be called today.

Mr. McFARLAND. Mr. President, I presume some Senators have requests to place matters in the RECORD. When that has been done, I intend to move that the Senate take a recess. First, I wish to express my appreciation for the cooperation of the Members of the Senate and of the staff. It has been a long, tiresome calendar, and I think we have accomplished a great deal.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McFARLAND. I yield.

AUTHORIZATION TO ISSUE PATENTS FOR CERTAIN LANDS IN PYRAMID LAKE INDIAN RESERVATION, NEV.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Calendar No. 956, Senate bill 17, be included in the next call of the calendar.

Mr. WHERRY. I have no objection. I wonder if the Senator from Colorado [Mr. JOHNSON], wants to make a similar request.

DEVELOPMENT OF IMPROVED TRANSPORT AIRCRAFT

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. I make the request that Calendar No. 1754, Senate bill 3504, be included in the next call of the calendar.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

AUTHORIZATION OF CONSTRUCTION AT GRIFFISS AIR FORCE BASE

Mr. IVES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McFARLAND. I yield.

Mr. IVES. Mr. President, I should like to ask the distinguished acting majority leader a question. Earlier in the day a request was made to place Calendar No. 1940, Senate bill 3727, at the foot of the calendar, and after some discussion it was decided not to do so because it was out of order; but I understood a motion was to be made temporarily to lay aside the unfinished business and to consider Senate bill 3727. Can the Senator indicate to us the plan in that connection?

Mr. McFARLAND. Mr. President, I did not yield for that purpose. The hour is late, it is now 7 o'clock——

Mr. IVES. I am not asking the Senator to yield, I am asking what he plans to do.

Mr. McFARLAND. The appropriation bill is the pending business, and the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. MCKELLAR] objects to its being displaced for the consideration of other proposed legislation. If it is going to be displaced, that will have to be worked out later.

SALE OF CERTAIN ALLOTTED INHERITED LAND OF THE ROSEBUD INDIAN RESERVATION, S. DAK.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McFARLAND. I yield.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, as a noncontroversial matter which ought to be cleared up today, I should like to say that on the 8th of June the Senate passed Senate bill 2949, which granted a patent in fee for 160 acres to an Indian.

On June 6, the House of Representatives passed an identical bill, H. R. 6703. It has been referred to the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs of the Senate. We are therefore in the position of each House having passed the identical bill but under a separate number. The Senate passed its bill, and the House passed its bill. This confusion could be cleared away if I could have unanimous consent to have the Senate Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs discharged from further consideration of the House bill, H. R. 6703, so that it may be passed by the Senate today. That would clear up the whole matter.

Mr. WHERRY. May I inquire of the distinguished Senator when the Senate passed the bill to which he refers?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. On the 8th of June. The House passed an identical House bill, 2 days before, on June 6.

Mr. WHERRY. I have no objection.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY] that the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs be discharged from further consideration of House bill 6703? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I wish to inquire whether the House bill is identical with the Senate bill.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. It is the identical bill.

Mr. WHERRY. I want to be sure that we are not doing anything that has not been done already.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. It is the identical bill. It consists of only 10 lines, and I shall be glad to read it to the Senator.

Mr. WHERRY. No; I shall be glad to take the Senator's word. I want the RECORD to show that it is the identical bill.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. It is.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill (H. R. 6703) to authorize the sale of certain allotted inherited land on the Rosebud Indian Reservation, S. Dak., was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SMALL DEFENSE PLANTS CORPORATION

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. President, in 1942, during the Second World War, Congress enacted legislation to establish the Small War Plants Corporation. Today I have introduced a bill in the Senate, and Representative WRIGHT PATMAN, the chairman of the House Committee on Small Business, has introduced an identical bill in the House of Representatives. The purpose of the bills is to provide for setting up a Small Defense Plants Corporation in accordance with the Defense Act of 1950. Representative PATMAN has inserted in the RECORD a copy of the bill and an analysis of it. I invite Senators to read the bill and the analysis.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD at this point a statement which has been prepared jointly by Representative PATMAN and myself relating to the proposed legislation.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT BY SENATOR SPARKMAN AND REPRESENTATIVE PATMAN ON THE SMALL DEFENSE PLANTS ACT OF 1950

America today is engaged in a decisive struggle to determine whether the ideals and institutions on which this Nation was founded will survive. In order to stop aggression, the President has ordered the partial mobilization of our manpower; and Congress is laying plans for the effective utilization of our industrial potential. The basic objective of these efforts is to preserve and perpetuate political democracy for ourselves as well as for other freedom-loving peoples. In the attainment of this objective, however, it is important that we maintain the prime source of our strength—the system of competitive free enterprise which has made us the preeminent industrial nation of the world.

If we are to achieve our goal of a free and competitive economy, we must provide for the effective integration of small business in the defense effort. From the viewpoint of a democracy, small business constitutes the critical segment of the economy. Free enterprise and economic vigor depend upon the maintenance of small-business opportunity. We want to assure for our returning servicemen the opportunity to work for themselves, their neighbors, or a free-enterprise corporation. This they understand is the essence of the democratic economy they are fighting and dying to preserve. We must safeguard that kind of economy here at home.

THE NEED FOR SPECIAL SMALL BUSINESS LEGISLATION IN THE PRESENT DEFENSE PROGRAM

A critical problem of partial or complete mobilization arises in the abnormal demands for the basic commodities—such as basic steel products, copper, lead, zinc, aluminum, leather, and chemicals—for use in processing and fabrication. The experience of World War II indicated that when basic supplies become scarce large corporations proceed to embark on their own programs of allocation. Ample supplies are channeled to their own subsidiaries, while supplies sold to independents—for civilian and defense use—are sharply curtailed. The results of this process are (1) that many small business firms are rapidly forced to close their plants because of an inability to secure supplies and (2) that many of the small-business firms which do survive are forced to become subcontractors of the giant concerns which control supplies of essential raw materials.

In most cases, small business does not enjoy the protection or advantage of competition among the giant concerns which place the subcontracts. Instead, the small units are forced to implore the large concerns for such favors as they may bestow and in amounts and upon terms which are determined solely by the giant concern or concerns.

The experience in the early part of World War II showed that the growing scarcities of basic materials and their control by the large corporations rapidly resulted (a) in the elimination of many small business units and (b) in the subjecting of many others to the dictates of the primary contractors. In an effort to correct these evils, Congress created the Smaller War Plants Corporation.

Today a similar need exists for special legislation to insure that small business will have (1) a fair share of available supplies—for defense and essential civilian production—and (2) a fair and equitable system of subcontracting in those cases in which primary contracts are awarded to large concerns.

An indication of trends presently at work is revealed in the plan to grant private industry exemption from the antitrust laws in order to permit the voluntary allocation by industry of scarce materials. Since big business insists that it has the right to select its own customers, how much consideration can small business expect to secure in a plan of voluntary allocation? The answer is practically none. Big business now decides (1) who will get supplies, (2) how much anyone can secure, and (3) what prices such persons are to pay. A system of voluntary allocation simply will accentuate this plan; and in a period of growing scarcities, small business has nothing to insure that it will secure a fair and equitable share of the short supplies.

How, under the present proposals of (a) anti-trust-law exemption and (b) voluntary allocations, can small business survive? What must it do to find employment for its facilities? The answer to this question was revealed, at least in part, by Mr. Harry Blythe, Munitions Board adviser and chief of industrial mobilization planning. In the New York Times for July 22, 1950, Mr. Blythe is quoted as advising small-business men to establish contacts with larger companies immediately with a view toward obtaining subcontracts on Government work. This is the heart of the present voluntary plan. Small business must find its salvation by seeking the favor of some big business unit.

The essential purpose of the legislation which we are now proposing is to maintain the independence and dignity of small business (1) by insuring it a fair and equitable share of available supplies and (2) by providing for a supervision of the subcontracting system to insure that small business will get a fair deal.

THE NEED FOR ACTION NOW

It is essential that we act without delay to marshal the resources of small business. Once the pattern of industrial mobilization has been established, only a drastic operation can change its character. The tremendous job facing us can never be done by the large concerns alone. We cannot afford to ignore the resources of small business which in the aggregate comprise the major portion of our productive facilities. For this reason our bill is being proposed at the very beginning of the defense effort.

In World War II the defense effort got under way in 1940. It soon became abundantly clear that, as successful as the representatives of the larger corporations were in mobilizing the resources of their own companies, they had neither the inclination nor the know-how to make full use of the facilities of small business. For 2 years the small-business man was forgotten and ignored. His plants lay idle. His markets vanished. His supply of materials dried up. His skills in innumerable, highly specialized operations remained untapped. His labor drifted away to other plants.

For these reasons the Congress in 1942 established the Smaller War Plants Corporation with the single purpose of bringing the facilities of small business into the war effort. The record of this agency is known to all. Its service to the American public in marshaling the resources of the country, in keeping small business alive and preserving free enterprise, will be an everlasting monument to the administration and to the Congress.

Let us not make the mistake of losing democracy at home while winning the battle against a foreign aggressor. Competition and free enterprise are at the heart of a democratic economic system. Small business is the vital element without which that system cannot function.

TRIBUTE TO PRESIDENT TRUMAN

Mr. LEHMAN. Mr. President, today's New York Herald Tribune carries a fine and significant tribute to President Truman's leadership in these times of crisis, written by the Alsop brothers. I ask unanimous consent to insert the article editorial in the body of the RECORD at this point.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. LEHMAN. Yes.

Mr. WHERRY. Did the Senator say that the matter he has referred to is in the form of an editorial in the New York Herald Tribune?

Mr. LEHMAN. It is a column written by the Alsop brothers.

Mr. WHERRY. The Alsop brothers had a column in the New York Herald Tribune?

Mr. LEHMAN. Yes.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE STATE OF MR. TRUMAN

(By Joseph and Stewart Alsop)

WASHINGTON.—It is time to give credit where credit is due. In the month that has passed since June 25, when southern Korea was attacked, President Harry S. Truman has consistently acted with courage and decision.

The fact is that Truman's mood has now undergone a complete change, according to those who have worked closely with him during this long, anxious month. The grin in which his face was formerly permanently wreathed has disappeared. So, at last, has the euphoric Presidential conviction that "everything's going to be all right."

The Korean aggression, and the military weakness of the United States revealed in Korea, are both said to have come as a profound shock to Truman. Thus the cockiness which has characterized the President since his victory in 1948 has suddenly been replaced by a certain, unaccustomed grimness. And, at any rate, for the time being, all Truman's energies are concentrated on dealing with the great danger which now confronts this country.

VISIBLE SHIFT IN POWER

Out of this change of mood have come Truman's two great decisions, to meet the challenge in Korea head-on, and to start a really serious program for the rearmament of the United States and the western world. Another outcome of the change of Presidential mood has been the increasingly visible shift in the anatomy of power within the Truman administration.

It is significant that the elaborate plans which were being laid before the Korea attack for another Truman political junket to "sell" the Fair Deal program and Fair Deal candidates, have now been shelved. The politicians and political advisers who were gleefully preparing these plans and other domestic political strategems no longer have easy access to the White House. Equally, such advocates of business-as-usual as Secretary of the Treasury John Snyder and Commerce Secretary Charles Sawyer have seen their White House influence reduced close to the zero mark.

While such men have been moving into the wings, others have moved front and center—most notably, perhaps, Gen. Omar Bradley and special Presidential Assistant Averell Harriman. Bradley now doubles in brass as Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and as the unofficial presidential chief of staff. He sees the President alone every morning at 9:30 and briefs him at length both on the specific tactical situation in Korea and on the general strategic situation.

Bradley also attends all the once-weekly meetings of the National Security Council, and the twice-weekly meetings of the Cabinet. The Cabinet meetings are now largely given over to military briefings, conducted by Bradley, and to discussion of the economic impact of rearmament. Such formerly live issues as the Brannan farm plan and the Ewing health plan are now exceedingly moribund if not entirely dead.

Harriman also attends both the Security Council and Cabinet meetings. Moreover, he spends much of his time in the west wing of the White House, seeing the President often several times a day. Secretary of State Dean Acheson usually sees the President only twice a week, on Tuesday and Thursday. Ordinarily, this situation could be expected to give rise to conflict between Acheson and Harriman. Actually, the two men have entire confidence in each other, and work very closely together. Indeed, Harriman's new role has in fact strengthened Acheson's position.

BIGGER ROLE FOR SYMINGTON

National Security Resources Board Chairman Stuart Symington has also been especially close to Truman since Korea, and he has been given the central responsibility for guiding the Truman rearmament program through Congress. Among the lesser-known figures in the post-Korea inner circle at the White House have been Special Consultant Sidney Souers; Executive Secretary James Lay of the NSC; and Naval Aide Robert L. Dennison, who briefs the President throughout the day on important dispatches from Korea or elsewhere. Health permitting, General Bedell Smith is expected soon to become Chief of the Central Intelligence Agency, and he will undoubtedly join this inner circle.

Truman also frequently confers individually with the three service secretaries, Army Secretary Frank Pace, Air Force Secretary Thomas Finletter, and Navy Secretary Francis Matthews, now welded into an effective team as the joint secretaries. As for Truman's Secretary of Defense, Louis A. Johnson, he goes to the White House about once a week, usually for an hour, in the late afternoon. But the exact status of the Truman-Johnson relationship remains something of a mystery.

The two men have never been personally close. And it is surely clear to Truman by now that the advice he has accepted from Johnson has been little short of catastrophic. It must be said that Truman himself was only too ready to accept Johnson's assurances that the country was getting "greater combat capabilities at less expense." Yet it must also be said in all fairness that since June 25 Truman has shown real leadership in repudiating so totally and rapidly the disastrous policies of his Secretary of Defense. As to whether Truman can sustain the leadership he has shown, and whether the man who has now been so publicly repudiated will retain his post, these questions remain to be settled. There is an obvious, direct connection between the two questions.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

WEDNESDAY, JULY 26, 1950

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Bernard Braskamp, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty and ever-blessed God, grant that our moments of prayer may be times of lofty vision, of insight and inspiration. May we be strengthened to accept the challenge of every difficult task and every noble adventure.

We humbly confess that our lives are frequently so low-vaulted we allow the windows of our souls to be made opaque by mere material ambitions and interests and there is no clear discernment of the spiritual realities and values.

We penitently seek Thy forgiveness for as nations and members of the human family we have been content to live on the lowlands of materialism and have failed to take cognizance of the spiritual.

Give us this day such a clear and commanding vision of the glory and splendor of the kingdom of righteousness and peace that we shall make its consummation the goal of all our aspirations and endeavors.

Hear us in Christ's name. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

A message in writing from the President of the United States was communicated to the House by Mr. Hawkes, one of his secretaries.

SPECIAL ORDER GRANTED

Mr. PATMAN asked and was given permission to address the House for 5 minutes today following the legislative program and any special orders heretofore entered, and to include therein certain extraneous matter.

TAXATION OF PERSONAL FINANCE COMPANIES

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H. R. 6073) to amend section 501 (b) (6) of the Internal Revenue Code, and ask unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

The conference report and statement follow:

CONFERENCE REPORT (H. REPT. No. 2701)

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6073) to amend section 501 (b) (6) of the Internal Revenue Code, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate and agree to the same with an amendment as follows:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the following: "That section 501 (b) (6) of the Internal Revenue Code is amended to read as follows:

"'(6) (A) A licensed personal finance company under State supervision, 80 per centum or more of the gross income of which is lawful interest received from loans made to individuals in accordance with the provisions of applicable State law if at least 60 per centum of such gross income is lawful interest (i) received from individuals each of whose indebtedness to such company did not at any time during the taxable year exceed in principal amount the limit prescribed for small loans by such law (or, if there is no such limit, $500), and (ii) not payable in advance or compounded and computed only on unpaid balances, and if the loans to a person, who is a shareholder in such company during the taxable year by or for whom 10 per centum or more in value of its outstanding stock is owned directly or indirectly (including in the case of an individual, stock owned by the members of his family as defined in section 503 (a) (2)), outstanding at any time during such year do not exceed $5,000 in principal amount; and

"'(B) A lending company, not otherwise excepted by section 501 (b), authorized to engage in the small loan business under one or more State statutes providing for the direct regulation of such business, 80 per centum or more of the gross income of which is lawful interest, discount or other authorized charges (i) received from loans maturing in not more than thirty-six months made to individuals in accordance with the provisions of applicable State law, and (ii) which do not, in the case of any individual loan, exceed in the aggregate an amount equal to simple interest at the rate of 3 per centum per month not payable in advance and computed only on unpaid balances, if at least 60 per centum of the gross income is lawful interest, discount or other authorized charges received from individuals each of whose indebtedness to such company did not at any time during the taxable year exceed in principal amount the limit prescribed for small loans by such law (or, if there is no such limit, $500), and if the deductions allowed to such company under section 23 (a) (relating to expenses), other than for compensation for personal services rendered by shareholders (including members of the shareholder's family as described in section 503 (a) (2)) constitute 15 per centum or more of its gross income, and the loans to a person, who is a shareholder in such company during the taxable year by or for whom 10 per centum or more in value of its outstanding stock is owned directly or indirectly (including in the case of an individual, stock owned by the members of his family as defined in section 503 (a) (2)), outstanding at any time during such year do not exceed $5,000 in principal amount.'

"SEC. 2. That section 501 (b) of the Internal Revenue Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"'(8) A finance company, actively and regularly engaged in the business of purchasing or discounting accounts or notes receivable or installments obligations, or making loans secured by any of the foregoing or by tangible personal property, at least 80 per centum of the gross income of which is derived from such business in accordance with the provisions of applicable State law or does not constitute personal holding company income as defined in section 502, if 60 per centum of the gross income is derived from one or more of the following classes of transactions:

"'(A) Purchasing or discounting accounts or notes receivable, or installment obligations evidenced or secured by contracts of conditional sale, chattel mortgages, or chattel lease agreements, arising out of the sale of goods or services in the course of the transferor's trade or business;

"'(B) Making loans, maturing in not more than thirty-six months, to, and for the business purposes of, persons engaged in trade or business, secured by—

"'(i) accounts or notes receivable, or installment obligations, described in subparagraph (a) above;

And the Senate agree to the same.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6073) to amend section 501 (b) (6) of the Internal Revenue Code, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the conferees and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

APPLICATION OF THE SURTAX ON PERSONAL HOLDING COMPANIES TO PERSONAL FINANCE COMPANIES

The House bill amended section 501 (b) (6) of the Internal Revenue Code, relating to the application of the surtax on personal holding companies to personal finance companies. Under existing law, a licensed personal finance company under State supervision is not considered to be a personal holding company if at least 80 percent of the gross income of the company is lawful interest received from individuals, each of whose indebtedness to such company did not at any time during the taxable year exceed $300 in principal amount, if such interest is not payable in advance or compounded and is computed only on unpaid balances. The House bill modified the language of this exception to reflect changes in State laws regulating the activities of personal finance companies that have been made over the past several years and imposed a new restriction with respect to the type of loan that a personal finance company might make to a stockholder without being classified as a personal holding company.

The Senate amendment expanded the definition of personal finance companies excluded from the provisions of the surtax on personal holding companies by eliminating the requirement of licensing if the business of a loan, discount or finance company is engaged in business conducted under State supervision as permitted by one or more controlling State statutes. The limitation upon the source of income of such companies was also relaxed in certain respects.

The conference amendment also broadens the scope of the exclusion provided by the House bill, but incorporates restrictive provisions which appear adequate to prevent the use of a finance company as a device for tax avoidance. The amendment does not conflict with the basic principles underlying the other exemptions granted under section 501 (b) of the Internal Revenue Code.

ROY O. WOODRUFF,
THOMAS H. JENKINS,
Managers on the Part of the House.

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Speaker, chapter 2 of the Internal Revenue Code imposes a penalty surtax on the undistributed income of personal holding companies that derive 80 percent of their income from such sources as dividends, interest, rents, and personal service contracts.

Among the excepted corporations are banks, life insurance companies, loan and investment companies, and licensed personal finance companies under State supervision, if at least 80 percent of their gross income is lawful interest received from individuals each of whose indebtedness to such company did not at any time during the taxable year exceed $300 and if the interest is not taken in advance or compounded and is computed only on unpaid balances.

H. R. 6073, as it passed the House, broadened the personal finance company exception by modifying the language of existing law to reflect changes that have been made during the past several years in State laws regulating the activities of these companies. The principal changes made by the House bill increased the $300 limitation on the size of the loan to $500 in all States and to the higher limits provided by State law in States where the law permits small loans in excess of $500, and permitted the companies to conduct a greater portion of their business on a discount basis.

The House bill, which was recommended by the Treasury Department, is included in the bill agreed to in conference without change in substance.

H. R. 6073, as it passed the Senate, expanded the coverage of the exception provided by the House bill to include all loan, discount, or finance companies engaged in business under State supervision as permitted by one or more controlling State statutes, and relaxed in certain respects the requirements of the House bill relating to the source of income.

H. R. 6073, as amended in conference, incorporates the House bill without change of substance and, in addition, provides an exception for two other types of companies engaging in the loan and finance business. The first of these two other types are lending companies engaged in the small loan business which cannot qualify as licensed personal finance companies because most of their loans are made on a discount basis. The exception is made available to these companies because their business activities are very similar to those of licensed personal finance companies. But in order to obtain the benefit of the exception these companies must comply with limitations and restrictions comparable to those governing licensed personal finance companies. The Treasury Department has stated informally that it will not object to the exception which the conference amendment provides for these companies.

The other type of company excepted by the conference amendment is a finance company 80 percent of the gross income of which is derived from the business of purchasing or discounting accounts or notes receivable or installment obligations or making loans secured by obligations of that character or by chattel mortgages. The exception for these companies is subject to restrictions and limitations to prevent tax avoidance similar to those applicable to licensed personal finance companies and other lending companies excepted by section 1 of the bill, and the Treasury has stated that it has no objection to this exception.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

WORKS OF ART ON LOAN TO THE TRUSTEES OF THE NATIONAL GALLERY OF ART

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of House Joint Resolution 497.

The Clerk read the title of the resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman make an explanation of this resolution?

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Speaker, this resolution simply gives the same privilege of importation relating to works of art that you do to books.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. It simply gives the right to import free?

Mr. REED of New York. Works of art, the same as they have heretofore on books and many other articles.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. How large will that traffic be?

Mr. REED of New York. Very small.

The National Gallery of Art has received on loan a number of old master paintings owned by a citizen of a foreign country. The owner cannot, however, allow his paintings long to remain in the United States because of the possible liability for Federal and District of Columbia death taxes and local property taxes.

The joint resolution would exempt from the Federal estate tax, and the District of Columbia estate and personal property taxes, works of art imported into the United States for exhibition purposes which are loaned for such purposes to the Trustees of the National Gallery of Art by a nonresident who is not a citizen of the United States.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That section 863 of the Internal Revenue Code (relating to property without the United States) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(c) Works of art on loan for exhibition: Works of art owned by a nonresident not a citizen of the United States imported into the United States solely for exhibition purposes, loaned to the Trustees of the National Gallery of Art for such purpose, and, at the time of the death of the owner, on exhibition, or en route to or from exhibition, either in the National Gallery of Art or in such other public gallery or museum as the Trustees of the National Gallery of Art may have designated."

SEC. 2. Section 1, article I, title V, of the District of Columbia Revenue Act of 1937, as amended, is hereby further amended by adding the following new subsection:

"(1) Works of art owned by a nonresident of the United States who is not a citizen of the United States lent without charge to the Trustees of the National Gallery of Art solely for exhibition without charge to the general public shall not be deemed to have a taxable situs in the District of Columbia."

SEC. 3. Paragraph No. 10 of section 6 of the act of July 1, 1902 (32 Stat. 620, ch. 1352), as amended, is hereby further amended by adding the following new subparagraph:

"Fifth. Works of art owned by a nonresident of the United States who is not a citizen of the United States lent without charge to the Trustees of the National Gallery of Art solely for exhibition without charge to the general public."

SEC. 4. The amendments made by section 1 of this joint resolution shall be applicable only with respect to estates of decedents dying after the date of enactment. The amendments made by section 2 of this joint resolution shall be applicable only with respect to decedents dying after the date of enactment. The amendments made by section 3 of this joint resolution shall be applicable beginning July 1, 1950.

With the following committee amendment:

On page 2, line 7, strike out the figure "(1)" and insert the letter "(l)."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AMENDING TARIFF ACT OF 1930

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 8514) to amend the Tariff Act of 1930 to provide for exemption from duty of certain sound recordings imported by the Department of State, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, this bill would extend to sound recordings imported by the Department of State for use in the international information program, the same treatment that is now accorded to books, engravings, photographs, etc., imported for the use of the Government.

The legislation has the unanimous approval of the Committee on Ways and Means.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That paragraph 1628 of the Tariff Act of 1930 is hereby amended by striking out the period at the end thereof and by inserting in lieu thereof a semicolon and the following: "sound recordings imported by the Department of State for use in the program authorized by the United States Information and Educational Exchange Act of 1948 (Public Law 402, 80th Cong.)."

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AMENDING TARIFF ACT OF 1930

Mr. FORAND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 8726) to amend the Tariff Act of 1930 to exempt from duty sound recordings for news broadcasts.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, some imports of sound recordings on magnetic tape are now classified according to the component material of chief value. The pending bill would facilitate the importation of sound recordings for radio or television news broadcasts by eliminating the difficult and time-consuming task of calculating the value for the purpose of assessing duty of such dutiable recordings. The bill amends the Tariff Act of 1930 to provide for the free entry of sound recordings transcribed or recorded abroad for radio or television news broadcasts in this country.

This bill has received the unanimous approval of the Committee on Ways and Means.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Rhode Island?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That paragraph 1726 of the Tariff Act of 1930, as amended, is amended by inserting after "newspapers," the following: "sound recordings transcribed or recorded abroad and imported for radio or television news broadcasts in the United States,".

SEC. 2. The amendment made by this act shall apply to articles entered for consumption or withdrawn from warehouse for consumption on or after the day following the date of enactment of this act.

Mr. FORAND. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. FORAND: Page 1, line 5, strike out "and imported."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AMENDING TARIFF ACT OF 1930

Mr. KING. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 7447) to amend the Tariff Act of 1930, as amended, with respect to sound-recording materials for use in connection with moving-picture exhibits and news reels.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, the purpose of this bill is to simplify the present procedures for customs collection in the case of sound recordings suitable for use in connection with motion-picture exhibits. At present, sound recordings other than sound tracks of motion-picture films, are subject to varying duties depending on the material of which they are made. This means that these duties are generally collected on an ad valorem basis, which involves calculating the cost of production and allocating the cost attributable to a particular recording. For these reasons, customs duties on sound recordings have been difficult to administer.

The Tariff Commission has advised that the rates of duty on sound recordings are not of particular significance, either from the standpoint of revenue or protection of domestic industry, and that making such recordings dutiable at a specific rate as provided in the pending bill would avoid the administrative difficulties involved in determining cost of production for duty purposes. Another provision of the bill would permit duty-free entry of recordings suitable for use in connection with moving-picture news reels.

This bill has received the unanimous approval of the Committee on Ways and Means.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That paragraph 1551 of the Tariff Act of 1930, as amended, is hereby amended by adding at the end thereof the following new proviso: "Provided further, That on photographic or magnetic film, tape, wire, or other material of any kind on which sound has been recorded abroad by photography, magnetism, or any means whatsoever, and which is suitable for use in reproducing sound in connection with moving-picture exhibits (not including any of the foregoing which is photographic film on which pictures have been recorded, or any of the foregoing which is provided for in paragraph 1726 of this act, as amended), the duty shall be 1 cent per linear foot."

SEC. 2. That paragraph 1726 of the Tariff Act of 1930, as amended, is hereby amended by inserting after the wcrd "reel" the following: "photographic or magnetic film, tape, wire, or other material of any kind on which sound has been recorded abroad by photography, magnetism, or any means whatsoever, and which is suitable for use in reproducing sound in connection with moving-picture news reels."

With the following committee amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

"That paragraph 1551 of the Tariff Act of 1930, as amended, is hereby amended by changing the period at the end thereof to a colon and by adding thereafter the following new proviso: 'Provided further, That on photographic or magnetic film, tape, wire, or other material of any kind on which sound has been recorded abroad by photography, magnetism, or any means whatsoever, and which is suitable for use in reproducing sound in connection with moving-picture exhibits (not including any of the foregoing which is photographic film on which pictures have been recorded, or any of the foregoing which is provided for in paragraphs 1615 (c) or 1726 of this act, as amended), the duty shall be 1 cent per linear foot, except that this rate shall not apply to any article so long as a lower duty is in effect therefor pursuant to a proclamation issued under section 350 of the Tariff Act of 1930, as amended, to carry out a trade agreement entered into prior to July 1, 1950.'

"SEC. 2. That paragraph 1726 of the Tariff Act of 1930, as amended, is hereby amended by changing the period at the end thereof to a semicolon and by adding thereafter the following: 'and photographic or magnetic film, tape, wire, or other material of any kind on which sound has been recorded abroad by photography, magnetism, or any means whatsoever, and which is suitable for use in reproducing sound in connection with moving-picture news reels (not including any photographic film not provided for hereinbefore on which pictures have been recorded)'."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

SPECIAL ORDER GRANTED

Mr. DAVIS of Georgia asked and was given permission to address the House for 30 minutes on tomorrow, following the legislative program and special orders heretofore entered.

UNIVERSAL MILITARY TRAINING

Mr. BRYSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks and include an editorial.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Carolina?

There was no objection.

Mr. BRYSON. Mr. Speaker, as we become more and more conscious of the fact that we must attain and maintain military strength if we expect to remain a free people, I again urge the adoption of a universal military training program. On several occasions I have expressed my views on this important subject both here in the House and to my people at home.

By nature we are a peace-loving people. Never have we provoked a war, nor have we profited materially from any of the wars in which we have participated. We abhor cruelty and violence. We dislike war, but until this troubled world is willing to face reality we must be prepared to meet any emergency.

It seems to me the only proper thing to do is to provide a universal military training program. Had this legislation passed when we first urged its adoption, we would have adequate strength now with which to protect ourselves.

Herewith I am attaching copy of an editorial appearing in the Spartanburg Herald, a South Carolina newspaper:

While on a visit here, Commander O. D. Freeman of the South Carolina Department of the American Legion said the Legion is planning an all-out endeavor to have Congress enact a universal military training program.

Commander Freeman was on his way to Indianapolis, where a meeting of Legion leaders from all over the country to discuss plans for the movement was scheduled.

There is much to be said in favor of universal military training.

Many competent observers believe World Wars I and II might have been averted if the United States had possessed a strong military establishment which universal military training would have provided.

Our disheartening experience in Korea and the threats of Communist aggression elsewhere around the globe has brought a realization that we must bolster our military defenses. This can be done either by building up and maintaining large regular armed forces or by having enough trained reserves ready at all times.

From a laymen's point of view, it seems to us that creating a reservoir of trained reserves by calling up all young men as they come of age for a period of military training would be the more orderly and more efficient method.

Aside from strengthening the Nation's defenses and serving as a deterrent to war a limited tour of duty in the armed services would be beneficial in many ways to the young men called up. It has been the experience of a large majority of those who have served that they come out of the services in better physical condition, more self-reliant and in general better fitted to pursue civilian careers than when they went in. Many young men find educational opportunities in the services that would not have been open to them in civilian life.

MIDYEAR ECONOMIC REPORT—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES (H. DOC. NO. 644)

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States, which was read, and, together with the accompanying papers, referred to the Joint Committee on the Economic Report and ordered to be printed with illustrations:

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, D. C., July 26, 1950.

The honorable the SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES:

SIR: I am presenting herewith a Midyear Economic Report to the Congress. This is supplementary to the Economic Report of the President of January 6, 1950, and is transmitted in accordance with section 3 (b) of the Employment Act of 1946.

In preparing this report, I have had the advice and assistance of the Council of Economic Advisers, members of the Cabinet, and heads of independent agencies.

Together with this report, I am transmitting a report, The Economic Situation at Midyear 1950, prepared for me by the Council of Economic Advisers in accordance with section 4 (c) (2) of the Employment Act of 1946.

Respectfully,

HARRY S. TRUMAN.

INCREASING COST OF LIVING

Mr. DAVENPORT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. DAVENPORT. Mr. Speaker, the rise in the cost of food and other commodities has become alarming and is giving great comfort to our enemies. Therefore, I am introducing a House resolution today to call for a full congressional investigation of soaring prices and the reappearance of black markets in our country. In this resolution I call for a special congressional committee with power of subpena, to be appointed by the Speaker. I have full confidence that the housewives of America will again play the great and important part which they did to help bring about victory in World War II. Our wonderful American women, both on the home front and in uniform, can be depended upon to do everything within their power to win a speedy victory. I believe that we Members of Congress should follow the lead of the great CIO and the A. F. of L. unions in helping to mobilize the women of America in the war against spiraling costs of living. In many cities throughout the United States, under the leadership of the CIO and the A. F. of L., thousands of women have paraded in front of stores carrying placards bearing warnings against hoarding. I appeal to the Members of this body that when you do go back into your districts that you organize volunteer groups and committees in the various communities to join in the fight against high prices and hoarding. Hoarding is unpatriotic. Hoarding helps the Communists. Hoarding helps our enemies. Let us all join in this war on soaring prices, black markets, panic buying, and unpatriotic hoarding.

MILITARY TRAINING FOR AMERICAN YOUTH

Mr. BENNETT of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

Mr. BENNETT of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I congratulate the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. BRYSON] for bringing again to the attention of the House the question of universal military training. I believe the Congress should enact this program. I think it is a vital part of our national defense and one of the cheapest ways to assist in the defense of our country. I think anyone who has seen men die because of lack of proper training, and, of course, no one can be entirely adequately trained, must come to the conclusion that we should properly train the youth of our country to defend our country. I feel that statistics show that a man has about 10 times as much chance of coming out of combat if he is properly trained than if he is not so trained. I do hope the Committee on Armed Services will seriously consider this legislation which I think to be important to our national defense.

FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION SHOULD FERRET OUT SUBVERSIVES

Mr. STAGGERS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. STAGGERS. Mr. Speaker, these are times of decision. We cannot afford to play politics here, for the life of civilization is in the balance. We cannot afford to dilly-dally over the passage of defense laws and the enforcement of them. We cannot afford to longer delay mobilization and all-out production of war materials. We must stop fooling around while the world is folding up over our heads. We must take immediate steps to increase our home defenses.

All known subversives in our country should be rounded up and interned. The enemies of our Government should be ferreted out now and placed where they cannot be a potential menace. This should be done now—not next week or next month—but now!

The Federal Bureau of Investigation is the proper agency to deal with the situation. As I have said before on the floor of this House, the FBI is the best trained investigator in the history of the world. I feel that all matters dealing with communsm and subversives should be turned over to that Bureau and we, as Members of Congress, should cooperate fully with that agency to see that the job is done.

At no time in our history has the public been so aroused and alarmed over the critical developments in our country. Letters come to me from my constituents urging that action be taken at once on these matters. It is up to Congress to correct and allay the universal fear and frenzy which exists among the people of this Nation. We must see that hoarding, profiteering, and other grave menaces are stopped now. I am confident an all-out preparation for the defense of this Nation will have the backing of the loyal people of our country.

HOARDING

Mr. BURNSIDE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. BURNSIDE. Mr. Speaker, I have been doing a little reading recently. I have been reading about pack rats.

A pack rat is a kind of wood rat. It has a bushy tail, large, membranous ears, and a thick, angular skull.

Its home is usually a large heap of miscellaneous trash.

And why is it called a pack rat? It is called a pack rat because it has a habit of carrying off anything it can get its hands on and storing it in its home. It does not matter whether the articles are needed at that time—or, for that matter, if the articles will ever be used. The pack rat simply likes to have them around, just in case. After all, the rodent thinks, he may not be able to get the same useless article tomorrow.

Pack rats are very strange and interesting animals, even though they are annoying pests. Just look around you—you might see some in your own neighborhood.

Seriously, though, folks—hoarding is a foolish thing to do. If everyone buys in normal quantities, there will be enough of everything for everybody. Hoarders succeed only in creating artificial shortages and in bringing on higher prices for themselves and all other consumers.

If you buy large quantities of sugar now and try to store it, it will get hard and useless. The Cubans have plenty of sugar. They did have too much, before the hoarders started taking it off their hands. But now the hoarders have made it possible for the speculators to go to work, and between them they can make it difficult for the rest of us to get what we need.

Even though we have no real shortages, hoarders and speculators may create so many artificial shortages that rationing may be necessary. We are close to that point already, and if the present trend continues I will ask that the President be authorized to establish temporary price controls and rationing until the current hysteria is over. It is not right that a few hoarders, by their selfishness and foolishness, should make it impossible for others to get the goods they need.

Do not hoard and urge others not to hoard. If you see someone hysterically buying up everything he can get his hands on, stop and reason with him. After all, reasonableness and self-discipline are always preferable to restrictive Government controls.

And remember—our troops in Korea are not hoarding anything.

President Truman has sent detailed requests to Congress for $10,500,000,000 to carry on the war in Korea and build up our military strength to a point where we will not be a push-over for Russia.

I see little difficulty in getting the necessary funds approved. But there is quite a bit of controversy over how they are to be obtained—whether by increased taxation, or by increasing the national debt.

Quite a few people here in Washington are in favor of a pay-as-you-go policy in regard to war spending. They believe that taxes should be increased so that no one will make a fortune on the war. The increased taxes would pay for the war expenditures, keep down inflation, and prevent the national debt from growing beyond its present astronomical figure. Even Senator BOB TAFT—and this is surprising—expressed the thought that the pay-as-you-go idea has merit.

This much is certain. It is not right for the people here at home to make excessive amounts of money off war work while our boys overseas are paying with their lives for the right to defend our democracy. It is my opinion that personal and corporation taxation should keep pace with the war effort. I add my voice to those who support the pay-as-you-go idea.

I have noticed a tendency recently in the most reactionary part of the press which disturbs me. It is an attempt to tell the American people that the war in Korea was manufactured by the administration, and that we should pull our troops out and let the Communist aggressors take over. That, incidentally, is the same line being taken by the Communist newspaper, the Daily Worker.

These people apparently believe that we should just stand by and allow the Communist armies to conquer the rest of the world. After the Communists have captured all our allies, of course, we would not have a chance against a direct attack.

Obviously, that is not a very smart attitude for a loyal American to take.

Apparently this small, reactionary segment of the press merely wants to make things more difficult for the administration, and does not care whether it hurts our defense efforts or not.

I think the newspaper publishers who encourage that attitude are simply not loyal Americans. I never object to real debating of political issues. I do not object to sincere criticism of the actions of the administration, even in matters of national defense and foreign policy. But I think newspaper publishers and others in a position to influence public opinion should be more responsible than to sabotage our defense efforts by deliberately misleading the public.

We have learned over and over again that appeasement of aggressors does not work. Let us not be fooled again. If you allow a criminal to go without punishment, chances are he will become a habitual offender. That is why this action in Korea was necessary. We had no other choice.

I have mentioned before on these broadcasts that one important phase of our struggle for peace is the attempt to reach the minds of the Russian people with truth. A few ideas have occurred to me along that line. I would like to pass them along to you.

For one thing, I think we should take a more positive approach. The Communists tell their people great lies about us—that we have a hundred lynchings a year, for example. I do not think we should devote all our efforts to proving that those things are false. Instead, we should point out some of the crimes that are committed by the leaders in the Soviet Union and its satellites, and by its followers here in the United States. The slave-labor camps in Russia, for example: Mention what a small return the Russians get for their long hours of work. Point out to them the many years during which they have been promised better conditions—how the commissars have regularly said it will be next month, and next month, and next month, like a broken record, and still the glorious day has not arrived. Instead, more weapons are fashioned for the destruction of working men in other countries. A few of these thoughts might start the Russian Ivans wondering if Uncle Joe is really such a great leader.

Here is another idea I have. Why cannot we get some folks with wit and humor in place of dry-rot diplomats to work up broadcasts for the Voice of America? Political satire, if properly voiced, should shake off a few apples. Why not have a few college glee clubs sing some snappy Russian songs, substituting words ridiculing Stalin and his Kremlin buddies?

SPECIAL ORDER GRANTED

Mr. FORD asked and was given permission to address the House for 15 minutes today, following the legislative program and any special orders heretofore entered.

PERSONAL ANNOUNCEMENT

Mr. FORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. FORD. Mr. Speaker, yesterday during the debate on one of the national defense measures, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. WALSH] said this, in reference to myself, and I quote:

> I can point out where the gentleman has failed to vote for the defense of his country.

In the RECORD we have today the gentleman from Indiana somewhat tempered his remarks and said:

> I could, if necessary, point out where he—
> Referring to myself—
> failed to vote for what I consider to be the best interest of the defense of our country.

During the colloquy between the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. WALSH] and myself, the gentleman from Indiana had this to say:

> I did not know you from Adam. I will have your record tomorrow and show it in the RECORD if you wish.

At this time I request the gentleman from Indiana to produce that record and insert it in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. Subsequent to his insertion I will have a few comments to make about his record and also an explanation of mine.

RECOVERY VERSUS DEFENSE

Mr. BOGGS of Delaware. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute, and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Delaware?

There was no objection.

Mr. BOGGS of Delaware. Mr. Speaker, I hold in my hand a splendid and timely editorial from the Tuesday, July 25, issue of the Wilmington (Del.) Journal-Every Evening.

This editorial states in part, "If Europe's need for military aid is as great as the administration suggests and as Europe itself contends the United States might well consider seriously the possibility of diverting some Marshall plan funds to that more important field."

Pointing out that such a shift of funds would mean that Europeans will have to make certain sacrifices, the editorial concludes by saying, "but that's the unhappy prospect ahead of Americans, too."

Mr. Speaker, we must fully realize that nothing at the present is more important to the United States, and, in fact, to the freedom-loving peoples of the world, than victory in the present war. In order to obtain that victory it should be clear to all that our Nation's economy will be subjected to terrific strain.

Consequently, Mr. Speaker, it appears that the time is here for us to make, as this editorial states, "a reassessment of our obligations to the rest of the world and decide which things are first." We must never forget that our first obligation is to the defense of our own Nation, our own form of government, and our own people.

I therefore urge, Mr. Speaker, that the Committee on Foreign Affairs and the other committees of this body most closely concerned with the problems of war and economic stability give immediate consideration to a reassessment of our obligations and a proper evaluation of the matter of recovery versus defense.

The editorial to which I refer follows:

RECOVERY VERSUS DEFENSE

If Europe's need for military aid is as great as the administration suggests and as Europe itself contends the United States might well consider seriously the possibility of diverting some Marshall-plan funds to that more important field. It probably would take an act of Congress to make the transfer legal but in the present emergency the vote on the matter would be pretty nearly unanimous.

With the billions upon billions that American taxpayers are being called upon to supply for the war in Korea, this country's economy is certain to be subjected to a back-breaking strain. The time cannot be far off when we will have to make a reassessment of our obligations to the rest of the world and decide which things are first.

Insofar as the United States is concerned nothing is more important than victory in the present war. If we fail to achieve that we shall not only lose face throughout the Orient but give the Soviet new cause for believing that the onward march of communism simply cannot be stopped in either the east or the west. So it is as much to Europe's ultimate interest as our own that the Korean Reds be decisively defeated.

Under the circumstances the states of western Europe can hardly object if some of the money allocated to its economic recovery is now used for purposes of its defense. It will mean, of course, that the Europeans will have to make certain sacrifices, but that's the unhappy prospect ahead of Americans, too.

SPECIAL ORDERS GRANTED

Mr. PHILLIPS of California asked and was given permission to address the House for 25 minutes on tomorrow and on Monday next, following the legislative business of the day and any other special orders heretofore entered.

ADDITIONAL $1,500 DEDUCTION FROM TAXABLE INCOME OF MEN IN THE ARMED SERVICES

Mr. SCRIVNER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute, and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kansas?

There was no objection.

Mr. SCRIVNER. Mr. Speaker, in the immediate future many young men, and some older ones, who served so long and so honorably in World War II will again be in our Armed Forces.

Many of them have just completed their GI training, have begun business or opened professional offices. They have married, acquired homes, started families. Their obligations are great; their opportunities for the future are dark indeed, with their lives again interrupted by military service.

As yet the administration does not recognize the existing situation as war, nor even as a national emergency. Whatever this is in Korea, its effects on the men in service are the same as war.

In World War II our military men were granted an additional $1,500 deduction from their taxable income. The Nation felt it was right that making the sacrifice they did they should have a little less to pay than those who were not fighting the war. In other words, they should not have to fight the war and pay for it too.

The men serving during this period—in this what-is-it in Korea—deserve the same—this exemption.

Mr. Speaker, for these reasons I have just introduced a bill to give those fighting in this conflict that same additional deduction we gave the fighting men of World War II. They deserve it and I hope the bill will get immediate consideration.

MILITARY AID TO KOREA FROM WESTERN EUROPE

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute, and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. Speaker, we just learn from the wires that an announcement has been made in the House of Commons that Great Britain will contribute ground troops to the fight in Korea; that the British Navy will be put on full war status. The ground troops will be accompanied by tanks and artillery to reinforce the American forces, and two fighter-bomber squadrons will also be sent there.

Mr. Speaker, this verifies what those of us who fought for the mutual defense assistance program have contended—that the backbone of the military capability of the free peoples still remains in western Europe. We hope this action by Great Britain will be the precedent to induce India, Pakistan, and other Pacific powers, who have not yet responded to the United Nations' request, to make their contribution to the Korean conflict. For this conflict is for them a life-and-death struggle, a struggle for their very survival. If the United Nations cannot enforce military sanctions against naked military aggression, then every small, every new nation stands in grave peril of being swallowed up and seeing its integrity gone.

By their response to the UN they can create the conditions for the beginning of a Pacific pact, and finally the great strength which we are now beginning to see in the Atlantic Pact can be marshalled for the security of the Far East.

What is so all-important to the free peoples of Asia is that we have shown in our handling of the Atlantic Pact that in arms as in economic aid, we follow the principle of self-help and mutual cooperation. It is our allies we help to do the job, standing on their own with dignity and independence. This should be an attitude highly approved by peoples who have so capably settled the issue of colonialism.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

EXPANSION OF WESTERN HEMISPHERE PRODUCTION OF ABACÁ

Mr. McSWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 717.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (S. 3520) to strengthen the common defense by providing for continuation and expansion of Western Hemisphere production of abacá by the United States. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and continue not to exceed 1 hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Armed Services, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the consideration of the bill for amendment, the committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit.

Mr. McSWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, because of the nature of the bill S. 3520, in providing for a revolving fund and also providing powers to the President to terminate this operation, I ask unanimous consent that all points of order against the bill be waived.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. McSWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ALLEN], and yield myself 7 minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio is recognized.

Mr. McSWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 717 makes in order the bill S. 3520, which is for the encouragement of the production of abacá in the Philippine Islands. I have gone carefully into the question of abacá, have gotten all of the information I could from the Library of Congress and also from the Department of Agriculture. I was rather surprised that the propagation of this plant requires so much money but I find that this plant does not re-seed itself; it is somewhat similar to a banana plant or other tubers. The abacá plant has to be taken from the ground and divided and the different bulbs planted separately. This makes it a very expensive hand operation, and for that reason the amount of money required in order to get the amount of production that we feel is necessary as a war measure, is rather large.

Abacá fiber is similar to what we know as manila hemp. In the old days, especially, it was used for caulking and other purposes, but today it is extensively used by our Navy and is an essential war product. For that reason we are asking you to help us encourage the production of this worth-while product in the Philippines.

I have a letter from the Embassy of the Philippines. They are very much interested. They have some suggestions with regard to this bill, but on the whole they feel that it will be of tremendous value not only to business in the Philippines but also because it is so necessary for war uses. It may be of interest to the Members to know that at one time this production was carried on under private enterprise, but it was found that the land being devoted to the production of bananas was much more profitable than the land that had been allocated for abacá. For that reason private enterprise went out of the abacá production and increased their production of bananas. So at this time it means that in order to have this much needed commodity, we as a Congress must make provision so that we can provide for what we call a war necessity. I am sure it will also help the economy of the Philippines and help to balance her production and will result in their producing something to sell on the markets of America.

Mr. STEFAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McSWEENEY. I yield to the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. STEFAN. In discussing the letter that the gentleman received from the Philippine Embassy, may I say that I think the Philippine people who are endeavoring to recoup their abacá production because of the scarcity of that article in the United States are very favorable to the passage of this bill if an amendment could be put in the bill to aid them in their program to help along in the production of abacá, which we need so badly. Is the gentleman favorable to that amendment?

Mr. McSWEENEY. I think the gentleman's suggestion is a good one. I have gone over this program. I do not think the amendment would be detrimental to the bill.

Mr. STEFAN. Has the gentleman read the proposed amendment?

Mr. McSWEENEY. Does the gentleman have it there?

Mr. STEFAN. I have it here.

Mr. McSWEENEY. I thank the gentleman. The Embassy of the Philippines has made the following suggestion:

All abacá fiber produced under this act shall be utilized solely to fulfill the objectives for stockpiling under the Strategic and Critical Materials Stock Pile Act (60 Stat. 596) as amended, and when the objectives of such act as amended have been fulfilled, report shall be submitted to Congress. Nothing herein shall prevent rotation of such fiber as produced under this act where necessary to prevent deterioration, as provided in section 3 (d) of the Strategic and Critical Materials Stock Pile Act (60 Stat. 596) as amended, but such rotation shall be effected only after research and determinations under section 3 (b) of this act.

Mr. STEFAN. The gentleman would not oppose an amendment like that?

Mr. McSWEENEY. From my limited knowledge, sir, I do not believe we could oppose that because it would help the economy of the Philippines and would in no way jeopardize our position with regard to the need for that particular commodity.

Mr. STEFAN. I have a communication from the Munitions Board indicating they are very much interested in this.

Mr. McSWEENEY. I appreciate the gentleman's contribution. I feel, though, that should be within the control of the committee, rather than the Rules Committee. As one who has studied this I believe it in no way jeopardizes the good that the bill will render to the Philippine people.

Mr. STEFAN. In connection with the United Fruit program in Central America where they have been planting bananas on land that had been in abacá, has the gentleman some assurance there will be no destruction of the present abacá area?

Mr. McSWEENEY. No, I have not, but I would not see any reason why there should be. In other words, I think they have allotted land for the production of bananas in sufficient amount to take care of their required production and I can see no reason for an encroachment upon the present abacá land.

Mr. STEFAN. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McSWEENEY. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. CELLER. In a communication received from the distinguished Delegate from the Philippines, we have statements to the effect that this bill may unduly aid the United Fruit Co., which seeks to cultivate this product in South America, and that there is a direct connection between the United Fruit Co. and the largest cordage manufacturer in the United States, that there is an interlocking directorate between the Plymouth Cordage Co., of Plymouth, Mass., which is designated as the largest cordage manufacturer, and the United Fruit Co. Has the gentleman any information on that score?

Mr. McSWEENEY. No; I have not with regard to any interlocking directorates.

Mr. HERTER. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, I shall be very glad later on in the debate to go into the point that the gentleman raises.

Mr. McSWEENEY. I thank the gentleman for that contribution.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired.

Mr. ALLEN of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. HERTER].

Mr. HERTER. Mr. Speaker, I am in favor of the rule that is now before us, but am taking a few minutes of time to explain the past history of the development of this particular fiber in Central America.

About 20 years ago the United States Department of Agriculture brought from the Philippine Islands a few abacá plants which it tried experimentally to propagate in the Republic of Panama. Through the United Fruit Co. in the Republic of Panama and in Honduras and in Costa Rica a number of experimental laboratories were established in which all types of tropical vegetation are grown experimentally in order to find which grow best in those particular climates. That was true of this particular plant.

Before the war, in 1937 and 1938, our Navy Department evidenced a great interest in the experimental work that was being done on this plant. They asked the fruit company, experimentally, if they could enlarge their plantings in order to try out over larger acreage the growth of this particular fiber. That was done over first 1,000 acres and then 2,000 acres. Those acreages represented the only ones in the Western Hemisphere that grew this particular form of what is generally called manila hemp. It proved to be a godsend during the war period when the Philippines were cut off and there was no other available source of supply.

At that time the Government of the United States asked the fruit company if they could extend the acreage of this particular product. This was done in Costa Rica, Honduras, Panama, and Guatemala. It was done by the fruit company at cost to themselves as a part of the war effort. They used their own land, for which they charged nothing. They were glad to make that contribution to the war effort. They acted as agent for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. When the war ended the fruit company made it very clear that they did not wish to continue with the operation. However, the Munitions Board asked them to continue with the RFC arrangement.

This bill is here because of the request of the Government that the fruit company act as managing agent for the extension of the acreage which had already been planted as a precautionary measure against our again being cut off from the supply in the Far East.

I have had an opportunity to see the letter which has been referred to from our former colleague representing the Philippine Government in regard to this matter. In that letter he unfortunately made a few misstatements in regard to the fruit company. I have before me a letter from the fruit company which I ask unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD at this point.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. HERTER. The letter reads as follows:

UNITED FRUIT CO.,
Boston, Mass., July 25, 1950.

The Honorable CHRISTIAN A. HERTER,
House of Representatives,
Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. HERTER: You were good enough to show me the report attached to the letter from His Excellency J. M. Elizalde, Ambassador from the Philippines, to you dated July 24, 1950, regarding S. 3520 and its companion bill, H. R. 8351, providing for the expansion of the abacá industry in this hemisphere. In section 5 of this report entitled "Private Interest" there are so many inaccuracies and unwarranted inferences regarding the United Fruit Co. that I feel that it is necessary in the interest of my company to correct them.

When the war with Japan cut off the supplies of manila hemp in the Philippines, the United Fruit Co. had the only seed bed of abacá in this hemisphere. It had developed at its own cost about 2,000 acres of this plant in the Republic of Panama.

Upon request of the Government, the company was pleased to undertake the expansion of the production of manila hemp in Central America as a defense measure for the account of the Government and without profit to the company. Accordingly, the company entered into contracts with the Government whereby it turned over at cost its 2,000 acres of abacá, the value of which was incalculable, and undertook to expand the cultivation of this plant on its lands in Central America. No charge was made for the use of the company's lands on which the abacá was planted. The company's trained agriculturists, including persons particularly trained in the cultivation of abacá, were made available to the Government. The Government agreed to pay the salaries of those employees engaged exclusively in the abacá projects but the advice and services of its principal agricultural experts were given to the Government without charge. Also, the company had large facilities in Central America, such as railroads, wharves, labor camps, hospitals, water supply, and other necessary facilities which were made available to the Government and which could not have been duplicated by the Government except at enormous cost and great loss of time. In Panama and Costa Rica where the operation first started, the company received no payment whatsoever for the use of houses, camps, and other facilities of the company used exclusively in abacá operations. Later, in the development of projects in Guatemala and Honduras, the company received for the use of such facilities employed exclusively in the abacá operations a rental equal to depreciation. Where the facilities of the company were used jointly by the company and the Government, the Government paid only its pro rata cost of the maintenance and operation of such facilities. No charge was made and no reimbursement received for the management of the projects, including the time of its executives and experts of the general office who devoted a great deal of their time to the skillful direction of the work.

The contracts expired on December 31, 1948, and since the war was over and the company was not interested in the production of abacá as such, it desired to terminate its connection with this business. But upon the insistence of the RFC that the continuance of the abacá projects was of importance in the national defense, the contracts were renewed with some modifications for an additional period of 5 years. The only important differences between the new contracts and the old contracts are the following: In return for its management and direction of the projects, the company is to receive a management fee of 15 percent of the net cash profit with a minimum of $1 per month per acre of cultivations from time to time under operation. This fee also includes compensation for the use of the company's lands planted to abacá. Salaries of officers of the company and expenses of the general office are not to be reimbursed. Where tools, equipment, machinery, and other fixed assets owned by the company are used exclusively in abacá operations, the Government pays only the cost of maintenance, operation, and repair plus a reasonable allowance for depreciation and insurance. The division of overhead expense of local facilities and personnel jointly used by the company and the Government is to be determined in accordance with formulas worked out by outside auditors and is subject to review at any time.

Contrary to the statements made in the report, the United Fruit Co. does not own a single share of the stock of any cordage company and is in no way interested in the cordage business. There is not and has not been any interlocking directorate between United Fruit Co. and the Plymouth Cordage Co. One of our 25 directors was also a director of the Plymouth Cordage Co. from December 1, 1943, to December 3, 1947. He was not a director of the cordage company at the time the original contracts were made or at the time the contracts were renewed. No other director of the United Fruit Co. holds a directorate in the Plymouth Cordage Co. or any other cordage company. All fiber produced by the projects belongs to the RFC which disposes of it as it sees fit, and the company has no control over or intervention in the sale or other distribution of the fiber.

My company is proud of the contribution it was able to make to the war effort in quickly expanding the production of abacá at a time when it was so urgently needed. At a time when its ships had been requisitioned, its production curtailed, and its profits severely reduced, it did this without profit and without reimbursement for the services of its executives and experts whose skill and direction contributed so much to the success of the program. We were able to develop 28,000 acres of abacá which supplied practically all of the manila fiber that was available to this Nation during the war. My company has no interest in the production of abacá as such and, as a business matter, it would prefer to recover its lands and facilities and terminate its connection with the business. We have cooperated with the program for the purpose of national defense, and our willingness to continue to lend our aid and cooperation in connection with this matter is based solely on our desire to be of service in the time of national emergency.

Sincerely yours,

SAM G. BAGGETT,
Vice President and General Counsel,
United Fruit Co.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HERTER. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. CELLER. Does that letter cover the question that I propounded to the previous speaker?

Mr. HERTER. It specifically covers that, and I shall be very glad to read that passage. In general it rehearses the whole relationship of the fruit company to the Government in this operation.

Mr. CELLER. I think it would be well to put it in the RECORD at this point.

Mr. HERTER. I shall be glad to do that:

Contrary to the statements made in the report, the United Fruit Co. does not own a single share of the stock of any cordage company and is in no way interested in the cordage business. There is not and has not been any interlocking directorate between United Fruit Co. and the Plymouth Cordage Co. One of our 25 directors was also a director of the Plymouth Cordage Co. from December 1, 1943, to December 3, 1947. He was not a director of the cordage company at the time the original contracts were made or at the time the contracts were renewed. No other director of the United Fruit Co. holds a directorate in the Plymouth Cordage Co. or any other cordage company. All fiber produced by the projects belongs to the RFC, which disposes of it as it sees fit, and the company has no control over or intervention in the sale or other distribution of the fiber.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HERTER. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. CELLER. As I understand the remarks of the gentleman, the United Fruit Co. will be the managing agent concerning the disposition of its products; is that correct?

Mr. HERTER. That is true only as far as the preparation of the product is concerned.

Mr. CELLER. The product is grown, and loans are offered by RFC to the United Fruit Co. for the growing of the product?

Mr. HERTER. There are no loans made to the United Fruit Co. The company produces the fiber for the RFC under a management contract. The RFC owns and controls the fiber.

Mr. CELLER. Who will control the allocation of the product? Who will control the sale price of the product?

Mr. HERTER. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation handles the product entirely.

Mr. CELLER. So that if by chance a cordage company in the United States wants to buy any of this product it must go to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation as a condition precedent to purchase?

Mr. HERTER. Absolutely. It would go to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, or perhaps the Munitions Board, depending on whether it has been stockpiled.

Mr. CELLER. The gentleman is quite convinced that the United Fruit Co. would have no control over either the price at which the product would be sold or the allocation of the product or the division of markets?

Mr. HERTER. Absolutely. In fact, the United Fruit Co. would infinitely prefer not to be concerned with this matter, and is doing it entirely as a matter of assisting the Government.

Mr. CELLER. What is the compensation the United Fruit Co. would receive for this work?

Mr. HERTER. The compensation is outlined in the letter that is given here. A new contract was drawn up in 1948, when the fruit company did not wish to continue with this business. As I recall it, the compensation is 15 percent of the net cash profit made by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Mr. CELLER. All expenses of operation, including the cost of the land, the labor cost, the maintenance cost, and the building cost would be defrayed by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation?

Mr. HERTER. Not all, no. No cost of land or facilities, such as railroads, docks, housing, hospitals, and so forth. All the management expense is handled entirely by the fruit company. This is a difficult and a tricky plant, as nearly all tropical vegetation is, to grow.

Mr. CELLER. Is that 15 percent of the net profit or 15 percent of the gross profit?

Mr. HERTER. The net profit made by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Mr. CELLER. Has the gentleman considered whether or not that is a rather large sum to be obtained from an operation of this sort?

Mr. HERTER. My impression is that compared with the over-all operations of the fruit company and considering the difficulties of the operation and the responsibilities involved it is infinitesimal.

Mr. SMITH of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HERTER. I yield.

Mr. SMITH of Wisconsin. I know the gentleman has studied this question very closely. I am wondering if he knows why the hemp plants in this country are being closed while we are attempting in this instance to advance $35,000,000 for the development of the same kind of program overseas. In Wisconsin we have a number of hemp plants. I have one in my own county. Just last Saturday I went by it and saw a big sign in front of the building, "Closed; for sale." Are we going to forget about that war industry we had? What consistency is there in this kind of program?

Mr. HERTER. I am afraid I am not qualified to answer the gentleman's question. Perhaps somebody from the Committee on Armed Services could answer that question.

Mr. SMITH of Wisconsin. I should like to have that question answered.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HERTER. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I know the gentleman wants to be absolutely fair in this whole presentation. The United Fruit Co. gets many benefits, not just 15 percent of the net profits. If there are no net profits whatsoever, the United Fruit Co. gets $1 per acre plus other benefits.

We paid for dockage facilities and we paid for many things during the war. When bananas were not able to move into the channels of trade the United Fruit Co. benefited from that. I know the gentleman wants the record to be clear on this. I am not going to oppose this bill. This bill should have the amendment which was discussed previously by the two gentlemen. I would like to ask the gentleman if he is not in favor of the amendment.

Mr. HERTER. I would personally have no objection to the amendment, insofar as I know what it means, although there is one phase of it which I do not know the answer to, but possibly the members of the Committee on Armed Services do, and that is on the question of spoilage. I do not know how often replacements have to be made on account of spoilage.

Mr. CRAWFORD. The gentleman pointd out that this is a very delicate and intricate operation and these agreements running between the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the United Fruit Co. are just as delicate and technical as you can imagine. So there is a big story in this for the consumers of twine and rope and for the Army and Navy and for the defense of the United States, as well as for the Philippine Islands and Central America, and for these some 42 plants that we built during the last war.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Massachusetts has expired.

Mr. McSWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman three additional minutes, if he will accept the time.

Mr. HERTER. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to make an observation in connection with the statement just made by the gentleman from Michigan. The United Fruit Co. would under no circumstances be engaged in this business as a commercial business. It has tried to get out of it and it would like to get out of it again. It is engaging in the business solely because the Government of the United States is asking for it, and for that and no other reason whatsoever. If Congress should decide to abolish the whole thing, it would not hurt the feelings of the United Fruit Co. in the least. They would have their lands and other facilities back. They are doing this in the national interest. I am thoroughly convinced of that, not only from the documents, but from my own conversation with the concern.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HERTER. I yield.

Mr. CELLER. I believe what the gentleman says is perfectly true. I know Mr. Zemurray, who is the head of the United Fruit Co. He is a very distinguished, patriotic gentleman who would want to aid the war effort in every way, particularly if he can increase the use of this very essential product.

But I think we ought to have all the facts, and I know the gentleman wants to give all the facts.

Mr. HERTER. I fully agree with the gentleman.

Mr. CELLER. Will the United Fruit Co. receive 100 percent of the moneys they expended for, let us say, the railroads and docks and roads and bridges and warehouses and administrative buildings which will be erected or have been erected?

Mr. HERTER. No. There has been no capital expenditure by the Government of any kind whatsoever. All of that has been done by the fruit company itself, using its own facilities.

Mr. CELLER. So that having used its own money for these constructions, it of course will own these buildings and own these bridges and docks and the United States Government will not have contributed one cent to the construction of those facilities?

Mr. HERTER. I do not believe the fruit company will be in any way enriched by this operation.

Mr. CELLER. That is not responsive. It is only partially responsive. Would the Government of the United States be expending any sums of money on these constructions which would be availed of by the United Fruit Co. after this operation is concluded?

Mr. HERTER. None that I know of. In fact if the Government of the United States had to carry on this operation by itself, as a governmental operation, and had to build all of its own facilities, it would cost ten times as much.

Mr. McSWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HERTER. I yield.

Mr. McSWEENEY. I was unable to find out from the Department of Agriculture the exact cost per acre on the production end. These plants are not planted by seed, but I understand that the plants have to be subdivided.

Mr. HERTER. That is correct, the plants are subdivided.

Mr. McSWEENEY. Yes, the plants have to be subdivided and it is a very expensive operation. Was the gentleman able to find out what the cost per acre was? I was not able to get that information.

Mr. HERTER. I do not have that figure, either.

Mr. McSWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. STEFAN] such time as he may require.

Mr. STEFAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD, and include a statement by J. S. McDaniel.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Nebraska?

There was no objection.

(The statement is as follows:)

(The writer of this memorandum supports immediate passage of S. 3520 or H. R. 8351 with amendments designed to support (1) national security, and (2) Philippine economy.)

MEMORANDUM RELATIVE TO S. 3520 AND H. R. 8351 (IDENTICAL BILLS), ABACÁ ACT OF 1950

(Introduced by Senator TYDINGS, May 1, and Congressman VINSON, May 3. Referred to Armed Services Committees of the Senate and House)

Sponsor: Department of Defense (Munitions Board).

Purpose: To continue and expand production of abacá (manila fiber) in the Western Hemisphere by the United States Government.

Product description: Abacá is a hard, leaf (miscellaneous) fiber used in the making of marine and other cordage. It is classified by the Munitions Board as a highly strategic and crtical material which cannot be grown in the Unted States. Substitutes are sisal, henequen, jute, synthetic products such as nylon, paper, wire rope, and mechanical means of material-handling not requiring manila rope (escalator, etc.).

The possibility of substitutes, at various price levels, tends to integrate the problem of abacá and fibers commonly used for other products such as agricultural twines, and, therefore, the matter must properly be considered coordinately and not separately.

History of Central American abacá: Abacá is indigenous to the Philippines where, prior to World War II, 95 percent of the world's requirements were produced. Abacá requires growing conditions—rainfall, suitable land, etc.—such as are found ideal in the Philippines, reasonably good in other Southeastern Asia areas and possible, at great relative cost, in Central America.

Abacá was introduced into the Western Hemisphere (Panama) in the early 1920's, with the encouragement and help of the United States Government, as a national security measure. By 1941, a relatively small quantity of 3,000 acres was being grown on an experimental basis by the United Fruit Co. Immediately following Pearl Harbor, the plantings were expanded to approximately 30,000 acres to supply United States military requirements. This was by contract between the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the United Fruit Co.

Since VJ-day, these plantings have been continued under directive of the President of the United States to the RFC, acting under authority to continue wartime projects for liquidation purposes. The last such directive, it is understood, was issued March 30, 1950, and probably is for a relatively short time, probably not beyond June 30 or July 31, 1950. It is also understood that it is unlikely that further directives will be issued without action by the United States Congress.

Abacá production in Central America has been disappointing. Because of one difficulty or another, the 30,000 acres planted has already been reduced to 25,879 acres. Production was expected to reach 64,908,300 pounds in 1949 but official statistics show it was only 30,239,050 pounds. Now it is planned to abandon or "butcher" harvest approximately 50 percent of the existing 26,000 acres.

While the cost of producing Central American abacá is greatly in excess of Philippine costs, the quality is not considered as good as Philippine abacá. This is evidenced in the fact that prices consumers have been willing to pay for Central American abacá are 1 to 2 cents lower per pound than for Philippine abacá. However, the quality is adequate for making a reasonably good finished product. The light color of the Central American abacá is due to machine decortication. Light color in Philippine abacá indicates high quality. But rope made from Central American abacá is weaker in tensile strength than that made from Philippine abacá.

Problem: The problem in this situation, particularly in view of the present wording of the proposed legislation, falls into three categories, namely, (1) national security, (2) economic, and (3) political.

1. National security: This is mentioned first solely because it is the one approach of the proposed legislation as introduced. From this single viewpoint, it is important (a) to maintain a physical stockpile in the United States and (b) to continue a reasonable production in nearby areas which can be rapidly expanded (2 years required for expansion to production) in time of emergency while the physical stockpile is being utilized.

2. Economic: Production on a subsidy basis, covered in 1 (a) above, should be held to a minimum in order (a) not to have unnecessarily an adverse effect on Philippine economy and (b) so that the "stockpile" (1 (a) above) can be purchased as cheaply as possible through encouraging rehabilitation of Philippine abacá where it can be produced at the lowest cost.

3. Political: Any unnecessary United States subsidy production of abacá in the Western Hemisphere, to the obvious detriment to Philippine economy, or any failure to write this legislation in such manner as (a) to recognize the Philippines' inherent interest in abacá and (b) to carry out the solemn promises of the United States to assist the Philippines "in the full repair of the ravages caused by war" (President Roosevelt, October 13, 1943) will be considered by the Philippines as a failure by the United States to live up to its international agreements. This will have political repercussions, not only in the Philippines, but in the entire Far East.

WORLD SHORTAGE OF ABACÁ AND RESULTANT EXCESS COST TO UNITED STATES

It is an established fact that there is a shortage of hard fibers in the world today. The following statistics relate to abacá.

Abacá

	Pounds
Philippine production prewar (1,200,000 bales)	330,000,000
Sumatra production prewar	10,000,000
Central American production prewar	1,500,000
	341,500,000
Philippine production, 1949	144,375,000
Central American production, 1949	30,500,000
Sumatra production, 1949	0
	174,875,000
Difference, prewar and postwar production	166,625,000
Estimated annual production per acre, 1,500 pounds.
New acreage planned in proposed legislation for Western Hemisphere (21,000 times 1,500 pounds)	31,500,000
Balance, requirement world production outside Western Hemisphere	135,125,000

New acreage required outside Western Hemisphere, assuming 50,000 acres in that area as provided in S. 3520 or H. R. 8351, 90,000 acres (36,000 hectares).

NOTE.—There is a world shortage of sisal fiber currently, due in part to the shortage of abacá and the demand for sisal as a substitute for abacá, due to price, et cetera.

Assuming that the passage of this legislation will discourage new production worldwide, at least temporarily (discussed hereinafter) and that the world shortage and resultant high prices would therefore continue, the cost to the United States of such legislation (exclusive of direct charges of the Western Hemisphere operations) would be as follows:

HARD FIBER PRICES

Prices of abacá (Davao "I" grade, f. o. b. New York) averaged 7.6 cents per pound United States Currency, 1935–38 average; this price is approximately 26 cents per pound today. Sisal prices, approximately 4 cents per pound in the decade prior to World War II, are now approximately 16 cents a pound.

Excess costs to United States per year, public and private

[Due to world shortages of hard fibers computed at 10 cents per pound for abacá and 5 cents per pound for sisal and henequen]

U. S. Government stockpile (assumed purchases of 30,000,000 pounds annually):
Abacá	$3,000,000
Sisal and henequen	1,200,000
U. S. Navy, abacá purchased (assumed purchases of 5,000,000 pounds annually)[1]	500,000
U. S. Government agencies (armed services): cordage purchased (based on 1949)	1,000,000
	5,700,000
SCAP, purchases (based on 1948–49 fiscal):
Abacá	3,500,000
Sisal and henequen	1,250,000
Subtotal	10,450,000
ECA procurement authorizations based on current rate):
Abacá	3,000,000
Sisal and henequen	1,500,000
Subtotal, purchases from U. S. Government funds	14,950,000
Private purchases, cordages, United States (1949)	8,000,000
United States farmers' purchases, agricultural twine (1949)	6,250,000
Total, excess cost to United States due to world shortage of hard fibers	29,200,000

[1] Purchases of cordage outside United States, probably at least 5,000,000 pounds annually, should be added.

PASSAGE OF S. 3520 OR H. R. 8351, AS INTRODUCED AND WITHOUT AMENDMENT, WILL DISCOURAGE PHILIPPINE ABACÁ REHABILITATION, ALREADY STARTED

As introduced, the proposed legislation provides only for continuation and expansion of Western Hemisphere production of abacá by the United States. Before the war Philippine abacá was exported, in weight, approximately one-third to the United States, one-third to Japan, and one-third to Europe. The United States was the best abacá customer of the Philippines in dollars because it purchased the top grades. Europe purchased the intermediate grades and Japan the lower grades.

Production on 50,000 acres in Western Hemisphere, at 1,500 pounds per acre, would be 75,000,000 pounds annually, or approximately 75 percent of the United States cordage and twine manufacturers' annual requirements. Removal of this market from Philippine exports would naturally deter capital from investing in Philippine abacá.

Financing Philippine abacá rehabilitation is required. It is difficult under any circumstances to get United States capital to move into foreign areas, as evidenced by the President's proposals in the point 4 program.

Passage of any legislation indicating or inferring a policy of the United States being solely interested in Western Hemisphere abacá would naturally deter capital, private or public, from flowing into abacá outside of the Western Hemisphere.

There can be no purpose served in trying to expand abacá production by 30,000,000 pounds in the Western Hemisphere—a possibility some United States Government personnel believe unattainable—if such efforts would discourage or adversely affect new Philippine abacá production, where at least 135,125,000 pounds additional production is required, even if the objectives of the proposed expanded Western Hemisphere production are maintained.

PHILIPPINE ABACÁ REHABILITATION

Philippine abacá rehabilitation is under way on a large scale.

In January of this year the Philippine Government, desirous of promoting the rehabilitation of the abacá industry and recognizing the necessity of large-scale, efficient, private enterprise, entered into a contract with private enterprise to clear, plant, and develop 18,500 acres of government land in Mindanao. It is on this island that the Japanese grew abacá so successfully prewar. Work has been under way on this project for some months, and the best available personnel in the world has been employed to carry out same.

In working out these plans there has been complete cooperation from the President of the Philippines, his Cabinet, the Supreme Court of the Philippines, business interests in the islands, and the American Embassy, all conscious of the importance of Philippine abacá to Philippine economy.

The Philippine Government is now contemplating similar arrangements by granting to the Boy Scouts of the Philippines and the University of the Philippines 35,000 acres for abacá production.

Several large private groups are waiting only for action on this proposed abacá legislation now under consideration by the United States Congress before proceeding with plans for (a) new plantings and (b) rehabilitation of existing plantings in the Philippines, all patterned on the model contract developed in January last.

ABACÁ IMPORTANT TO PHILIPPINE ECONOMY

So far as Philippine economy is concerned, abacá is of utmost importance. In dollar value, it has represented, over the years, 10 to 14 percent of total Philippine exports. It is currently the principal exportable item from the Philippines to hard-currency areas. In 1938, there were over 155,000 farms with approximately 700,000 acres planted to abacá in the Philippines. Approximately 800,000 Filipinos, of a total population of 16,000,000 were dependent upon abacá as their sole source of cash income. Every President of the Philippine Commonwealth and Republic has agreed that abacá is one of the, if not the most essential, crops grown in the Philippines, for social and economic reasons. It is the only commodity produced in the Philippines that is practically noncompetitive with production in other areas.

AMENDMENTS SUGGESTED TO PROPOSED LEGISLATION

Attached hereto is a copy of the proposed legislation as introduced, showing thereon amendments suggested to accomplish the changes indicated above. In suggesting these amendments, the following objectives have prevailed:

1. They leave the Munitions Board program for Western Hemisphere abacá unchanged;

2. They avoid requesting any authority to permit any areas, other than Western Hemisphere, to participate in the authority or appropriations authorized for Western Hemisphere abacá;

3. They establish a policy of the United States being interested in an adequate production of abacá in any or all suitable areas of the world, but without requesting any authority for appropriations for such purposes; and

4. They reiterate existing authority for loans, on a reasonable repayment basis, to aid in adequate production of abacá in areas other than the Western Hemisphere. Of course, this existing authority is likewise available to the Western Hemisphere now under existing law.

These suggested amendments are designed to avoid any statement or inference in any legislation enacted that the United States is solely interested in Western Hemisphere abacá.

Respectfully submitted.

J. S. MCDANIEL.

Mr. McSWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAWFORD].

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, this is a bill which is of vital interest to the national defense of the United States, not only from the standpoint of the military operation, but from the standpoint of peacetime operations or industrial operations where cordage—that is soft and hard fibers and rope and twine and products of that nature—come into the picture. Let us review this very briefly because we have very limited time on this.

During the war we did build these plants in the United States for the purpose of supplementing the fiber supply. We built plants which produced what I would term soft fiber, which can be used in many operations, but soft fiber, as everyone knows, is no good for the Army and Navy where tensile strength is concerned. Mexican hemp has never been, and perhaps never will give as fine results as the fiber from the abacá plant. The best abacá plant is grown in the southern island of the Philippines, Mindanao. Only about 30 percent of the typhoons which strike the Philippine Islands hit the southern end of the island of Mindanao. That is the natural home of the abacá plant, where you have long tensile strength fiber that grows anywhere from 9 to 18 feet in length. That is, the fiber from a single plant will run from 9 to 18 feet, of a very fine color and fine grade and great tensile strength. This bill is an addition to the Federal operations carried on by the Federal Treasury in Central America, as pointed out by our friend the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. HERTER]. During the war period, and prior to the war, we did finance experimental work down there. We did great service for the United Fruit Co., as well as the United Fruit Co., perhaps giving some service to the United States. These big industrial companies do not generally go around making donations to the Federal Treasury where military appropriations are involved. I will have to be shown before I will be convinced that the United Fruit Co. made any donation to the Federal Treasury.

This is the statement in the bill:

Such surveys and research may be undertaken as are necessary or desirable to obtain the best available land in the Western Hemisphere for the production of abacá, the best development of abacá and development and maintenance of the plantations for the production of abacá established on such land, and the most economical and practical processing and disposition of such fiber and by-products as result from the production of abacá on such land.

An amendment has been mentioned which should go into this bill. Every day we are sustaining and defending the Philippine Republic. There are some 100,000 bales of abacá fiber in the Philippines today which should be in the national defense stockpile. What efforts are being made to put that in our stockpile? That is one of the questions I raised yesterday, and I raise it again today. Abacá production in the Philippines in 1947 rose to nearly 800,000 bales. They did what they called "butchered the harvest." That means they harvested the plants in advance of maturity so as to get the fiber on the world's market and get it into our hands to use it to make rope and other products of that nature. In 1948 the production dropped because the previous plants had been butchered. In 1949 it dropped further, and in 1950 it is estimated the production will go back up to approximately 800,000 bales. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation, for instance, is taking the production from this operation. Instead of putting it into stockpiles they are selling it in the open market. For instance, 3,000 bales were offered just recently. Two thousand eight hundred and seventy-five of those bales were picked up by private manufacturers in the United States. But we go out and subsidize these operations for national defense purposes. Why do we not put that product into the stockpile and use it for national defense? You have got to sustain the Philippine economy one way or the other. When you step out of the Philippines you step out of the Far East. Make no mistake about that. This amendment should be in this bill so that this operation will be carried on for the benefit of the United States, reaching into the Philippine Islands. That is why I am going to offer the amendment.

Mr. CELLER. If the abacá is stockpiled that would remove it from the commercial market, would it not?

Mr. CRAWFORD. It certainly would.

Mr. CELLER. And that is the purpose of the gentleman's amendment; so we would not injure the economy of the Philippines. We can get this material from the Philippines now without any danger.

Mr. CRAWFORD. That is correct.

Mr. CELLER. And we can get it cheaper.

Mr. CRAWFORD. You get it cheaper in this way, if we will let the Philippine abacá industry live, upon which we must absolutely depend—you will never get a sufficient supply from Central America, I do not care if you put out 10 times the amount of this appropriation; you must depend on the Philippines. We must let this Philippine industry live. If we do and put the product on the market we will have abacá at 16 or 18 cents a pound instead of the 26¼ it brings today.

Mr. CELLER. I thoroughly agree with the gentleman and shall support the amendment.

Mr. ALLEN of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORD].

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan is recognized for 15 minutes.

Mr. FORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to speak out of order.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. FORD. Mr. Speaker, at the outset let me state I yield to no citizen in my devotion to this country and I consider it an outrage that anyone in the House should accuse another of opposing legislation for the defense of our country. Yesterday, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. WALSH], during the general debate on H. R. 9178 stated that he could point out that I had failed to vote for the defense of my country. Immediately on the floor of the House I challenged him to prove such a preposterous statement. The gentleman indicated that he would at some later date but at the time he uttered the accusation it was obvious he was talking to hear himself talk with absolutely no knowledge whatsoever as to how I had voted on any measure that has come before the House in the Eighty-first Congress. You will note in the printed RECORD today that the gentleman from Indiana during our colloquy frankly admitted he did not know me from Adam. For any member to accuse another without facts at hand to substantiate such a charge is irresponsibility of the worst sort.

Earlier during this same speech in which he made the accusation concerning my voting record, the gentleman from Indiana patted himself on the back for never condemning any individual without a full and fair hearing or trial. Yet in the same speech, all within a period of 10 minutes, the gentleman from Indiana openly accused a colleague of voting against the defense of his country when during our colloquy it was obvious he knew nothing concerning my voting record. Mind you, my colleagues, the gentleman from Indiana frankly admitted he would have to supply the data from the RECORD when I challenged him to back up his statement. I respectfully suggest that the gentleman from Indiana be somewhat consistent when he contends he never accuses or condemns without all the facts at hand.

The gentleman's own record in the House is rather interesting. During the first session of the Eighty-first Congress there were approximately 68 highly significant legislative issues on which there were roll call votes. On 16 of the 68 the gentleman was not recorded. It should interest the House that on these same significant issues I was recorded on 65 out of the 68 roll calls. This is a somewhat better record than that of my colleague from Indiana.

It should also interest the House that on 42 significant issues in the second session of the Eighty-first Congress the gentleman from Indiana failed to vote in 12 instances while my own record indicates my absence on only 3 occasions out of the 42. Again, if attendance to duty is a criterion, the gentleman from Indiana has a far worse record than I.

I also have some other facts that are somewhat interesting. From the beginning of the first session of this Congress through June 30 there were 430 roll-call votes. I missed 17 out of the 430 votes, a 96-percent record of being on the job. The gentleman from Indiana was not recorded on 260 out of the 430 votes; in other words, he was on the job 40 percent of the time and was absent 60 percent of the time.

In the Eighty-first Congress there were 205 votes from the beginning through June 30 on legislative matters. I missed 8 of those votes and was recorded on 197 occasions. The gentleman from Indiana missed 66 of those votes and was here for 139 roll calls.

There were 225 quorum calls from the beginning through June 30. I missed 9 of those roll calls. The gentleman from Indiana missed 104 out of the 225.

Mr. Speaker, I ask you, Who is on the job, the gentleman from Indiana or myself?

Those of us who have been selected for this position of responsibility by the voters of our respective districts owe it to ourselves and our constituents to be on the job. The gentleman's record in this regard is obviously inferior to my own. Perhaps if he was more conscientious about his attendance record the gentleman from Indiana would know accurately the voting record of his colleagues and would not fly off the handle and make such irresponsible statements concerning the record of a colleague.

Yesterday, after the colloquy between the gentleman and myself, a Member of the House suggested to me that as a test of our loyalty I put my service record of 47 months in World War II against the gentleman's Army record of approximately 13 months. I assure you that that is not a fair and honest basis for any test of loyalty or devotion to our Nation's security and welfare. Many of our fellow citizens served our Nation well and faithfully in a civilian capacity during World War II, perhaps even contributing more than we who were in the various branches of the armed services. What does perplex me, however, is why the gentleman from Indiana should ignorantly resort to derogatory and irresponsible statements of the kind made yesterday on the floor of the House

At the time the gentleman on the floor of the House made the reference to my voting record, as I said before, he had no facts, if ever there were any, to back up his accusation. Subsequently he apparently learned my name and checked the record. The gentleman from Indiana now states because I voted for or against certain selected proposals he has proved his point. The Members of the House should know the facts on this afterthought analysis.

Let's start with H. R. 5895, the Mutual Defense Assistance Act of 1949. This bill originally called for an authorization of $580,495,000 for North Atlantic Pact countries; plus $500,000,000 in forward contracting for North Atlantic Pact countries; plus $211,370,000 for Greece and Turkey, and $27,640,000 for Iran, the Republic of Korea, and the Republic of the Philippines. On August 18, 1949, on roll call No. 188, 209 Members of the House including myself voted for the Richards amendment. This amendment was approved by a bipartisan vote and it deleted the $500,000,000 for forward contracting but left intact the sum of $580,495,000 for military aid to our European allies. Does the gentleman from Indiana honestly contend that all of the 209 Members who voted for the Richards amendment "failed to vote for the defense of their country"?

It is interesting to note that the gentleman from Indiana condemns me for my support of the Richards amendment yet, according to the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, my colleague from Indiana was not present and consequently cast no vote whatsoever on the Richards amendment. The record shows his absence at the time the vote was cast and furthermore he neither took the time or made the effort to pair himself either for or against the proposal. One who condemns another should at least have a record of his own to exhibit.

On the same day after the adoption of the Richards amendment a roll-call vote demanded on H. R. 5895 and on that vote I am recorded in favor of the bill. Again the gentleman from Indiana, who so glibly and ignorantly accuses a colleague was not present. He cast no vote and was not paired one way or another. Two hundred and thirty-eight Members supported the bill by a recorded vote. In no vote in the RECORD on this day do I find an indication of the gentleman's attitude on this bill, yet he feels free to comment on my vote on this issue .

Subsequently the other body considered H. R. 5895 and reduced the authorized appropriation for North Atlantic Pact countries to five hundred million dollars but added five hundred million for forward contracting and included seventy-five million for the general area of China. The House and Senate conferees approved the appropriation authorization of the House—$580,495,000—and added the five hundred million for forward contracting as adopted by the other body.

On September 28, 1949, the conference report on this legislation came before the House. After debate the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SMITH] offered a motion to recommit. One hundred and thirteen Members, including myself, supported that motion. I supported the motion to recommit because in my estimation such a vote was consistent with my vote on the Richards amendment. I ask this question: Does the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. WALSH] suggest that all of the 113 Members who voted to recommit failed to vote for the defense of their country?

On final passage of the conference report on H. R. 5895 the gentleman from Indiana and I voted the same, namely, for the bill. This was his first affirmative support for the legislation and the second time during the first session that I had supported such legislation. Obviously his blasphemous comment of yesterday, considering his own record, was not justified.

The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. WALSH] in his afterthought analysis makes much of my two votes on January 19, 1950, when the House considered and rejected the first bill authorizing economic aid to Korea. A brief review of the far eastern situation on that date is important to an understanding of why 193 Members of the House rejected this bill. Early in January of this year, just before this vote, both President Truman and Secretary of State Acheson turned their backs on and literally abandoned Formosa contrary to the views of General MacArthur, who all along has contended we must maintain the integrity of Formosa against the aggression of Red China. With the President and the Secretary of State abandoning Formosa at that time was there any justification for pouring sixty million or more in economic aid into Korea? Of course not.

This bill, H. R. 5330, proposed only economic aid to Korea, no military equipment, only United States dollars for the construction of power plants, fertilizer, and so forth. It was predicted on January 19 during the debate on this bill that Communist forces could and would overrun the South Korean Republic whenever such a military move was to the advantage of the Soviet Union. That prediction, unfortunately, has come to pass, but the recent developments in Korea certainly sustain the position of those who refused to pour United States economic aid into a militarily defenseless nation. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. WALSH] wanted the United States to authorize sixty million for South Korean power plants, fertilizers, and so forth, when all our military leaders said the territory could not be defended yet he has the gall to accuse me, and by implication 192 others in the House, for failing to vote for the defense of our country because we rejected this proposal.

Again, on February 9, 1950, the House was called upon to consider a bill—S. 2319—for Korean economic aid. It was in effect the same bill as H. R. 5330, except certain United States funds were authorized for the island of Formosa. Frankly, this bill, with the inclusion of aid to Formosa, made sense principally because it was an admission by the State Department under Mr. Acheson that Formosa was not to be abandoned to Stalin and Red China. Prior to this change in attitude, Mr. Acheson and the President had abandoned Formosa.

However, with this change in Pacific policy by the administration, I could and did support the legislation. Yes; I did vote to reduce the authorizations, but again in light of our recent military reverses in South Korea perhaps it would have been wiser to cut back some of the economic aid to the South Korean Republic. Certainly a vote on February 9 of this year to reduce but not eliminate economic aid to Korea is not a vote against the defense of this Nation. Again, as before, the afterthought analysis of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. WALSH] is in error.

A short summary of the ill-founded accusation by the gentleman is in order. Of the eight record votes to which he refers, either directly or indirectly, he and I voted alike on two occasions. I would suggest that in these instances he is like the pot calling the kettle black. On two of the roll calls when the House considered the Mutual Defense Assistance Act of 1949, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. WALSH] was nowhere to be found. In other words, he cast no vote. The Members can draw their own conclusions in this instance. On the other four roll calls I voted differently from the gentleman from Indiana for good and sufficient reasons. In no way whatsoever, as the record shows, did I or the many others who voted similarly, vote against the defense or national security of this Nation. If anything, we who disapproved of Secretary Acheson's policies and supported those of General MacArthur in light of recent developments, are right and the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. WALSH] was quite wrong.

In closing, let me say no man in this House or elsewhere is more devoted than myself to our country and the principles for which it stands. At the same time never have I, nor will I ever, accuse another in the manner of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. WALSH]. Each Member of the Congress has a duty and an obligation to vote on each and every proposal as his or her conscience dictates. It is not within the prerogative of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. WALSH] to determine and judge the merits or errors in my decisions, particularly when at the time of his comment he was completely ignorant of the facts. The record is now corrected. I thank my colleagues for their indulgence in permitting me an opportunity to refute the gentleman's irresponsible statement of yesterday.

Mr. McSWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. WALSH].

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, yesterday my committee chairman asked me to make some remarks, and I suggest that the House membership turn to these original remarks and just see what I said. I thought my remarks were restrained and to the point, but for those Members who were not present I suggest that they see page 10992 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD; in substance I pointed out that I did not care how any individual Member of this body voted previously to the present Korean situation.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALSH. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. McCORMACK. I have read the gentleman's speech, and there is no justification for the speech made by the gentleman from Michigan. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORD] has read from a manuscript, showing that he made his speech with deliberation and premeditation. In the Massachusetts Legislature, when one undertook to make a speech to kill another member, we called him a "legislative killer."

Mr. WALSH. I thank the gentleman.

I was sitting here listening to the debate and tending to my business when the gentleman from Michigan obtained the floor and took issue with my position, as he certainly had a right to do. I said earlier in the debate that there seemed to be a great many people that now have 20/20 vision in their hindsight. I think the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORD] has 20/20 vision in his hindsight, and he also has clairvoyant powers, because I have never to this moment commented on his specific voting record in the RECORD of the House, and I really had no serious intention to do so. I did say yesterday that I might do so, or I would, but I did not wish to carry on this fight. However, he decided that it was his job to answer what I still consider was my inoffensive non-personal, trying-to-be-patriotic speech. We had just heard a leading Member of the House blame the present Administration of causing two World Wars, and causing the Korean outbreak.

So I sent out and got his record while he was still on the floor. I had that record present. I was upset and so was he. I did not then and do not now like to deal in personalities. In due time I am going to check personally my voting record and my record on attendance. It may not be as good as it should be, but I can ssure you that I have missed few important issues and I am going to point out a few instances why it is not as bad as he claims it to be. I am a member of the Committee on Armed Services. I was also a member of the Kilday subcommittee which met off and on for more than three months during the first session of the Eighty-first Congress. We seldomly answered quorum calls when testimony was being presented. Any of you who have served under CARL VINSON on the Committee on Armed Services knows what it means to leave a committee session to answer a quorum call. Of course he has been here a long time and it does not make a lot of difference to him.

Then with reference to his remarks about my votes on the foreign military-assistance bill, I can tell you very easily where I was. I was on the B–36 subcommittee in California. I was gone for more than 1 week, and the members of the committee, both the minority and the majority are unrecorded on that roll call and several others and numerous quorum calls. That is the reason I did not vote on that bill. How is he recorded on the Richards amendment to reduce military assistance to our allies? He told you. He is recorded in favor of it.

I could also go into personal reasons of illness and death in my family that prevented my attendance during four important votes. But I do not care to go into that. I do not want sympathy, and I do not care to take the time of the House to explain matters that are personal to me. But the point I am trying to make here is that without any reason whatsoever, unless it might have touched a mighty sore spot in some people's armor, I was maliciously and—I am using the word considerately—I was maliciously singled out for my remarks and attacked. I took the floor, and here is what I said, in substance:

> I could point out to this Member and other Members their voting record in the past. I could, if necessary, point out where he failed to vote for what I consider to be the best interest of the national defense of our country.

We may disagree as to what is for the best interest of our country. It seems as though since the Korean situation has occurred that a lot of people are trying to get up here and apologize for their past votes, for how they voted on certain issues, such as Korean aid and foreign military assistance, which I consider to have been paramount to the success of any future defense of this Nation. I have not attacked this young man on his Korean-aid vote, but he apparently anticipated that I was going to. His vote certainly was contrary to mine, and I still personally think his vote was not in the best interest of this country, and he thinks to the contrary.

But it happens to be that a majority of the House thinks otherwise. I am not attacking his motives, nor his patriotism. I tried yesterday to answer this young man, whom I admit I had never known, for coming down here in the well of this House and saying that I am neglectful of my duty; that I walked out of the Armed Services Committee session; that I disagreed with the gentleman from Georgia, CARL VINSON; and now I am having kind words to say for him. I thought yesterday we were going to get all those things out of our system, and we were going to work side by side. I cannot help but notice that there is a great amount of apology from the left side of the aisle for past votes. I do not care personally how you voted. It is what you are going to do in the future. I do not care what we did on the right. We have not always been correct, but I feel our record of preparation for defense needs far less explaining. But it is what we are going to do now in these critical hours that counts.

So I have no apology to make for my stand or for the remarks I made yesterday. If he thinks I was personally attacking his patriotism, I apologize, because I was not then, and am not now, attacking his motives or his patriotism. But I wish to say that I seriously disagree with his powers of vision as to what was to happen in the international situation, as it is reflected in his voting record during the years 1949 and 1950 and prior to the Korean trouble.

A great many people had the same difficulty.

I wish to say one other thing in closing.

I do not think it is proper for a freshman Congressman to take the floor too often. I have never made a habit of getting up here and loudly expressing my views, as I wanted to listen and observe. A week ago I made my first speech, other than 1-minute remarks, on the floor during this session. I have been here four times since. I wish to apologize for taking the time of this body in these critical hours, but I felt it necessary, as a member of the Armed Services Committee, yesterday and last week, to make my remarks known to you Members. If I hurt any of your feelings, I did not intentionally do so. But I have a very strong conviction about this war and about unanimity and the need for preparation. I think in our Committee on the Armed Services we get more information about the world conflict than in any committee in the Congress. As a father of children, and as a young man interested in the welfare of the Nation, I can lay aside personal differences and we can lay aside past records and think about the future. I do not propose to get into any more personal controversies with any Member of this House unless they personally, maliciously, and purposely attack me, and then, of course, I will take the floor.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BONNER). The time of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. WALSH] has expired.

Mr. McSWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. CELLER].

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, there is no doubt that we must have a plentiful supply of hemp, cordage, and abacá, as indicated in the pending bill, for which a rule has been asked. There is no doubt that for defense purposes we must have a plentiful supply of cordage, but cutting into that requirement is also the requirement that we must unduly disturb the economy of the Philippines. The Philippine economy depends greatly upon the growth of this product and its sale in the United States. If we can have both, that is, if we need not disturb the economy of the Philippines and we can get a plentiful supply, why not do it?

I believe the amendment that will be offered by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAWFORD] will carry out those two purposes. It will mean that all abacá that comes from this project in Central America will be stockpiled, and will not go into commercial channels. The statement has been made that the provision in the pending bill, on page 3, section 3, subdivision (c), will preclude the channeling of the fiber into commercial channels. As I read that provision, that is not so.

Furthermore, the Munitions Board presently is permitting private sale of this critical material, instead of stockpiling all of it. I am informed that vast quantities of the subsidized abacá are being sold to private United States manufacturers. If we pass this bill as is, without the suggested amendment, we place the imprimatur of our approval upon such sale by the Munitions Board and those who are in control of this subsidized abacá.

I herewith insert a letter on this important matter from my friend, the distinguished Ambassador from the Philippines and former Delegate to the House, J. M. Elizalde, as follows:

EMBASSY OF THE PHILIPPINES,
Washington, July 24, 1950.

DEAR EMANUEL: I am writing to you in connection with the proposed legislation now pending in Congress which would authorize the continuation and expansion of the abacá production in the Western Hemisphere. I am referring to S. 3520 and its companion bill, H. R. 8351.

I hope you will appreciate my deep concern over this matter because of the disastrous effect that this legislation would have on my country if passed in its present form.

In the accompanying statement I have endeavored to state the Philippine views on this subject, the high lights of which are as follows:

1. This is not a purely defense measure since it does not provide for the channeling of the entire Central American output into the United States stockpile but instead permits its diversion to private manufacturers in competition with Philippine abacá (manila hemp).

2. The maintenance and expansion of the abacá industry in the Philippines is essential to the national security of the United States. It has been the main source for the national stockpile and its production can be increased immediately, given the necessary assistance.

3. Contrary to the impression created at the hearings, the measure does not provide stockpiling in the ground, that is, a standing abacá reserve in the field for utilization only in an emergency, because actually it is intended to extract normal yield periodically for sale to private consumers in the open market.

4. The Central American project is a subsidized operation that has proven costly to the American taxpayers. Experience has shown that abacá produced in Central America would cost 27 cents per pound as compared with 12 cents for Philippine abacá.

5. The record shows that certain private interests will derive continuing and increasing benefits from this project at the expense of the American taxpayers and the Philippine-abacá industry.

6. The abacá industry in the Philippines is one of the main foundations of our economy. It has been our experience that when the abacá industry is prosperous there is also general prosperity among the entire Filipino people because of the great number of families who depend upon it for their livelihood. The displacement of the Philippine abacá from the United States market will seriously lower the living standards of one-sixth of our population and might well become a serious threat to our security.

7. Before and since World War II despite the critical need by this country for this vital material the Philippine-abacá industry has not received any financial assistance from the United States.

8. Since no diplomatic representative of the Philippine Government could properly appear at the hearings we were unable to refute misleading and erroneous information presented at those hearings.

9. It is universally recognized that Philippine abacá (Manila hemp) is superior to Central American abacá or to any other hard fiber due to the fact that the Philippines has the right kind of soil, the favorable climatic conditions, the processing technique, and the experienced labor so necessary in production of the highest-quality fiber. This explains why this fiber has acquired the trade-name of Manila hemp and is known the world over by that name.

Knowing as I do your personal interest in the welfare of my country I am therefore taking the liberty of suggesting that this measure be amended by inserting a provision to the effect (a) that the entire output of this project be channeled into the stockpiling program of the United States and that no part of it should move into the commercial market, and (b) that the exploitation for the production of abacá in Central America be confined to the area of 25,000 acres presently devoted to this purpose and not to provide for its further expansion by utilizing any new area or additional acreage.

I would appreciate it if you could see your way clear to giving our cause your sympathetic consideration.

Sincerely yours,

J. M. ELIZALDE,

Hon. EMANUEL CELLER,
House of Representatives,
Washington, D. C.

I believe the amendment is a good one and should be adopted.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks and to include therein portions of a letter received from the distinguished Ambassador from the Philippines, J. M. Elizalde.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. McSWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. CASE].

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, I am sorry that the gentleman from Indiana and the gentleman from Michigan have both left the floor temporarily. I merely want to make a brief statement which I think should be in the RECORD at this point. I was present yesterday when the statements were made that have been alluded to.

The speech accredited to the gentleman from Indiana, as it appears in the RECORD today does not correspond to what he said on the floor of the House yesterday afternoon. I make that as a flat statement on my honor as a Member of the House of Representatives. I am sure that an examination of the original transcript will show this to be the fact. I feel safe in saying that if the gentleman from Indiana ever becomes more than a freshman Member of this House he will learn that fairness in reporting the statements of what he has previously said and in maintaining the integrity of the RECORD is an attribute much to be valued.

Mr. JACOBS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I yield.

Mr. JACOBS. What the gentleman has just said is correct, but I think the gentleman should know a little of the background before he makes that statement Therefore an understanding is in order.

After the exchange between my colleague, Mr. WALSH, and Mr. FORD, Michigan, I met another gentleman from Michigan—and I might say that I am a friend of both Mr. FORD and Mr. POTTER, to whom I am referring, and we discussed the matter. We both agreed that there were things said which should not have been said. We were right at the back of the center aisle. I do not like to see my friends fussing among themselves, especially when I know both of them and know they are both gentlemen.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I think the whole incident may have been unfortunate but I think the RECORD should not be allowed to stand as indicating that what appears in the RECORD today is an accurate record of what was said yesterday.

Mr. JACOBS. Let me say I agree with the gentleman, but it was done pursuant to an understanding between me, Mr. POTTER, and Mr. WALSH, and I am sure Mr. POTTER will confirm it. I asked him to delete a portion. That is why there is a difference between what Mr. WALSH said and what is printed.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Then it should not be used by reference today; the printed speech should not have been used by reference today as giving what was actually said yesterday.

Mr. JACOBS. I am not going to argue about the ethics of the situation; I simply state that it was pursuant to a conversation that took place between me and Mr. POTTER, of Michigan, that the change was made.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I want to express appreciation to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. MCSWEENEY] for yielding time permitting this matter to be cleared up.

Mr. MCSWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. DURHAM. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (S. 3520) to strengthen the common defense by providing for continuation and expansion of Western Hemisphere production of abacá by the United States.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (S. 3520) for the expansion of Western Hemisphere production of abacá, with Mr. LYNCH in the Chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

By unanimous consent, the first reading of the bill was dispensed with.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. DURHAM] will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SHORT] for 30 minutes.

Mr. DURHAM. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 15 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, the purpose of the proposed legislation is to strengthen the national defense by authorizing the United States Government to continue its assistance in the development of a source of abacá—Manila fiber—in the Western Hemisphere.

Abacá is a fibrous plant, indigenous to the Philippines, from which manila hemp is produced. It has been declared to be a product of strategic importance to the national defense and to be in critical short supply. It is being stockpiled under the Strategic and Critical Materials Stockpiling Act.

Prior to World War II, practically the entire supply of abacá came from the Philippines. During the war this source became unavailable and the production of cordage of all kinds suffered because of the nonavailability of abacá. The reaction was of a chain nature, in that as abacá became scarce the producers of cordage were forced to use other less desirable types of fibers, which depleted the stocks of those materials. Eventually, all types of cordage, from those required in agriculture to those required for war purposes, were in extremely short supply. To partially offset this shortage, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, acting under special legislation to develop defense industries, began the production of abacá in Central America. Climatic and agricultural conditions in that area were satisfactory and the Department of Agriculture had developed sufficient technical knowledge to make such an endeavor feasible.

When this program of abacá production in Central America was undertaken, it was found that the United Fruit Co. was already engaged in the production of bananas in some of those countries and had the physical facilities available to undertake the production of abacá. Through a management contract between RFC, as the agent of our Government, and the United Fruit Co., this program was instituted, and at the present time there are approximately 25,000 acres under cultivation. By various laws the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has been required to withdraw from such types of activity, excepting in those areas where they already have projects under way.

This bill would permit the Government, through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation or any other appropriate agency, to continue cultivation of abacá in the Western Hemisphere. However, it places a maximum limitation of 50,000 acres which can be planted to abacá, and it further provides for the establishment of a revolving fund, from which fund no more than $35,000,000 can be outstanding at any one time. It further provides that there shall be added to such advances and treated as advances an amount equal to the net value of assets of the program for the production and sale of abacá as held by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation on the effective date of the act.

In this connection, it is appropriate to point out that the present abacá program in Central America entailed an investment of $40,000,000. A total of approximately $28,000,000 has been recovered by the Government from the product produced. It is estimated that if it should become necesasry to abandon this project, the Government could recover approximately all of the remaining obligation of $12,000,000 through the liquidation of physical assets and by butcher harvesting the 25,000 acres of abacá now under cultivation. Therefore, the continuance by the Government of the production of abacá in Central America, at current market prices, indicates that the project could be continued and expanded on a self-liquidating basis.

The availability in Central America of a ready source of abacá lessens the amount required in the stockpile where it is presently being stored. This is of major importance since Manila fiber, under presently known measures, can be stockpiled or stored for a maximum period of approximately 3 years, after which it must be rotated, and in the event all of our stockpiling requirements of fiber had to be met from the Philippine source, it is possible that the cost of that particular item in the stockpiling program would be greatly increased because of the inability to properly rotate the stocks.

The prewar rate of production of abacá in the Philippines was 400,000,000 pounds per year, and there was a ready market for every pound of that fiber. The Philippines had then and have now a natural monopoly on this product and can produce, as they did in the past, approximately 95 percent of the world supply. Under present conditions, the Philippine production has dropped to 160,000,000 pounds annually. Our Central American production is approximately 30,000,000 pounds annually, and very limited acreage in Sumatra produced 6,500,000 pounds in 1949. This is a total world production of 196,000,000 pounds as against the prewar Philippine production of 400,000,000 pounds. So there can be no dispute that there is a world-wide shortage of abacá.

The Department of Defense, the Munitions Board, the Department of State, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the Cordage Institute are unanimously in favor of this legislation. Some fear has been expressed by others that the passage of this bill would be interpreted by normal financing agencies in the United States as indicating a policy which might deter financing of abacá production in the Philippines. The Senate committee clarified this situation by amending the policy declaration of the bill to provide that it is the policy of the United States to encourage abacá production throughout the world. This committee subscribes to that broader statement of policy. The fact that this bill gives financial support to Central American abacá production and not to the Philippines is based entirely upon the premise that this is a defense measure. The Philippines have been and will continue to be the main producers of abacá in the world. Their production, so long as it is available, is the backbone of our cordage industry. However, in the Western Hemisphere, the United States is, in effect, going into business for itself to provide insurance against the possibility that some unfortunate and unforeseen circumstance might again deny to us other sources of abacá. I would also like to point out that while our present abacá production in Central America is limited to four countries—Panama, Costa Rica, Honduras, and Guatemala—this fact should not be construed as being discriminatory against any other Central American country. The choice of locations for this production is determined entirely by practical and technical considerations.

In no sense should the proposed legislation be interpreted to indicate any lack of interest on the part of the United States Government or American industry in the development and utilization of abacá from the Philippines or any other source throughout the world.

In approving the proposed legislation, the committee wishes to emphasize that it does so on the basis that the legislation is required in the interest of national defense. The committee has fully considered the possibility that the Government project in Central America might become unduly competitive with Philippine abacá and thereby operate to the detriment of the Philippine economy. While there are those who express this fear, the proponents of the bill express the opinion that there will be a ready market for all of the abacá which the Philippines can produce, and that the competitive feature is more fancied than real. The committee takes the position that there are so many intangible considerations that no one can accurately forecast the end results of this legislation, but that it must be enacted in the interest of national defense.

The bill contains certain safeguards which are calculated to prevent undesirable results. It authorizes the President to terminate any contracts for Central American abacá production, allowing only such additional time as is necessary to liquidate the operation. The committee has added an additional safeguard in that it has amended the bill to provide that the Congress, as well as the President, shall have the authority to terminate the contracts. We hope that our amendment will reassure the Philippine Government. The bill requires that a report be submitted to the Congress at the close of each fiscal year, and it is the intent of the committee that the matter shall be followed closely in order to determine at the earliest practicable date any effects which may be unduly detrimental to the Philippine economy, and to take such corrective steps as the circumstances may require. At present it is anticipated that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation will act as the agent of the Government in contracting for the Western Hemisphere abacá production.

The Secretary of Defense recommends and the Bureau of the Budget approves the proposed legislation.

It was favorably reported to the House by the unanimous vote of the Committee on Armed Services.

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DURHAM. I yield.

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. I wonder if the gentleman or the committee took into consideration a product known as ramie.

Mr. DURHAM. I do not recall that ramie was mentioned in the committee. We were dealing only with abacá, in this special piece of legislation.

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. Ramie is a very strong fiber. It has more lasting quality, I understand, than abacá. I wonder, if we introduced a bill, and it did have merit in it, and it had the approval of the Munitions Board and others, the committee would give it consideration.

Mr. DURHAM. The gentleman very well knows that if it is anything pertaining to national defense and will help our national defense we would certainly consider it.

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. Would the gentleman rather take that procedure than have an amendment offered to the bill at this time?

Mr. DURHAM. I have already said that I hope the House will adopt this bill as it is, without amendment. I do not believe that is necessary.

Mr. NICHOLSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DURHAM. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. NICHOLSON. Would this abacá contract you are proposing hurt or help the Plymouth Cordage Co., which has been doing business for over 100 years?

Mr. DURHAM. I am looking for a statement made by the company, in which I am sure the gentleman would be interested, because he is conscientious in looking after his constituents. I compliment him for it.

I will be very glad to refer the gentleman to the statement in the hearings in which this legislation is favored by the company.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DURHAM. I yield.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I think the gentleman has made a very fine statement on this bill.

Mr. DURHAM. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I am going to ask the gentleman this question. I am going to ask you a technical question which has to do with the operations of the law of commodities. Here is a world-wide product.

Mr. DURHAM. The gentleman means the use of this product is world-wide, but it is not grown everywhere throughout the world.

Mr. CRAWFORD. The production of this product is highly concentrated in a small area and the world is dependent upon that small area. That area was practically annihilated by the Japanese. Yet within 5 years after that annihilation it comes back to approximately 60 percent of its prewar production. I am referring now to the Philippine Islands and to the total which appears on page 6739 of the hearings, it seems. I do not know why that page number is so high.

The United States Government has world-wide operations today and a terrific toehold in the Philippines which we must hold. Yet the Government of the United States is starting on a program here which I sincerely believe from the standpoint of the law which governs in the commodity field, unless we amend this bill we are striking a terrifically damaging blow to the small area upon which we must depend for our supplies.

Now my question is this: How can this production go ahead under this bill as here presented, without any amendment whatsoever, without seriously affecting the expansion of production in the Philippines and without seriously affecting the price upward which American people must pay for this sisal fiber.

Mr. DURHAM. I will endeavor to answer the gentleman's question. It is rather broad, and, of course, it is highly technical. I think the answer is this: that you will not get any production out of that acreage which you are planting for 3 years at best. So you only have 30,000,000 pounds annually, which is about all that we recovered down there from what we have already planted. We have a stockpile shortage, and according to the figures of the American Cordage Institute the cordage industry in this country is consuming 80,000,000 pounds annually, so there is going to be a shortage of this fiber, in my opinion, for the next 10 years.

There are five or six reasons why they have not got back into production in the Philippines. They are all pointed out in the hearings. There are several good reasons for it. On page 6702 you will find five reasons why they have not gotten back into production, which are sound reasons, in my opinion.

Mr. CRAWFORD. The gentleman stated it would be approximately 3 years before we got this new acreage into production?

Mr. DURHAM. That is correct. It takes 3 years from the time it is planted before it is harvested. That is one of the great troubles in the Philippines today. They have been going in there and cutting the fiber any time that they can get some growth on it, when they ought to cut it about every 18 months.

Mr. CRAWFORD. If the gentleman will permit, I think the record shows they are not doing that now. They did butcher their harvest. They did butcher their harvest in 1947, when there was no sisal hemp throughout the world, and when there was the pressure on them to do that.

Mr. DURHAM. I cannot say whether they are doing it at this very hour, but from the information that the committee had that is what we learned. Of course, those small farms were divided up by the Japanese. The Japanese controlled most of this fiber production prior to World War II.

Mr. CRAWFORD. That is correct.

Mr. DURHAM. They were producing 60 percent of all the abacá produced in the Philippines on only 28 percent of the Philippine land under abacá production.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Did the gentleman say prior to World War I?

Mr. DURHAM. No; prior to World War II.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I have to disagree with that. I have studied this very closely, and I cannot agree with that.

Mr. DURHAM. They controlled a large percentage of the crop.

Mr. CRAWFORD. In Mindanao they did. They went in there illegally and acquired the lands illegally, which they should not have done.

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 10 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, I think every Member of this House is indebted to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. DURHAM], who has spent so much time in carefully considering and weighing every aspect of the problem we are now dealing with.

As chairman of the Subcommittee of the Armed Services Committee dealing with stockpiling, the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. DURHAM] has given unselfishly and unstintingly of his time and effort, always exercising great patience, clear insight, and sound judgment in dealing with the various problems that come before that subcommittee.

Of course, this bill is really overdue. I would like to pause long enough to remind the Members of the House that we came dangerously near losing the last war due to the shortage of rubber. When the two large battleships of the British Navy were sunk at Singapore in Malay waters, our natural supply of rubber from the Orient was cut off. Not until Big Bill Jeffers, president of the Union Pacific at Omaha, was brought to Washington, and finally brought order out of chaos in building synthetic rubber plants and we got that industry going, were we assured of victory, because rubber, like steel and oil, is indispensable in fighting a modern, mechanized war.

The Government spent over $700,000,000 in building synthetic rubber plants. When the war ended there was a natural inclination and desire on the part of some people for the Government to dump or get rid of those plants as quickly as possible. Fortunately, the Congress of the United States was wiser than the people who expressed that opinion. Under the able chairmanship of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. SHAFER] in the Eightieth Congress, we passed legislation that kept many of those synthetic rubber plants in operation and others in a stand-by condition. Up until recently, since we have had an advance in the price of rubber, automobile tires are practically the only article or commodity that one could buy as cheaply as he could before the last war. As the Members of the House know, we are now using more than 200,000 tons of synthetic rubber, mixed with the natural product, annually, which has kept that industry alive, and will stand us in good stead not only in time of peace, and give as good or better product for less money, but which will be absolutely indispensable in case the trouble in Korea should spread into a world-wide conflict.

Unfortunately, we did not exercise good, sound judgment as far as abacá or Manila hemp is concerned. This fiber is indigenous to the Philippines, and we depended practically altogether on the Philippine supply before the last war. It was not handled properly by the Congress at the end of the last global conflict. The chairman of the subcommittee, the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. DURHAM], has clearly and forcefully pointed out the acute shortage of abacá, which is essential not only to our Navy and other branches of the armed services in time of war, but which is needed very much in our domestic industry, particularly in agriculture, as far as binding twine is concerned. It is most unfortunate that we have not kept those plantations in the different countries of Central America in production and as going concerns, just as we have our synthetic-rubber industry.

This bill provides that we shall plant not in excess of 500,000 acres, and that there shall be a revolving fund of not more than $35,000,000. I will admit that is a considerable amount of money, but it certainly is not too much for this essential and strategic material. We spent over $700,000,000 developing our synthetic-rubber industry. While it is a large amount, it is absolutely needed from the standpoint of national defense.

Mr. NICHOLSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SHORT. I yield.

Mr. NICHOLSON. If this expenditure would just take care of the binding twine, it would be worth while; would it not?

Mr. SHORT. I would not go quite that far. We are not doing it for our domestic economy; we are doing it chiefly because of the necessity of having it for the different branches of our armed services, particularly the Naval Establishment.

Mr. Chairman, the fears of our friends in the Philippines that the industry will be developed to the extent in Central America that it will destroy the Philippine economy are, in my judgment, unfounded. This bill will not prevent the production of abacá in the Philippines; in fact, the United States Government will buy every pound that the Philippines can produce.

Members realize that the Philippine Islands are 7,000 miles away from the United States. Do not forget that Russia has 270 snorkel submarines and has been assisted by German genius in developing those submarines. They can sail at a deeper depth and greater speed than any other submarine in the world. If we have to depend upon the Philippines with this long distance from the continental United States for our supply, we might find ourselves in the same sad predicament that we found ourselves as far as synthetic rubber was concerned when the supply of natural raw rubber was cut off by the fall of Singapore.

I ask the Members not to forget that of the 59 tankers hauling oil from Aruba, Curaçao, and Venezuela in the early months of World War II, 54 were sunk by Nazi submarines off our Atlantic coast until the coast line all the way from Baltimore to Miami, but more particularly down off Cape Hatteras, N. C., was almost a sea of oil.

It is wise that we help our Central American friends as we help our Philippine friends; we want good neighbors near by us, a source of supply that is accessible.

This bill it not a bill to injure any other country or help any other country; it is a bill to save our own necks. I am glad the able gentleman from North Carolina has given us such a clear and forceful picture of the problem with which we are dealing. The full committe, as well as the Subcommittee on the Armed Services, unanimously reported this bill, and I think not a single Member of the House would want to vote against it. I shall not, therefore, use any more of my time but will reserve the balance. I am glad now to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. THOMAS].

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed out of order and read a short newspaper article.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Chairman, before I proceed out of order I wish to commend the gentleman from North Carolina and the gentleman from Missouri, and the members of their subcommittee on the fine, outstanding job they have done on stockpiling. And may I take the liberty of saying on behalf of the Subcommittee on Independent Offices of the Appropriations Committee that handles stockpiling, that we not only have gone along in the past and supplied the necessary funds, but we are going along in the future.

We cannot afford to take any chance. As far as this particular item is concerned, again we cannot afford to take any chance. If we hurt our beloved friends, the Filipinos, we must make it up to them in some other way. I am sure we will. We are their friends, they are ours, and no one has the slightest intention of hurting them.

Mr. Chairman, I have in my hand an article of July 24, in the Houston Post which I want to read. It applies not only to my town but to every town and city in the United States.

Mr. NICHOLSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMAS. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. NICHOLSON. May I say to the gentleman from Texas that I am grateful for what he has said about this bill and about the gentleman from North Carolina and the gentleman from Missouri. I heartily agree with everything they have said about this matter.

Mr. THOMAS. I thank the gentleman.

This article refers to my city of Houston and reads:

TYRANTS ROLL

The sheriff's department has a list of 123 Houstonians who, it says, are members of the Communist Party and who, as such, are your enemies and mine. In the list are the names of 15 Houstonians who, says Sheriff's Captain Loyd Frazier, are prominent (though he adds that none are wealthy). There are also at least 200 more card-holding Reds in Houston. Every one is a potential saboteur; every one is a scab on the United States' war effort. And every one is protected by United States law. But there's one way you can help put a stop to this—write to your Congressman. His name: ALBERT THOMAS. His address: Washington, D. C. Let's change the status of home-front Communists before they get a chance to change ours.

Mr. Chairman, may I make the observation that the American people are kind and generous. We know all of that. However, we have some people in our midst that we have given a mile of latitude when they should not have had perhaps more than a quarter of an inch. We are the only people on earth who would give them more than a quarter of an inch.

It is as certain as I am standing here today—this is just a little advice; it is not friendly advice, either, to the professional Communists in this country—as sure as I am standing here today, if we have any sabotage of any magnitude and any damage is done, the people of this country will rise up in holy horror and woe be unto the Communists. There may be some compounds built, and they may be safely put away for the duration.

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMAS. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. SHORT. Is that not a strong argument for the passage of this bill? In other words, we may need a lot of rope to hang them?

Mr. THOMAS. There is something to think about in the gentleman's observation.

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the Delegate from Hawaii [Mr. FARRINGTON].

Mr. FARRINGTON. Mr. Chairman, I am entirely in sympathy with the purpose of this legislation. We who live in the Pacific realize the importance of protecting supplies essential to national defense. The gentleman from Missouri has very aptly pointed out what happened to us as the result of our complete dependence upon the production of rubber in Malaya. He also pointed out how our supply of abacá was cut off completely in the last war. In my opinion, it is vital that an arrangement be arrived at which will provide for an adequate stockpiling of this product.

I am, however, very greatly concerned about the feeling which prevails in the Government of the Philippines that this legislation is going to seriously injure their abacá industry. Its importance to the Philippines is very manifest when you realize that 155,000 farms are producing abacá. There are some 800,000 Filipinos who have an interest in this industry. It is the cash crop of an enormous number of small Filipino farmers.

Mr. Chairman, it is important to the national security that we protect these farmers and also preserve their friendly attitude toward this country.

I hope, therefore, that it will be possible to achieve the objectives of this legislation, and at the same time preserve the friendly relationship with the Filipinos, which is so important to our country, by adopting the amendment that will be offered by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAWFORD]. As I understand that amendment, it will require that the production of abacá in Central America under this arrangement be utilized entirely for stockpiling. I cannot see any sound objection to adopting this amendment. It will satisfy the Filipinos that their industry is not going to suffer.

I understand that loans that are necessary for certain developments in the abacá industry in the Philippines will be denied if this amendment is not adopted. I feel it is vitally important to our interests in the Pacific that we strengthen our economic ties with the Filipinos rather than weaken them. I think it is particularly important under present conditions that we do this. It seems to me that the proposal that will be made by the gentleman from Michigan is simple enough and will not injure the main purpose of this bill, and should be adopted.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FARRINGTON. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. CRAWFORD. It is not only for the protection of the Filipinos. We have in this country millions of consumers of sisal products, and, as in the case of synthetic and natural rubber, which the gentleman from Missouri referred to, we have a duty to preserve and protect the price structure to our consumers. The Delegate from Hawaii has pointed out that there are 155,000 Filipino farmers who are ready to grow sisal or Manila hemp now to deliver in the coming months, not 3 years from now. I am not talking against this bill. I am talking against the proposal to discourage those people in producing that product, and this amendment will encourage them to go ahead and produce on those 155,000 farms and keep up the production instead of being discouraged and driven out by the fact that this subsidized production in Central America goes into the open market against those little producers and drives them out of business.

Mr. FARRINGTON. I might add that I have been told that one of the reasons for this legislation is that a large quantity of abacá is at the present time being held in the Philippines. Something like 80,000 bales are said to be held there by three American corporations and not by the Filipino farmers and the plantation operators that produced it. I think we ought to go out and get that abacá.

Mr. DURHAM. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will yield, I may say to the gentleman that we went into that very carefully, and I would like to read a statement from the Munitions Board relative to those charges:

> Pursuant to your request, I have attempted to obtain some information relating to an allegation that between 60,000 and 100,000 bales of abacá fiber are being held in Manila by International Harvester Co. and Columbia Rope Co., anticipating a rise in price. Mr. John Goble, secretary of the Cordage Institute, advises by telephone that this allegation is entirely false. Both of these companies have replied to an inquiry that they are holding no materials in the Philippines anticipating a rise in price; and, in fact, the only materials there available are the "pipeline" supplies. Normal pipeline would run around roughly 60,000 bales. The Philippine Inspection Service at Manila furnished to the Cordage Institute information about a letter to Mr. McDaniels which letter indicates that there were on hand 40,000 bales of abacá in the inspection, grading, packing, and preparation for shipment processes. This is in fact below normal pipeline, which is about 60,000 bales. No materials are being held for any reason other than the normal preparation treatment; the supply is below normal (in fact Columbia has on hand in the Philippines 552 bales and orders for 766); and there is a ready market, including the stockpile, for any materials which are available. International Harvester Co. and the Columbia Rope Co. are prepared to furnish the committee a telegram denying these allegations.

I just wanted to clear that up.

Mr. FARRINGTON. I thank the gentleman for clarifying that point. I hope the gentleman will agree to the amendment to be offered by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAWFORD].

Mr. DURHAM. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. DEANE].

Mr. DEANE. Mr. Chairman, in the debate involving the pending legislation there may be a feeling on the part of some that we are not doing what we should for the Philippines. May I point out just what the United States is doing for the Philippines.

First let me say we should approve this legislation without crippling amendments because the Committee of the Armed Services in asking the support of the committee is acting in the best interests of the American Government.

I now refer to what this Government is doing in support of the Philippine domestic economy.

We are all somewhat familiar, perhaps, with the War Damage Commission and the work that is being done by the Commission in the Philippines today. On June 30, 1950, only 662 private property claims remained to be approved. These are significant figures. The Commission had completed the adjudication of 1,248,000 claims and paid $302,700,000 into the Philippine economy. These settled claims were submitted for a total of $1,137,000,000 and approved for $503,500,000. The average rate of allowance so far has been 55.73 percent.

In accordance with the law, the Commission has paid in full all claims approved for $500 or less, and paid $500 plus 30 percent of the approved remainder on the larger claims. With the $400,000,000 authorized by Congress, it is estimated that funds will be adequate to permit the payment of an additional 20 percent. Thus, large claimants will ultimately receive 50 percent of their approved claims. These second payments will be inaugurated in September and concluded in October. Approximately $87,000,000 will be distributed in the Philippines during the remaining months of the calendar year.

In the field of public property claims the Commission on June 30, 1950, had awarded $55,250,000, all of the funds allotted to it by the Department of State for the restoration of public buildings. It had approved 1,876 public projects, of which 1,120 were completed. The remainder will be finished before the Commission closes its doors. Despite a reduced staff, construction will continue to be supervised, and the $8,000,000 still unpaid will be disbursed as the buildings are completed.

The reason I am pointing out these significant figures is the fact that the American Government, it seems to me, is keeping its promise to the Filipino Government in our desire to stand by our friends there and there is no desire on the part of the Congress to take anything away from the Philippines.

I am quite sure that there is available to the committee delicate information which, if spoken on the House floor, might indicate that we do not have full confidence in the Filipino economy. At the same time, as we face one emergency after another, it seems to me the only proper step for us to take is to come to grips with this important subject and be prepared to develop all kinds of strategic processes that are necessary so that we may be sure that we have all critical material we need.

The potentialities of the Philippines are of course unlimited. They have great natural resources. At the same time, it is a young nation. We have seen what has taken place in Korea. What has taken place in Korea could very easily take place in the Philippines, as well as Burma and some of these other great sections of the Far East. For that reason, I trust that the amendment that will be offered by the gentleman from Michigan will not be adopted.

Mr. FARRINGTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DEANE. I yield to the Delegate from Hawaii.

Mr. FARRINGTON. I do not believe that the gentleman intends to suggest that what has taken place in Korea is likely to take place in the Philippines, because the background is entirely different. The Filipinos, with almost no exceptions, have been intense in their loyalty to this country. An entirely different situation prevails in Korea.

Mr. DEANE. I might point out this fact to the distinguished Delegate from Hawaii. I have in my hand a letter from a friend of mine in Manila dated July 18. I would like to read a paragraph of that letter:

> Developments in Korea have created anxiety in the Philippines. A few of the large American firms have permitted dependents of staff members to return, if they wish. None have been ordered to do so. Momentarily the chief anxiety appears to be a possible shortage of shipping space and its effect upon imports and foodstuffs and capital goods essential for reconstruction.

This friend goes on to say:

> There is a feeling of relief that the United States has taken a strong and a vigorous position.

But I feel as we consider this legislation today we must necessarily think in terms of making America strong. If it means we must underwrite certain economic measures in other sections of the world which may have an impact upon the Filipino economy, it does not necessarily follow that we are not going to do what we should or what we will continue to do to try to assist that great section of the world.

Mr. LECOMPTE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DEANE. I yield.

Mr. LECOMPTE. Does the gentleman have the same feeling expressed by the Ambassador to the Philippines in a letter to many of us, that his apprehension is unfounded and that this bill does not threaten the economy of the Philippines in any way?

Mr. DEANE. The letter I have before me is not from the Ambassador of the Philippines.

Mr. LECOMPTE. No, but you did get one from the Ambassador, did you not?

Mr. DEANE. No, I have not.

Mr. LECOMPTE. He wrote to several of us that in a general way, I think, he is in favor of this bill, but he did think there should be some amendments made to it. You are not familiar with that?

Mr. DEANE. No, I am not. But I would point out that in September and October of last year I spent approximately a week in the Philippines. They are faced with very severe problems in their economic development. I am not convinced in my own mind that at the present time they are in a position to follow through and produce the goods and merchandise that would be needed in the event of a serious emergency.

Mr. LECOMPTE. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FULTON].

Mr. FULTON. Mr. Chairman, we should examine this legislation on Government production of Manila hemp to see what it really is. When the United States Government puts up $35,000,000, I believe the committee will agree with me that it is putting up the entire capital of this proposed abacá industry expansion in Central America. So that if there is such a thing as socializing any industry, the Congress will be socializing the abacá industry in Central America, but for the purposes of United States National defense.

In order to justify such a position it clearly must be shown that this is a defense measure and is required for the safety and security of the United States. I am unable to see that this bill in its present form is completely and exclusively a defense measure. The bill as the committe has drawn it, on page 3, section (c) of section 3 contains the following language:

> Abacá fiber, produced under this Act, which from time to time is not needed for stockpiling under the Strategic and Critical Materials Stockpiling Act (60 Stat. 596), as amended, may be sold otherwise than for stockpiling under such act.

Therefore, this bill as drawn, contemplates Government competition with private industry, and such Government competition can be used as a precedent for other industry. The only difference in this bill's treatment of the abacá industry, as against the steel industry in this country is that this is a specialized defense industry down in Central America, and the Government intervention is cloaked in the garments of defense.

Then, looking a little farther to see what has been the situation previously on abacá production in Central America, we see that during the past few years the Central American output has only moved into the United States national stockpile at the rate of 10 percent of their total output. Nine-tenths of it went into private commerce.

I am glad the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAWFORD] has offered this amendment, in order to keep this bill from socializing this industry abroad and competing with one of our good friends, the Philippine Republic. Congress should adopt the gentleman's amendment to insure that this government-produced abacá does go into the national stockpile. I believe that is what the gentleman's amendment does, does it not?

Mr. CRAWFORD. That is the only purpose of the amendment. Here are what you are doing under this plan: The taxpayers of the United States are simply putting up the money to carry the stocks in the arms of the RFC so that private operators do not have to carry those stocks through purchase in the Philippines, carry insurance, and pay the interest while the stocks are moving to the wheels which convert it into rope. Subparagraph (c) should go out of this bill. It should never have been put in there. It should go out for the protection of the people of the United States—the taxpayers.

Mr. FULTON. That is right.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Let industry carry its own burden. That is the reason I stand for private industry, but if it chisels on the taxpayer all the time, then I am not so anxious to defend private enterprise.

Mr. FULTON. I agree with the gentleman that we must safeguard private enterprise, because once Congress gives the Government unlimited range in any defense project and does not limit its field simply to defense, we are then subsidizing outside competition to private enterprise.

Mr. DURHAM. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FULTON. I yield.

Mr. DURHAM. So far as I know there is not a private enterprise individual in America opposed to this measure. The Cordage Institute appeared before our committee and they are for it. Under this amendment not a pound would go into the stockpile in 3 years, because you cannot get any production under 3 years. You have got to rotate this every 3 years. Who is going to take it if private enterprise does not take it? You have got a problem that you cannot solve without turning this into private enterprise.

Mr. FULTON. This Government subsidy, with $35,000,000 of taxpayers' money, is going into the production of abacá in Central America. The average cost in the Philippines has been 12 cents a pound. In Central America where it will be subsidized under this bill, the cost has averaged 27 cents a pound. In addition, as to the Philippine production we have not been using the full amount of it.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Of course the private operators are not objecting to this bill. They want the bill, because the taxpayer carries the burden for them. Why in the world should they object to the bill? Of course they do not. They are all for it. Why would they not be for it?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FULTON] has expired.

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. MORTON].

Mr. MORTON. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to speak out of order.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MORTON. Mr. Chairman, as the father of two sons, one of them 18 years of age, as an officer in the United States Naval Reserve, and chiefly as a citizen of this country, the final outpost of freedom, I find myself deeply concerned in these troublous times. Yesterday I listened with interest to the able and distinguished chairman of the Armed Services Committee. He commented on certain past policies of this our Government. He particularly pointed out our pursuit of the calculated risk. He emphasized the fact that we needed more calculation and less risk.

If one can give credence to the comments in the press and on the air one reaches the conclusion that those in high place fear a total mobilization because of the possible impact on the American economy and consequently the recovery effort of all freedom-loving war-torn nations. Mr. Chairman, we still face a calculated risk. I for one prefer the economic risk to the military risk. I have full confidence in the will to produce so characteristic of this country. To an extent that will today lies dormant. Action by this Congress is required to give it full expression.

Let us go, Mr. Chairman. Are we seriously worrying about an economic impact at the expense of our military security? If so, our economy may well be dictated in the years to come by the men in the Kremlin. Taxes, allocations, price controls, regimentation, rationing, a 48-hour week—all are unpopular but the people are ready—they are far ahead of us. Again I say: "Let us go."

Mr. DURHAM. Mr. Chairman, I have no further requests for time.

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 3 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, no person whom I have ever seen has greater distrust and dislike for socialism than I, and certainly I am not going to approve Government competition with private enterprise. Government with competition is good for good government; I think it is good for good business. I think that the fears of many of the Filipinos and their friends here—and all of us are their friends—are really unfounded.

In the time I am taking I want to read two paragraphs from our report, and we are indebted to our able, hard-working staff member, Robert Smart, for this language. I quote from page 3 of the report:

> In approving the proposed legislation, the committee wishes to emphasize that it does so on the basis that the legislation is required in the interest of national defense.

It is on that peg alone that we hang this bill, and that is the only reason that the Government is justified in spending $35,000,000 as we were justified in spending $700,000,000 to produce synthetic rubber without depending upon a source many thousands of miles away that could be cut off in time of war.

I continue reading from the report:

> The committee has fully considered the possibility that the Government project in Central America might become unduly competitive with Philippine abacá and thereby operate to the detriment of Philippine economy. While there are those who express this fear, the proponents of the bill express the opinion that there will be a ready market for all of the abacá which the Philippines can produce, and that the competitive feature is more fancied than real. The committee takes the position that there are so many intangible considerations that no one can accurately forecast the end results of this undertaking.

I wish the Members to pay particular attention to the following paragraph:

> The bill contains certain safeguards which are calculated to prevent this situation from arising. It authorizes the President to terminate any contracts for Central American abacá production, allowing only such additional time as is necessary to liquidate the operation. The committee has added an additional safeguard in that it has amended the bill to provide that the Congress, as well as the President, shall have the authority to terminate the contracts. The bill requires that a report be submitted to the Congress at the close of each fiscal year, and it is the intent of the committee that the matter shall be followed closely in order to determine at the earliest practicable date any effects which may be unduly detrimental to the Philippine economy, and to take such corrective steps as the circumstances may require.

So I think if anyone reads the bill, reads the report, really understands the intent of the committee, he can have no reasonable objection to this measure.

Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAWFORD].

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, in the fall of 1935 I went to the southern part of Mindanao and brought back to Manila the first official record of the back-door intrigue into the Philippines by the Japanese who went in there and settled those great abacá plantations. Since 1935 I have watched the production and distribution of abacá throughout the world with a great deal of interest without one penny of financial interest, directly or indirectly, in the business.

During the Eightieth Congress I had the pleasure of introducing and having this great committee approve a bill dealing with the question of rubber supply for the United States which was referred to by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SHORT] a few minutes ago. That plan, supported by this committee, has saved the consumers of this country literally tens of millions of dollars in the rubber which they have consumed in the last 4 or 5 years.

Here is a bill which has to do with the cordage supply. Subparagraph (c) which I hope to strike from the bill with my amendment if I can get the necessary votes, takes the RFC out of the business of carrying stocks of this stuff and selling it to private industry. If $35,000,000 is to be taken from the taxpayers to do this in the name of national defense and with our stockpiles almost absent, why in the name of goodness do we not put this production in the stockpile? If it is to be 3 years, as the subcommittee chairman has pointed out, before you have any production from the new acreage, by all means your production from the acreage, now running around 30,000,000 pounds per year, should go into the stockpile and not into the channels of commerce.

That is the purpose of the amendment which I shall offer when the bill is read for amendment under the 5-minute rule.

The CHAIRMAN. There being no further requests for time, the Clerk will read the bill for amendment.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That this act may be cited as the "Abacá Production Act of 1950."

DECLARATION OF POLICY

SEC. 2. Whereas abacá, a hard fiber used in the making of marine and other cordage, is a highly strategic and critical material which cannot be produced in commercial quantities in the continental United States, and of which an adequate supply is vital to the industrial and military requirements for the common defense of the United States; therefore, it has been the policy of the United States to continue the program for production and sale of abacá in which it was engaged at the termination of hostilities of World War II, and it is hereby declared to be the policy of the United States to encourage abacá production throughout the world, and in that connection to further the development and maintenance of abacá production in the Western Hemisphere through aid and supplementation of operations under the Strategic and Critical Materials Stock Piling Act (60 Stat. 596) and the national security and common defense.

PROGRAM

SEC. 3. (a) Production of abacá in the Western Hemisphere shall be continued by the United States Government: Provided, That the total acreage under cultivation shall not exceed the aggregate under cultivation as of the close of the month next preceding the date upon which this act shall become effective, except that additional acreage may be added in the Western Hemisphere at the direction of the President and reduction of acreage under cultivation to abacá under this act shall be effected whenever the President shall so direct: And provided further, That in no event shall the total number of acres under cultivation to abacá under this act at any one time exceed 50,000.

(b) Such surveys and research may be undertaken as are necessary or desirable to obtain the best available land in the Western Hemisphere for the production of abacá, the best development of abacá and development and maintenance of the plantations for the production of abacá established on such land, and the most economical and practical processing and disposition of such fiber and byproducts as result from the production of abacá on such land.

(c) Abacá fiber, produced under this act, which from time to time is not needed for stockpiling under the Strategic and Critical Materials Stock Piling Act (60 Stat. 596), as amended, may be sold otherwise than for stockpiling under such act.

ADMINISTRATION

SEC. 4. (a) The President may issue such rules and regulations and make such determinations as he deems necessary and appropriate to carry out the provisions of this act.

(b) All contracts entered into and all acquisitions of property effected under this act shall be in such manner and on such terms and conditions as the President shall determine.

(c) The President may exercise any or all of the powers, authority, and discretion conferred upon him by this act through such departments, agencies, officers, Government corporations, or instrumentalities of the United States, whether or not existing at the date of the enactment of this act, as he may direct.

(d) The President may transfer to the departments, agencies, officers, Government corporations, or instrumentalities of the United States, or to any of them, which he directs to exercise the powers, authority, and discretion conferred upon him by this act, such facilities, personnel, property, and records relating to such powers, authority, and discretion, as he deems necessary; and he may so transfer all appropriations or other funds available for carrying out such powers, authority, and discretion.

(e) The financial transactions authorized by this act shall be subject to the Government Corporation Control Act, as amended, and other laws specifically applicable to wholly owned Government corporations as a class.

FINANCING

SEC. 5. (a) For the purpose of carrying out the functions authorized by this act, there is hereby established in the Treasury, a revolving fund which shall consist of (1) such amounts as the Congress may appropriate thereto, which appropriations are hereby authorized, (2) such amounts as may be paid into the fund pursuant to subsection (e) of this section, and (3) amounts received in connection with any transfer pursuant to subsection 4 (d) of this act.

(b) Pursuant to regulations prescribed by the President, the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to make advances from the fund not to exceed a total of $35,000,000 outstanding at any one time. There shall be added to such advances and treated as advances an amount equal to the net value of assets of the program for the production and sale of abacá as held by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation on the effective date of this act.

(c) Interest shall be paid on each outstanding advance at such rates as may be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury to be appropriate in view of the terms for which such advances are made.

(d) Appropriations are hereby authorized for payment in the form of a grant, in such amounts as may be estimated in the annual budget as necessary to cover losses. The annual budget program shall specifically set forth any losses sustained in excess of the grant previously made for the last completed fiscal year. Appropriations are hereby authorized for payment to cover such additional losses incurred.

(e) Receipts for each fiscal year may be used for payment of the costs incurred in connection with projects and activities authorized by this act. After providing out of such receipts for necessary working capital requirements, any amounts in excess thereof shall be paid annually into the fund. Such payment shall be applied to reduce the amount of advances outstanding, and any remaining payments shall be covered into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

(f) Until such time as the appropriations herein authorized are made, such of the powers, authority, and discretion provided for in this act as the President may delegate to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation may be exercised by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation under the authority conferred by former section 5d (3) of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act, as amended (54 Stat. 573, 961; 55 Stat. 249); joint resolution approved June 30, 1945 (59 Stat. 310); and section 12 of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act, as amended (61 Stat. 207), with funds recovered or recoverable from its national defense, war, and reconversion activities.

DISPOSAL OF PROPERTY

SEC. 6. Whenever the President shall determine that any property is excess to the purposes of this act, or that adequate supplies of abacá will be available from other sources within the Western Hemisphere on a basis acceptable to the United States, property held for the purposes of this act may be disposed of in such manner and on such terms and condition as the President may prescribe.

REPORTS

SEC. 7. Within 6 months after the close of each fiscal year a report shall be submitted to the Congress on the activities under this act.

EFFECTIVE DATE AND DURATION

SEC. 8. This act shall become effective on April 1, 1950, and shall remain in effect for 10 years thereafter, unless the President shall direct earlier termination of operations, and for such further period as is necessary to the earliest practicable liquidation of operations under this act.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 7, line 13, after the word "the", insert: "Congress or the."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CRAWFORD. On page 3, line 9, strike out subparagraph (c) and insert the following:

"(c) All abacá fiber produced under this act shall be utilized solely to fulfill the objectives for stockpiling under the Strategic and Critical Materials Stock Pile Act (60 Stat. 596), as amended, and when the objectives of such act as amended have been fulfilled, report shall be submitted to Congress. Nothing herein shall prevent rotation of such fiber as produced under this act where necessary to prevent deterioration, as provided in section 3 (d) of the Strategic and Critical Materials Stock Pile Act (60 Stat. 596), as amended, but such rotation shall be effected only after research and determinations under section 3 (b) of this act."

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, I ask the Members to refer to line 9, page 3, of the bill, subparagraph (c) which provides that—

(c) Abacá fiber, produced under this act, which from time to time is not needed for stockpiling under the Strategic and Critical Materials Stock Piling Act (60 Stat. 596), as amended, may be sold otherwise than for stockpiling under such act.

This fiber is now being sold into the channels of trade. Of 3,000 bales offered just a short time ago, some 2,800 went into the channels of trade. This fiber, with our now critical situation, is not going into stockpiling, because it can be sold into the channels of trade. The channels of trade reach for it, naturally, because it is right here at their back door. They do not have to carry the ordinary or war risk insurance or interest risk from the Far East to the Atlantic seaboard. Naturally those private consumers of cordage fiber will support a proposal wherein the taxpayers, operating through the RFC, will carry those stocks for them and sell them to these individual users.

The amendment which I offer here does nothing in the world except preserve this production, financed with taxpayers money, for stockpiling purposes, plus, it provides for the rotation, so that the fiber carried over a period of time will not deteriorate. As our subcommittee has pointed out, it will be 3 years before you get production from this new acreage—not from the old acreage; do not get confused on that now— production from the new acreage, which means to say that if you are going to have any substantial consumption of fiber, you are going to be buying fiber from the Philippine Islands for stock-piling, which means to say that as you bring it in you can rotate it with the production of Central American fiber under this bill and prevent your deterioration.

I cannot imagine on any ground how a person can oppose this amendment. I am not up here shedding salty tears for the protection of the people in the Philippines, as much as I like them, and as much as I respect them and as much as I have worked with them; I am talking about the defense of the United States first, because if the United States is defended, the Philippine Government and the Filipino people will have a chance for a place in the sun, and if we do not defend ourselves, what chance have the Philippines got? The Philippines are a Republic today because the Congress of the United States gave them their independence. And, incidentally, we did not give it to them with my support, because I refused to go along with that proposition, because I believed they could not stand on their own feet. Of course they cannot stand on their own feet, and we have to protect them. And, I repeat, if we go out of the Philippines, we will go out of the Far East; you can rest assured about that.

This amendment of mine should be adopted. It in no way interferes with this program except it interferes with the selling of this production subsidized with taxpayers' dollars into the private channels of commerce, and it has got no business there at the present time especially; it has no business there so long as the world is short of this type of fiber as it is today. We should adopt the amendment not just because somebody says something about the Philippines, but because it is good, ordinary horse sense and in defense of the United States to do so. This amendment will give protection in the price levels. It will encourage those people in the Philippines who are now geared and ready for production to go ahead and get the stuff out in the market and into the channels of trade, and it has the same effect with respect to sisal fiber that the operation of synthetic rubber plants have in this country with respect to giving us a supply of rubber. Those plants should be stepped up in production with respect to rubber, and I would support that. But, I think everyone understands the amendment. I do not want to take any more of your time, and I hope the amendment will be adopted.

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, it is not at all agreeable to disagree with my good friend, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAWFORD]. However, the Department of Defense and the Munitions Board vigorously oppose any amendment to this measure that would require them to convert all Central American abacá production to the stockpile. The price of abacá before World War II was 7 cents a pound. Last week it was 24 cents a pound. Today it is 26 cents a pound. If all Central American abacá production is put into the stockpile, the cordage industry in this country, that must be kept in a healthy condition, will be at the complete mercy of the abacá dealers in the Philippines. I am not questioning the motives of our Philippine friends, but I submit to you that it is a pretty bad thing for any nation to have a monopoly on any strategic material in this world. It certainly would be a dangerous thing for us to have to rely upon one source of supply that is so distant from the continental United States.

If this amendment is adopted, no one here can tell where the price of abacá would stop. Every cent of increase in price would come out of the pockets of the American taxpayers.

Like the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAWFORD], I have only the kindliest feeling and good will toward our Philippine friends. I do not think I ever had a more enjoyable time than I had in Manila in 1946. I have also had the privilege and pleasure of visiting Guatemala and other Central American countries. I like those countries, too. This is a matter of business, not sentimentality.

This amendment should be defeated.

Mr. DURHAM. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I hope the Committee will vote down the amendment. Suppose we were to adopt a similar policy on all of our strategic and critical materials that are bought and put into the stockpile, for instance, rubber. All of these materials have what we call a life expectancy. Some may last 2 years, some 3 years, some 10 years; and some of them, of course, are permanent. But to apply this restriction and not permit this abacá to go into the channels of trade would mean this: We hope to have peace here some time in our lifetime, and certainly we do not want to be sitting here with a frozen stockpile of billions of dollars' worth of stocks on our hands and not be able to sell them into the channels of industry in peacetime.

If you will read the Stockpiling Act, Public, 520, you will find that it laid down that principle to begin with. We have carried out that principle probably too far in the last 4 or 5 years because industry in this country has been running at a very high level. I think we have exercised wise judgment most of the time, but some of the items probably we have sold down to too small a stockpile.

We would run into the same difficulty if we were to tie down every one of them and adopt such a policy as this in our strategic Stockpiling Act. I certainly hope the House will vote down this amendment.

Mr. COLE of New York. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DURHAM. I yield.

Mr. COLE of New York. I have been favorably disposed toward the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAWFORD], but I am disturbed by the situation that is pointed out by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SHORT], the possibility that we might permit ourselves to be victimized by unscrupulous Philippine operators. I am wondering if that market condition could not be corrected by the Government's disposing of such portion of the stockpile as might be necessary in order to level off the market price.

Mr. DURHAM. I would like to be able to assure the gentleman that if that could be done today it would please me very much, to say that we are in that position. But I cannot say to the gentleman that we can do that at the present time.

Mr. COLE of New York. Does the law give to the Munitions Board or to the Defense Department authority to sell out of the stockpile into the channels of normal trade and into the normal market?

Mr. DURHAM. Yes; Public Law 520.

Mr. COLE of New York. But in the opinion of the gentleman there are other factors involved which deny the Government the opportunity of correcting market conditions through the sale of Government stocks into the general market?

Mr. DURHAM. Yes, because if this Stockpile Act was used to go out and sell everything we had in a general market it would affect the market materially, or if we went out and purchased everything we needed tomorrow, it would be vice versa, so it has to be handled in a very careful manner. The gentleman knows those figures are all confidential.

Mr. COLE of New York. I realize that. In a general way I would assume that if the Government stocks were approaching the figure sought by the Government, then the Government would be in a position to release some Government stocks into the general market, but until that time is reached by the Government it would be dangerous for the Government to dispose of its own stocks just for the purpose of correcting market conditions.

Mr. DURHAM. If I were convinced that the stockpile is adequate, I would not be here today asking for this legislation. I thank the gentleman from New York for bringing out the points that he has.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DURHAM. I yield.

Mr. CHAWFORD. The chairman read previously from the reports of the other body and this body and the hearings are full of information. Yet, with a shortage of production of sisal cordage all over the world here we are involved in this thing with the front-line pages of the newspapers calling for total mobilization and this committee at this very moment sits here and recommends that we turn these stocks into private channels. Where is the defense of the United States?

Mr. DURHAM. I do not believe the gentleman wants to force us into the situation where we would be paying 40 cents for cordage material to go into the stockpile.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Let us take charge of the stocks and hold them for the defense of our own country and let us tell the consumers to cut out the consumption of goods until we win this fight.

Mr. DURHAM. I am sure the gentleman also recognizes the fact that the industrial production in this country is probably one of the greatest things today that Stalin has in his mind.

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DURHAM. I yield.

Mr. SHORT. No Member, Mr. Chairman, should have the fears expressed by the gentleman from Michigan. Certainly this Government, the Department of Defense, and the Munitions Board will take all of the Central American abacá for defense purposes for our stockpile if we need it. Bear in mind that if we had not had a synthetic rubber industry in this country today, we would perhaps be paying twice as much for rubber tires as we have been paying since the close of the last global conflict.

Mr. DURHAM. I might say to the gentleman today that we would extend our contracts for as long as 10 years if it would assure us of securing abacá for the stockpile and secure our national defense.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAWFORD].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. CRAWFORD) there were—ayes 12, noes 58.

So the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the Committee rises.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. LYNCH, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill S. 3520, pursuant to House Resolution 717, he reported the same back to the House with an amendment adopted in the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. DURHAM. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the third reading of the Senate bill.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

BUDGET AND ACCOUNTING PROCEDURES ACT OF 1950

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I call up House Resolution 729 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 9038) to authorize the President to determine the form of the national budget and of the departmental estimates, to modernize and simplify governmental accounting and auditing methods and procedures, and for other purposes. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and continue not to exceed 1 hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the consideration of the bill for amendment, the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BROWN].

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, this bill, H. R. 9038, on which we are now asking for a rule, is for the purpose of modernizing and simplifying the accounting, auditing, and other methods and procedures involving our Federal bookkeeping. It authorizes the President to determine the forms to be used for the national budget and the departmental estimates.

Title 1 of this bill provides for a modernized budget and accounting procedure. It authorizes the establishment of a balanced, coordinated accounting program.

Title 3 of the bill provides that no request for legislation authorizing subsequent appropriations for the departments or establishments of the Government shall be transmitted to the Budget Bureau, the President, or the Congress without prior approval of the heads of the departments or establishments.

Title 3 repeals a number of provisions of the existing law which are obsolete or in conflict with the provisions of this bill.

Mr. Speaker, this legislation, if enacted into law, will fulfill a long-wanted need in the operations of the fiscal department of the Federal Government.

We are now operating under the old Budget and Accounting Act of 1921, and a mass of earlier legislation which is outmoded, due to the tremendous growth of our Government in the past 30 years.

Title II further provides that no request for any kind of legislation would authorize any subsequent expenditures which, if enacted, would be a change from the present method. It also provides that under the present situation different departments of the Government in outlying branch offices over the country can have spot sampling of their expenditure vouchers and papers without sending them in to Washington which, in turn, would be a great money saver and also a great time and labor saver in the matter of the operations of the fiscal department of our Government.

Mr. Speaker, this bill has the support of the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments.

The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BROWN], who is a member of the Hoover Commission, and the other members of the Commission, went over this legislation very thoroughly. The bill came out of the Rules Committee unanimously. I believe it is a piece of legislation that the Government has been very dilatory in not presenting and having enacted into law before this.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BROWN].

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, as the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. MADDEN] has so ably explained, House Resolution 729 makes in order under an open rule and 1 hour of general debate, the bill H. R. 9038, to authorize the President to determine the form of the national budget and of departmental estimates, to modernize and simplify governmental accounting and auditing methods and procedures, and for other purposes.

This bill comes from the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments and amends quite a number of old laws now on the statute books, including the Budget and Accounting Act of 1921 so as to modernize our budget and accounting procedures. It is about 90 percent in line with the Hoover Commission recommendations; in other words, it accepts and puts into effect a great proportion of the recommendations made by the Hoover Commission in connection with budgeting and accounting methods and procedures within the executive branch of the Government.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I yield.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Can the gentleman state whether the bill in the form it now is with the amendments that are proposed by the committee will provide for submission to the Committee on Appropriations of the so-called green sheets, that is, sheets that pin down the classifications of appointments?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I am glad the gentleman asked that question. I will touch on that in just a moment.

The Hoover Commission recommended we have what is known as a performance budget rather than the present type of budget. A performance budget is one which will permit the collation, or the putting together, of all appropriation items for a given agency or activity in one place or section so we can find and look at it, and know the full proposed cost of that governmental agency, operation, or activity, instead of being required, as is now too often the case, to search through a great many different pages of the budget in an endeavor to find this, that, and the other cost of a given operation, only to perhaps miss a few items and so not ascertain just what that agency does cost.

I recall one of the activities of the Government which the Hoover Commission studied in connection with the budget. Most of us know that great institution, the Naval Medical Center. It is a very worth-while hospital and Government activity. But as a Member you would find the requested appropriation items dealing with the Naval Medical Center in 27 different places in the budget. If we did not look under this classification, or that classification, in the budget we would not have the complete picture as to the cost of operating the Naval Medical Center. Under the performance budget arrangement provided by this bill we can turn and find the Naval Medical Center requests, and have listed in a single place all the various costs of operation for that particular institution.

The Hoover Commission also recommended that we set up a new general accounting officer in the Treasury Department. This bill does not go that far; but it does provide—and I want the gentleman from California and the gentleman from Missouri to correct me if I am wrong—for the decentralization of accounting down into the various agencies and departments, as the Hoover Commission has recommended.

Mr. KARSTEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. KARSTEN. It does provide for agency accounting systems.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. This is in line in general, with that one exception, of all the Hoover Commission recommendations. So far as I know, and I do not want to speak out of turn for every member of the Commission, but those members on the Commission with whom I have discussed this matter are in favor of this legislation.

Mr. JENSEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. JENSEN. Is this legislation in line with the recommendations of Lindsay Warren, the Comptroller General?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Yes. Mr. Warren helped prepare this legislation and has approved this measure, which seems to be agreed to by all of the different officials of Government who are interested. I refer to the Bureau of the Budget and the Treasury Department, in which the accounting officer would have been placed, if we had followed the entire Hoover Commission recommendation. We have agreed this bill will do practically the same thing as our recommendation would have done.

Mr. JENSEN. What proof do we have that if this legislation is made law it will save money?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I will discuss that in a moment.

Mr. JENSEN. I do want to say that certainly our governmental bookkeeping system needs a lot of correcting.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I am sure no one knows that better than the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. JENSEN], who has served so ably and so well on the Appropriations Committee.

Mr. JENSEN. I thank the gentleman. I remember in 1947 when the Bureau of Reclamation claimed that the Central Valley project was out of money. We spent everything we had, so they said. Several large projects were stopped, but lo and behold when we investigated and went into the books we found that there was $7,000,000 plus unexpended.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I remember that incident quite well, and I feel this bill may be of some benefit in preventing such a situation in the future.

Mr. JENSEN. That is one incident I can cite. I can stand up here and cite dozens of instances where they have no idea what they have as a balance, what they have spent, or what they have spent it for.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I thank the gentleman. I will comment on that in just a moment.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts, the majority floor leader.

Mr. McCORMACK. I may say that the gentleman is correct when he says that the Comptroller General, Lindsay Warren, is in favor of this bill. I may also say that the gentleman is correct in saying that Secretary Snyder is in favor of it.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. And also the Bureau of the Budget.

Mr. McCORMACK. Yes. Secretary Snyder personally called to see me a few days ago and expressed the strong hope that the bill would be reported out of committee and passed.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. McCORMACK. I say that for the RECORD to confirm everything the gentleman from Ohio has said.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I thank the gentleman very much.

Mr. Speaker, I wish to make this statement: The gentleman from South Dakota asked me a moment or so ago as to the green sheets carrying the schedules of estimates to accompany appropriation requests. The gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] appeared before the Committee on Rules and discussed with the Committee on Rules and with the members of the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments the need of the Committee on Appropriations and Members of Congress generally to have the green sheets breaking down the estimated expenditures and appropriation requests for different agencies and departments. There was some discussion as to whether these green sheets should be prepared by the departments, based upon their requests, or by the Bureau of the Budget. As I understand and am informed, inasmuch as the gentleman from New York made a rather strong case for his position, and inasmuch as the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments had not gone thoroughly into the need for these green estimate sheets which he brought to the attention of the Committee on Rules, there has been an agreement reached so that an amendment will be offered which will assure that these green sheets will be furnished as a part of the budget when it is submitted to Congress each year.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I yield to the gentleman from South Dakota.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I note that section 204 reads:

> Except as otherwise provided in this act, the contents, order, and arrangement of the proposed appropriations and the statements of expenditures and estimated expenditures contained in the budget or transmitted under section 203, and the notes and other data submitted therewith, shall conform to requirements prescribed by the President.

As I understand the amendment that is to be proposed, it provides that the estimate shall be accompanied by information as to personal services and other types of expansion in the same manner as for fiscal 1950, but the point is, in saying that this "shall conform to requirements prescribed by the President" will that be interpreted to defeat in any sense or modify the right of the Committee on Appropriations to ask for such supplemental information, in such form as they may need for consideration of the estimates?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I cannot say as to what anyone may interpret anything to mean, but it is my understanding this bill will not interfere with the rights of the Committee on Appropriations to get additional information.

Mr. KARSTEN. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, we have every desire to cooperate with the Committee on Appropriations in obtaining this information. The language that we have agreed upon will insure that the information will be furnished along with the budget, so it will be here in time to be available to the Members so that they can use it intelligently in analyzing these requests.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. In the consideration of the budget estimates from time to time instances arise where they desire that information, and I simply want the record clear that in saying "shall conform to the requirements prescribed by the President" it does not operate in any way to defeat the request by the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. KARSTEN. This will in no way preclude any members of the committee from requesting information.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I yield to the gentleman from West Virginia.

Mr. BAILEY. I would like to inquire of the distinguished gentleman from Ohio if this pending legislation contains any provision for preexpenditures or incumbrance controls of legislative appropriations.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I do not think it does. I would not want to make a positive statement, but it is my understanding it does not.

Mr. BAILEY. I think the Congress could well give attention to some means that would create controls. I think there are entirely too many unjustified and uncalled for deficiency appropriations considered by this Congress.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. TABER. I think I ought to say to the House at this point that I have very grave doubts about some of the provisions in this bill. I have been over the situation with the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. KARSTEN], the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HARVEY], and the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BONNER], and other members of the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments. I have been over the matter with the Comptroller General and the Director of the Budget. We have arrived at an agreement which I think protects the situation of the Congress and the Appropriations Committee, and would enable the Congress to get the information it needs and require the budget to get it together and furnish the green sheets at the time the appropriation estimates are sent up by the President, so that those green sheets would be available to the committee just as soon as the budegt was available. Therefore, the Appropriations Committee would be able to use them to the very best possible advantage.

I would not want the committee or any of its members feel that anything connected with the budget would prevent the Appropriations Committee from obtaining any information, either along the line of the present budget or a future budget, that they felt was necessary for consideration of a budget item that was before them. They are in a position where they can refuse to appropriate or to bring in a bill until the information that is necessary is furnished.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I am sure the gentleman from New York is entirely correct and that this legislation will in no way affect the right of the Appropriations Committee or the Congress to get additional information relative to appropriations requests that are received as a part of a budget. I do believe the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] has rendered a very worth-while service to the Congress and to the country in the suggestions he has made. I think he convinced both the Rules Committee and the members of the Committee on Expenditures that his suggestions should be written into the bill as amendments so as to protect fully the rights of the Appropriations Committee, so as to guarantee the additional information which is needed on the green sheets will be furnished.

Of course above all else, one of the important features of a performance budget arrangement is that the average Member of Congress as well as the specialists—for I call the men who serve on the Appropriations Committee specialists—will be able to interpret and know something about what these appropriation requests really mean, and to be able to and find in the budget the information they seek. Certainly I do not want to see any sort of a budget arrangement set up where we will not get the detailed information we need and desire as individual Members of Congress, or that is needed and desired by the Appropriations Committee, which of course must do the great mass of the work on these appropriation bills.

Mr. PLUMLEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I yield to the gentleman from Vermont.

Mr. PLUMLEY. I think the gentleman's statement was ill-considered when he undertook to say the Appropriations Committee did not know what they were doing when they came to the Rules Committee.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I certainly made no such statement. Instead I paid them and Mr. TABER a very high compliment, or I attempted to do so. I must apologize to the gentleman if I failed to make myself clear. If he could understand me, I am sure it was my fault, not his, for he is a very learned, able, and distinguished Member of this body.

I assure the gentleman from Vermont I was attempting to pay a very high compliment to the gentleman from New York, the ranking member of the Committee on Appropriations because he did call to the attention of the Committee on Rules, and to the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments, the weakness in this bill; and as a result of his splendid testimony before our committee certain amendments were prepared and agreed to, which will strengthen the measure, will protect the rights of the individual Members of Congress to get necessary information, and the right of the Committee on Appropriations to have the green estimate sheets. So my words were actually quite complimentary to your committee, sir.

I fear the gentleman, who is usually correct, did misunderstand what the gentleman from Ohio said.

Mr. PLUMLEY. If I misunderstood the gentleman, of course, I regret it, but I doubt that I did misunderstand him.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I yield.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I have been talking this over with other members of the committee here. The thing that disturbs us a little bit is that section 204, as amended, reads:

> That the content, order, and arrangement shall conform to requirements prescribed by the President.

We have no objection to the President having in the budget what he wants, but I would like to read this language which we would like to have in the bill.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. The committee has some additional amendments and, of course, the gentleman may offer amendments if they wish.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. May I read some language here that we have been talking over which we would like to have considered?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I am sorry the gentleman from South Dakota was not before the Committee on Rules and did not discuss this with the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments so that we could have had these amendments considered at this time. If the gentleman will wait until the House resolves itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of this bill, he can ascertain what amendments will be offered, and perhaps may find that his objections have been met fully. At least I hope so.

Of course we cannot amend the bill while we are considering the rule.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Of course, we all understand that; but we are discussing the background of the bill.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. That is right.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. It has occurred to some of us that language like this might help a good deal:

> And provided further, That nothing in this act shall be construed to limit the authority of committees of Congress to request and receive such information in such form as they may desire in consideration of and action upon budget estimates.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I am sure that amendment could be offered by the gentleman. But I believe the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] made it very clear there could be no question as to that right existing. However, if the gentleman wishes to offer his amendment in the Committee of the Whole, I certainly would have no objection to it, because we want to make this bill as strong and as good as we can. I am just as anxious to protect every right of the Committee on Appropriations, and every right of each individual Member of Congress, to be completely informed on all appropriation matters as he.

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I yield.

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. Does the gentleman think it is the fundamental function of the Congress or does he think that it is the fundamental function of the President to determine the details of the budget? This bill gives that authority to the President.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. To answer the gentleman very plainly, under the law it is the duty and responsibility of the President to submit a budget, but it is the responsibility and duty of the Congress, under the Constitution, to determine whether appropriations shall be made in line with, or contrary to, that budget.

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. The gentelman from Ohio did not quite understand me. As to the form and detail of the budget this bill gives all that authority to the President.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Well, someone has to set up the structure of the budget itself, as to the form and detail, under the direction of the Congress. I do not believe the Committee on Appropriations or the Congress has ever set up the form and detail of the budget itself in the past, or that it could do it in the future. Therefore the Bureau of the Budget, working under the direction of the President, has to do it. There has to be some agency, some administrative individual to do such spade work. But the Congress itself continuously keeps control over what is appropriated under the budget.

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I yield.

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. I notice on page 7, under Government Statistical Activities, that:

> The President, through the Director of the Bureau of the Budget, is authorized and directed to develop programs and to issue regulations and orders for the improved gathering, compiling, analyzing, publishing, and disseminating of statistical information for any purpose by the various agencies in the executive branch of the Government.

Should that not also be subject to the action of the Congress?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I presume it will be. I believe the Congress directs what shall be done and gives that authority. But granting authority to the President is generally an order in effect.

Again, let me say, the Congress is not an administrative agency, but the executive branch is designated to carry out the will and instructions of Congress.

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. It is a very important field which the Appropriations Committee is continually getting into. This gives me the impression that it is being taken out of the hands of the committee.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I say, again, the Appropriations Committee can and will control that, absolutely.

May I also say, in conclusion, that I feel this measure is a long step in the right direction. It is more than a step. It puts into effect somewhere between 80 and 90 percent of the recommendations of the Hoover Commission on these matters. I want to be very frank with the House in saying that this is a much better bill, and goes much further in carrying out the recommendations of the Hoover Commission in this particular field of activity, than I thought we would be able to bring before this Congress, so I hope we will pass the bill.

This measure is designed to give us a better budget and a better accounting system. It is designed to decentralize some of the accounting, and to give an opportunity to the Congress to be better informed upon the cost of government and what we are appropriating for when we pass upon an appropriation bill. It is designed to bring greater governmental economy and efficiency, if it is properly administered.

If there has ever been a time in the history of this country when we should make every attempt to obtain greater economy and efficiency in the conduct of public business, it is right now. Any step we can take, any legislation we can enact, which will help reduce the cost of government, especially on the home front, at this time, when we are straining the resources of the Nation to meet the needs of national defense, is one which should be taken. Certainly the time is at hand when this Congress should follow, and follow closely the policy the gentleman from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH] and myself, and some of the others on the Rules Committee, announced many months ago, that we would refuse to vote for or favor any bill which would establish any new governmental project, activity, or agency, not of absolute necessity to the security of this Nation, and which would require any increase in or new Government expenditure, so long as we had to borrow the money to meet such an expenditure.

So I hope this legislation will result in the submission of a better budget; that the passage of this bill will result in a better accounting system; that we will all be better informed—not just the Appropriations Committee alone, but every Member of Congress—so we may be able to find and weed out any waste or extravagance which may exist in any budget. We must have a complete overall picture as to what Government activities are actually costing, we must be in better position to judge their value and decide how the public money should be spent on that particular activity in the best and most economical way.

I am hoping that as a result of the passage of this legislation, through the watchfulness of the Appropriations Committee, and through our own efforts, we may have much better control over future public spending, and that we may be able to reduce the cost of government, at least on the home front. Certainly we should be able to reduce many, many of the expenditures we are now making on the domestic or civilian activities of our Federal Government.

Let me point out we are now spending approximately $5,000,000,000 more on the operation of the civilian affairs of the Federal Government each year than were appropriated by the Republican Eightieth Congress 2 years ago. The Nation had pretty good government services then, from the various departmental agencies. There were no great complaints that any essential service had been destroyed or disrupted. Certainly we can find a good deal of the money we need to meet this increased cost of our new national defense effort by reducing or eliminating the waste, the extravagance, and the unnecessary expenditures which have existed in recent months and years in the operation of the civilian features of the Federal Government.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. KARSTEN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 9038) to authorize the President to determine the form of the national budget and of departmental estimates, to modernize and simplify governmental accounting and auditing methods and procedures, and for other purposes.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 9038) modernizing and simplifying governmental accounting and auditing methods and procedures, with Mr. ENGLE of California in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

By unanimous consent the first reading of the bill was dispensed with.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. KARSTEN] will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HOFFMAN] for 30 minutes.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HARVEY] will control the time on this side.

Mr. KARSTEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. HOLIFIELD].

Mr. HOLIFIELD. Mr. Chairman, the bill H. R. 9038, the Budget and Accounting Procedures Act of 1950, is a technical measure. I am sure some of the technical details will be ably presented by other members of the committee, but I hope that these details will not obscure the paramount importance of the measure as a whole.

The bill was introduced by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. KARSTEN], chairman of the Public Accounts Subcommittee of the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments. The gentleman from Missouri has for a long time been familiar with Government accounting from the congressional standpoint; for, as you know, before he became a Member of Congress he has connected with the Committee on Accounts for many years under the leadership of our beloved late Member from Missouri, Mr. John Cochran.

The bill is identical, with the exception of amendments recommended by the committee, to a bill introduced by 11 of the 13 members of the Senate Expenditures Committee and recently reported out unanimously by that committee. It has been called by our agent, Comptroller General Lindsay Warren, the most forward-looking and important measure in its field since the Budget and Accounting Act of 1921.

The provisions of this bill grow out of the experience of the last 29 years in budgeting and accounting in the Government. They embody the principles and objectives of the joint program which has been carried on for the past 3 years by the Comptroller General, the Secretary of the Treasury, and the Director of the Bureau of the Budget to improve the Government's accounting. This program is a splendid example of cooperation between the executive and the legislative branches toward the common goal of better accounting and financial reporting in the Federal Government. All three of these officials appeared at the hearings on H. R. 9038 and strongly endorsed the bill. The bill specifically declares the policy of Congress that the three officials continue this program which they have already instituted.

The great need for this legislation is underscored just at this time in view of the large sums which the Congress is going to be called on to authorize for expenditure for national defense. We do not want to repeat the mistakes in the past caused by lack of proper controls over the expenditure of the public funds. With the budgetary improvements and accounting systems contemplated by this bill, much better machinery will be available for keeping the Congress advised of what the money is being spent for and to aid detection of improper disbursements. There is also a great need for the simplification of accounting procedures contemplated by this bill. While all the improvements contemplated by the bill cannot be accomplished overnight, the bill provides the necessary legislative basis for instituting those improvements.

The bill incorporates all of the recommendations of the Hoover Commission report on budgeting and accounting with a single exception, that for the appointment of an Accountant General in the executive branch with authority over the prescribing of accounting systems and the supervising of accounting operations. That recommendation is contrary to a consistent congressional policy that the Comptroller General, as the agent of the Congress, prescribe accounting requirements for the executive agencies so that appropriate audits may be made of the agencies and that the Congress may exercise control over appropriations and expenditures.

We knew because that had been attempted before. In 1932 and in 1937, I believe, such a proposal was attempted legislatively and was turned down by the Congress. We members of the committee knew that the Congress would not relinquish this arm of the Congress, and the Comptroller General is the arm of the Congress, the watchdog of the Congress on expenditures in the executive departments. Therefore we did not include that one provision in this bill. We knew we could not pass it if we did include it in the bill because 90 percent of Congress, and I believe 100 percent of the members of the Committee on Expenditures, would have voted against that one thing.

Therefore, the committee has rejected this recommendation just as similar recommendations have been rejected on numerous occasions in the past by the Congress. The bill does provide a complete framework of responsibility and authority for development of accounting systems in each executive agency and a system of central accounting and reporting in the Treasury Department, all under principles and standards laid down by the Comptroller General to insure proper financial information and control for the agency heads, the President, and the Congress in fulfilling their respective responsibilities.

The whole reorganization program will be implemented by the adoption of this legislation. It is basic to all of the improvements for which we are striving in the management of the executive branch. It will provide a solid foundation for the best attainable budgeting, accounting, financial reporting, and auditing for the Federal Government, all in proper relationship. It will do all of this without weakening any essential controls by the Congress over the public funds.

Again I wish to stress the fact that Mr. Lindsay Warren, our present Comptroller General and a former Member of this body, Mr. Snyder, the Secretary of the Treasury, and Mr. Fred Lawton, the Director of the Bureau of the Budget, have given their wholehearted approval of this bill.

The bill was drawn jointly by these three agencies of Government which have to do most exclusively with the budgeting of accounts. I trust the House will pass this important legislation unanimously.

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. The gentleman has laid a great deal of emphasis on the fact that the budget forms are to be determined by the Comptroller General. My interpretation of the bill does not support that. The Comptroller General is the agent of the Congress.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. I believe section 103 of the bill provides the point I was making, that the budgeting and accounting procedures of the different executive branches shall be prescribed by the Comptroller General.

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. That is not the point I am making. The point I am making, so that the gentleman from California will understand, he thinks and he is saying that the Comptroller General is the one who will determine the form of the budget, but the wording of the bill we are acting upon says that it is the President, and that means the Bureau of the Budget. Under this bill that we are acting upon today, the form of the budget that comes to us could be completely changed, not by the Comptroller who is our agent, but by the President of the United States acting through the Director of the Budget, who is his agent. I question whether the Committee in bringing it out intended to put the power, not of making the budget, but in determining the form of the budget, in the hands not of the Congress, but in the President of the United States.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. I was mistaken in the section I referred to. I meant to refer to section 112 on page 10, where it says:

> The Comptroller General of the United States, after consulting the Secretary of the Treasury and the Director of the Bureau of the Budget concerning their accounting, financial reporting, and budgetary needs, and considering the needs of the other executive agencies, shall prescribe the principles, standards, and related requirements for accounting——

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. May I interrupt the gentleman briefly just to say that that power the Comptroller already has, and that is merely in order to provide a uniform accounting system between the various agencies of government, something we never had up to about three and a half years ago.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. But the Comptroller General at the present time, if I am not mistaken, has been doing this as a matter of voluntary agreement between the three branches.

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. No, he has it by authority and by instructions given him through the Committee on Appropriations. This bill does not have to be passed in order to give him authority, except to have it in writing, perhaps. That is in existence today.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. As appropriation language?

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. Yes.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. Well, there are several things in the bill, I might say, that have been taken from appropriation acts and are now made into basic law.

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. To pursue the point further, section 112, which the gentleman read to me, is antagonistic to section 103 and to section 201, which is the second part of section 102, which says that the President, the Director of the Budget, shall do these things. The gentleman is interpreting the last two to mean that the Comptroller shall do it but I contend that section 112 refers to a different subject matter.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. Section 103 that the gentleman refers to, in my opinion, is an authorization for the President through the Bureau of the Budget to develop programs and to issue regulations and orders for the improved gathering, compiling, analyzing, publishing, and dissemination of statistical information for any purpose for various agencies in the executive branch of the Government.

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. That is the basis upon which the budget is made. The gathering of those statistics begins in August of each year and extends through until the presentation of the Presidential budget on the first Wednesday in January. This bill gives the President and the Director of the Budget, the authority to determine the form in which those facts shall be gathered and presented.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. That is the preliminary gathering of information.

Mr. PHILLIFS of California. That is the same as is going on now, except this bill gives authority now not to the Congress, where I hold it should rest, but to the President through the Bureau of the Budget.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. I think the President has that power now in the Bureau of the Budget. The Bureau of the Budget is the arm of the President, and he certainly has the power to issue rules and regulations for the administration of the function of the Bureau of the Budget. So there is no change there that I can see.

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. There is this change, to the extent that this increases the power, and now it may be done by the Bureau of the Budget more or less in a routine way. Now it is definitely placed in this bill in the hands of the Bureau of the Budget and taken out of the hands of the Congress and out of the hands of the Comptroller General.

Mr. HARVEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. HARVEY. It might be illuminating, and I approach this with hesitancy because of the great knowledge I know both gentlemen from California have in this field, but I would say in nailing down effectively the authority of the Comptroller General to defining the accounting procedures of every department, that all these costs and estimates and statistics must come from those figures. So that when you start with the base of a uniform accounting system prescribed by the Comptroller General, all statistics and information must be developed from that initial information.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California has expired.

Mr. HARVEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. PHILLIPS].

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. Mr. Chairman, I have asked for this time to continue the discussion which the gentleman from California and the gentleman from Indiana were carrying on. If the gentleman from Indiana is correct in his statement, which would be an entirely satisfactory statement to me as a budget maker for perhaps 30 years, just why are the other sections in this bill at all? Why was it necessary to put what I call antagonistic sections in the bill, if the objective was the one which the gentleman from Indiana has just discussed?

I also call attention to what may have been overlooked in the committee; it may have been entirely harmless in intent. Section 202 on page 19, line 13, recites that the balance of any money remaining in the appropriation of an agency or a section of an agency, if the establishment or section is transferred, may, with the approval of the President, be transferred to the receiving agency.

I point out, Mr. Chairman, that in the past we have been rather careful, where money is left over in any budget, that it should come back and go through the Appropriations Committee again. We are the only control the people have over the expenditure of money.

I think that was a power given the Bureau of the Budget which the committee may not have intended to give. You see, Mr. Chairman, this is a practical matter with us who work on the Appropriations Committee. Analyzing a budget is a difficult matter at best when it gets into billions of dollars. This year for the first time we operated under a budget which, in some of the agencies, approached the budget which is contemplated in this bill. I say without any hesitation that we had more difficulty this year in getting detailed information regarding the budget items than I have had in the preceding 3 years I have been on the committee. I think that should be taken into consideration. We had to send deliberately in many instances for information which this bill automatically leaves out of the budget. In addition, we had to ask the agencies for information which they themselves felt under this type of budget was no longer necessary. We may not be getting a simplified budget in this new bill; we may be getting a budget in which it is more difficult to trace the money and more difficult to protect the taxpayer.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. First, I should like to address myself to the point of the so-called green sheets to which the gentleman refers. We realize that the Appropriations Committee has had trouble during the last year and a half on that. Because of the advice of the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] before the Rules Committee, and in conference with the members of our committee, we do have an amendment which we will offer which will remove that difficulty you have had the last year and a half and restore it to its previous condition when the green sheets were available. We think we have covered that.

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. I am glad to hear that. That would remove that part of my objection.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. If the gentleman will now let me speak on his reference to section 202, under the Presidential reorganization plans that have been sent up to us, and more will possibly be coming in in the future, there has been a reorganization of agencies and shifting of them from one executive department to another. I recall as an example the shifting of Public Roads from the old Public Works Agency to the General Services Administration, and then the shifting of it into Commerce. This section provides that where such a function or activity is transferred or assigned from one agency within a department or establishment to another agency the balance of the appropriations will be transferred along with it. But it goes on to say in lines 19 and 20 that "said function or activity is transferred or assigned for any purpose for which the said funds were originally available."

So it does not change the use of the funds. It retains the use of the funds for the original purpose, but it merely takes care of the housekeeping point of transferring it so as to be available to the agency or the new department.

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. I respect that statement and agree with it so far as it goes, but the gentleman does not understand that we deal in big figures, and very often in lump figures.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California has expired.

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. I will discuss this later.

Mr. KARSTEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 10 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, in presenting this bill to the House I have in mind the Hoover Commission report on budgeting and accounting, in which it is pointed out to the Congress that the present governmental accounting, auditing, and budgeting methods controlled by the Budget and Accounting Act of 1921 are cumbersome, uninformative, and outmoded. More important, however, these old methods do not provide the Government, nor the taxpayer, with accurate and complete information as to revenue received and expenditures made by the Government. There is a great need for simplification and modernization.

The provisions of this measure call for the same philosophy enunciated in the Hoover Commission report on budgeting and accounting. The bill is designed to accomplish practically all of the major objectives and recommendations made by the Hoover Commission with the exception of establishing the post of an Accountant General under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of the Treasury.

Proposals to establish an Accountant General have been before the House in the past. As I recall, the last bill on this subject was in 1938. It was overwhelmingly defeated, and for very good reasons.

Historically, Congress has control of the purse strings of the Nation. As a necessary adjunct to that power, we have a Comptroller General who is an agent of the Congress to audit the accounts of the executive branch of the Government. He determines the legality of expenditures and the proper application of funds appropriated by the Congress. In fact, he is a definite part of the legislative branch of the Government.

To establish an Accountant General under the Secretary of the Treasury and superimpose him upon the Comptroller General would seriously weaken the control of Congress over appropriated funds. An Accountant General would be responsible only to the President. Congress would lose control over the Nation's purse and surrender it to the executive branch of the Government.

Because this historical legislative jurisdiction of the Congress would be seriously impaired by virtue of creating an Accountant General in the Treasury Department, this recommendation of the Hoover Commission is not included in the legislation.

For over 2 years the Comptroller General, the Secretary of the Treasury, and the Director of the Bureau of the Budget have engaged in a voluntary joint accounting program to improve and modernize Federal fiscal operations. I mention this because it is the first time in history that the three major fiscal agencies of our Government have voluntarily joined in a common effort, drawing on the technical resources of their respective agencies, to make accounting, financial reporting, budgeting, and auditing the greatest value to the Government and the taxpayer.

Under this program all have agreed that current accounting and financial reporting are proper functions of the executive branch and accounting systems should be in recognition of this principle. Auditing, independent of the executive branch, is a function of the legislative branch of the Government through the Comptroller General. Properly designed accounting systems are a vital factor to the effectiveness of independent auditing, and accounting systems should be developed as a cooperative undertaking to meet the needs and responsibilities of both the executive and legislative branches of the Government.

The bill we have before us implements by legislation the voluntary joint program which I have described. It embodies all the fundamental fiscal requirements which the General Accounting Office, the Treasury Department, and the Bureau of the Budget have agreed upon as being necessary and essential to effectuate their common goal for improving governmental budgeting, accounting, and auditing methods.

As urged by the Hoover Commission the bill provides a complete framework for bringing the budgeting, accounting, and auditing procedures of the Government up to date. It will set up a fiscal system patterned after sound commercial practices and I believe it will provide much better control over all Federal funds.

The bill contains three titles. Title I on budgeting and accounting is divided into two parts. The first, on budgeting, clarifies the Budget and Accounting Act to emphasize authority for modernization and simplification of budget procedures. It is patterned after sound commercial practices and supplements existing authority for presenting financial information in terms of functions and activities of the Government. Technical amendments to the Budget and Accounting Act are made to develop budgetary information in the manner best suited to present the financial program of the Government.

Increased emphasis is placed on the development by the President through the Bureau of the Budget of plans for better organization, coordination, and management of the executive branch. The paragraphs on statistical activities will provide better coordination in the gathering, compiling, analysis, and publication of statistical information by the executive branch. This supplements existing authority relating to these matters.

Part 2 of title I comprises a complete Accounting and Auditing Act of 1950. It embodies, as I have stated previously, the principles and objectives of the cooperative program which is being conducted under the leadership of the Comptroller General, the Secretary of the Treasury, and the Director of the Bureau of the Budget to improve the Government's accounting, financial reporting, and auditing. The provisions of this part will also facilitate the attainment of budgetary improvements provided for elsewhere in the bill. It spells out clear-cut responsibilities and duties while at the same time providing for their exercise in proper relationship and cooperation toward the common goal of making accounting, financial reporting, budgeting, and auditing of the greatest value.

The careful allocation of responsibilities is designed to produce an integrated accounting system for the Government as a whole. Emphasis is placed on the development and use of agency accounting systems as the foundation for financial control and the production of necessary financial information. Provision is made for progressive improvement and simplification of present accounting systems. A specific basis is laid for more comprehensive and selective performance of the independent audit by the General Accounting Office to the fullest extent practicable at the site of operations. The legislation will provide flexibility that is urgently needed for putting into effect more economical and efficient accounting and auditing procedures in order to obtain maximum benefits from work now going forward under the joint accounting program and lays a solid foundation for carrying out the policies and objectives of the program.

Title II provides that requests for legislation involving authorization for appropriations shall have prior approval of the head of the department or establishment concerned before such request is transmitted to the Bureau of the Budget, to the President, or to the Congress.

Title III repeals over a hundred acts or parts of acts relating mainly to the compilation of the estimates and the furnishing of certain financial data, most of which have been superseded or rendered outmoded by other existing provisions of law. The Budget and Accounting Act of 1921 superseded practically all of these proposed repeal provisions.

The Comptroller General in the hearings before the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments enthusiastically urged passage of the bill. He said that the traditional control of Congress over appropriated funds is not only maintained but is actually strengthened by the measure. I am sure that every Member of the House respects the opinion of Lindsay Warren in these matters.

The bill also has the unqualified support of the Secretary of the Treasury and the Director of the Bureau of the Budget, both of whom attended the hearings. In addition, it has the endorsement of eminent accountants who have knowledge of the Government's fiscal problems.

I would like to call attention to three committee amendments to the bill which prohibit (1) authority to adjust and transfer funds between appropriations within a department during the transitional period of conversion to the new accounting methods contemplated by this measure; (2) the 5 percent interchangeability clause affecting transfers between appropriations within a department for the purposes of economy and efficiency; (3) the authority of the President to establish reserves from appropriations when he determines that purposes intended by the Congress will be accomplished by the expenditure of amounts less than the amounts appropriated.

The committee concluded that these three provisions should be omitted from the bill and left to the Congress for consideration when annual appropriations are provided for the departments and agencies. No attempt should be made to enact these provisions into permanent legislation. They have always been peculiar to the annual appropriation acts and should be continued on that basis. For these reasons the committee adopted the three amendments to the bill. These amendments strengthen the bill and I believe are a great improvement.

Some opposition to a few provisions of the first title of the bill on budget procedures has been voiced by Members of the Committee on Appropriations. This opposition has been based largely on a fear that the Appropriations Committee might be deprived of certain information relative to salaries paid Federal personnel. In the past it has been customary to submit with the budget, statistical detailed information showing justifications for Federal salaries which has been known as "green sheets." I have no desire to deprive the Congress of any information it is entitled to receive and I intend to propose an amendment which will provide that this statistical information must be furnished along with the budget in order that it will be available to members of the Appropriations Committee.

I am also going to offer some other minor amendments to the budget section of the bill which have been suggested by members of the Appropriations Committee. I have the assurance of the Bureau of the Budget as well as the Secretary of the Treasury and the Comptroller General that these minor amendments will not in any way impair the purpose and objectives of the bill, and I believe the few changes I am suggesting will meet the objections that might otherwise be raised. I hope these minor amendments will be adopted.

This legislation is tremendously important to the three fiscal agencies of our Government in aiding them to take positive action in modernizing and simplifying Federal fiscal requirements.

Not only do I urge passage of the bill because its enactment is of the utmost importance to the progress the agencies will achieve in discharging their respective obligations and duties, but I earnestly urge passage of the bill because I believe that it will provide a solid basis for furnishing the Congress and the President the information and means of control they need for the efficient management of our enormous Federal fiscal structure. Just as important, however, if not more so, it will provide the taxpayers with full disclosure of the financial operations of the Government.

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KARSTEN. I yield.

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. Looking at the committee report and the present law and the proposed changes in that law, I notice that under section 201 (e) of the present law——

Mr. KARSTEN. Are you talking about the bill now?

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. Of the present law. That apparently is to be deleted.

Mr. KARSTEN. I suppose the gentleman is reading from the report.

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. That section of the present law reads as follows:

> The amount of annual permanent and other appropriations including balance of appropriations from prior fiscal years available for expenditure during the fiscal year in progress as of November 1 of such year.

Mr. KARSTEN. That is amounts which have already been obligated; is that what the gentleman is talking about?

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. No; I am talking primarily about annual and permanent appropriations, the necessity for reporting which to the Congress would seem at first glance to be deleted by the striking of that paragraph from existing law.

Mr. KARSTEN. The balances the gentleman speaks of are obligated balances.

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. No; these are permanent appropriations that go on year after year subject to modification by the Congress.

Mr. KARSTEN. I may say to the gentleman that the President in submitting his annual report is required to submit requests for these appropriations in the budget. They will be in the budget and are covered by sections E, G, and H of the bill. Under these provisions full information with respect to existing and proposed appropriations will be shown for the budget year, for the year in progress, and for the fiscal year last completed.

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. What I want to get a very clear understanding on is that the gentleman as chairman of the subcommittee feels that there is no intention to relieve the President of reporting those annual and permanent appropriations in the future just as he has in the past.

Mr. KARSTEN. No; it would be incumbent upon him to do so under the provisions of the bill.

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. Now I wish to ask the gentleman a similar question in respect to section 204 (b) of the present law which provides that—

> Estimates for lump-sum appropriations shall be accompanied by statements showing in detail the manner of expenditure—

And so forth.

Mr. KARSTEN. This information will be furnished as it has in the past. I am going to offer an amendment which will provide for this. I have discussed the matter with members of the Committee on Appropriations and it is at their suggestion I am proposing the amendment.

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. There is no intention on the part of the committee to relieve anybody of the responsibility of making the report.

Mr. KARSTEN. The Appropriations Committee has to analyze these requests. It is the desire of the Committee on Expenditures to see that members of the Appropriations Committee have full information in order that they can intelligently analyze these requests for appropriations. That is fundamental. I believe the members of the Executive Expenditures Committee see eye to eye with the members of the Appropriations Committee on this matter.

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. I merely wanted to get both those points clear in the RECORD.

Mr. HARVEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER].

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I have been over the budget features of this bill as carefully as I have been able to in the time I have had. I have felt that there should be certain amendments and have taken them up with the committee and with the Rules Committee.

I wish to ask the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. KARSTEN] at this time if the committee has adopted and instructed the gentleman to offer as committee amendments the several amendments that he and I talked over.

Mr. KARSTEN. I cannot speak for other members of the committee, but I have the assurance that they will agree to the amendments that we discussed up in the Rules Committee.

Mr. TABER. And the gentleman intends to offer them.

Mr. KARSTEN. Yes; I intend to offer them.

Mr. TABER. I would think that this bill with the four amendments that the gentleman from Missouri told us he intended to offer, eliminating certain provisions of the bill, would make the bill an improvement over present law. Those amendments would do away with the requirement that it be a performance budget. It would also require the green sheets to be furnished. With that we can count upon a budget which would give the Appropriations Committee an opportunity to find out what it needs, with reference to the things that will come before it. I think I can see no objection to the bill.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. CANNON. I desire to join in congratulating the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. KARSTEN] on the care and effectiveness with which this bill has been prepared. The bill fills a long-felt need. May I also express appreciation of the consideration shown the Committee on Appropriations in formulating the bill and the opportunity afforded the committee to study the subject and collaborate with him in drafting the measure? It modifies a number of defects in the law which have long needed attention and is one of the best pieces of legislation introduced during this session of the Congress.

Mr. TABER. I thank the gentleman. I do not think I have anything more to say except that the members of the committee have been most cooperative in trying to arrive at a bill which would accomplish what we need. I am assured by the Comptroller General, and I think I ought to say this, that he expects as a result of the accounting provisions that are placed in here to be able to give the Appropriations Committee more detailed information as to the operations and spendings of the various bureaus and agencies than we have ever had before from the Budget or from the departments, and that he will be able to keep up to date with his audit, something that has been absolutely impossible under the old method of procedure. I hope that these things will result in great improvement and in savings.

Mr. HARVEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. REES].

Mr. REES. Mr. Chairman, I want to commend the members of the committee in charge of this legislation for their diligence and their efforts in bringing this measure, to provide a Budgeting and Accounting Procedures Act, to the House for its approval.

I am glad to be advised that the measure has at least 90 percent of the recommendations of the Hoover Commission.

I am particularly interested in being assured that this legislation has the approval of the Comptroller General, Mr. Lindsay Warren. The Comptroller General is the official who will have, more than anyone else, to do with carrying out the intent and purpose of this proposed legislation. Lindsay Warren commands the respect and confidence of the Membership on both sides of the aisle. I feel that so long as Lindsay Warren is in charge of the Comptroller General's Office and is permitted to exercise the authority that we expect to be granted in this bill, we will have better conditions in respect to accounting and budgeting in our Government.

Mr. KARSTEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REES. I yield to the distinguished chairman of the subcommittee in charge of this measure, the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. KARSTEN. The bill has the unqualified support of the Attorney General. He enthusiastically urged the committee to pass it because he said it will provide him with the tools and implements he needs to carry out this program. That appears on page 17 of the report.

Mr. REES. I thank the gentleman for his statement. I am glad to know also that it has the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Snyder. It is good to observe that it has the approval of the committee on both sides of the aisle, and I am especially gratified to know that the very hardworking gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER], approves the bill provided certain amendments he has suggested are adopted. I know of his deep concern in securing improved budget and accounting procedures in our Government. I hope the approval of this legislation will bring about more efficiency and more economy than we have had in the past. I believe that if the intent and purpose of this legislation is carried out, we can have some degree of economy and efficiency.

The House Committee on Post Office and Civil Service, of which I have the honor to be a member, has shown a deep interest in legislation that would bring about more efficiency and the cutting out of a lot of duplication and multiplication of effort now being carried on in Government.

Mr. H. CARL ANDERSEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REES. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota, who is also a member of the Committee on Appropriations, who has given a great deal of attention to the problems involved in this legislation, and who has been outstanding in his demand for economy in Government expenditures.

Mr. H. CARL ANDERSEN. While the gentleman from Kansas is on the floor, I want to compliment him for the efforts he made the other day in preventing the construction of a $15,000,000 building which was entirely unnecessary at this time.

Mr. REES. That, of course, is separate legislation. I thank the gentleman for his comment. I should add the gentleman was also active in support of my efforts.

Mr. JENSEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REES. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa, who is also one of the hardworking and effective members of the Appropriations Committee of the House.

Mr. JENSEN. I do want to say to the gentleman that the reason it appears that most all of us members of the Committee on Appropriations are for this bill is for the simple reason that we are quite sure that it cannot make matters worse than they are now in the Accounting Office and the way the budget is presented to the Committee on Appropriations. We certainly feel that there is no way this thing can go after this bill becomes law than the good way, because it is just as bad now as it possibly can be.

Mr. REES. I trust that the approval of this legislation by the Congress will bring about a little more efficiency and economy that is so much needed in our Government, especially at this time.

Mr. JENSEN. We hope it will.

Mr. REES. And I know about the concern of the gentleman from Iowa with this problem as an active member of the committee, and he has made a great contribution to Congress and to the country.

At this crucial hour and in view of the impending crisis, this Congress ought to reappraise and reexamine its expenditures and authorizations with a view of cutting out all unnecessary nondefense charges against our Government, I believe as much as $5,000,000,000 could be saved from expenditures already appropriated and authorized if we could get the nondefense agencies to cooperate. It ought to be done now.

Mr. HARVEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. SCRIVNER].

Mr. SCRIVNER. Mr. Chairman, I take this time to ask some questions to see if I can get some information. I agree with the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. JENSEN] that all we can do is hope that this will make the situation better. I was glad to have Mr. TABER'S reassurance that this measure may help. But, in looking over the bill and the report I would like to ask someone to tell us where this new legislation is going to bring economy in Government, where it is going to bring us greater efficiency, and how it will solve a practical situation with which the members of the Committee on Appropriations are faced.

For instance, coming in as agency heads do, with a lump-sum figure, we ask some details about "What are you going to use that money for?" They break down a list of items and say, "We will spend it for this, we will spend it for that, and we will spend it for this other." The next year when they come back in they have more requests, and lo and behold we find the same items, and we say, "Well, gentlemen, that is what you said you were going to spend the money for last year. What did you spend it for?" "Well, we spent it for something else." Is there anything in this bill that will prevent anything like that happening?

Mr. KARSTEN. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will yield, I think very definitely this bill will help correct the situation that the gentleman mentioned.

Mr. SCRIVNER. Then we find another situation arising. For instance, in the 1949 appropriations we granted a certain sum of money for a certain activity. All of that money was not used. With some of remainder they started an entirely new activity about which they said nothing when they previously appeared before the committee. Now, is there anything in this bill that will stop that?

Mr. HOLIFIELD. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will yield, we have tried to correct that situation, and in section 202, on page 19, we say:

> When under authority of law a function or an activity is transferred or assigned from one agency within any department or establishment to another agency in the same department or establishment, the balance of appropriations which are determined by the head of such department or establishment to be available and necessary to finance or discharge the functions or activities so transferred or assigned may, with the approval of the President, be transferred to, and be available for use by, the agency to which said function or activity is transferred or assigned for any purpose for which said funds were originally available.

Mr. SCRIVNER. That will not correct the situation about which I have been talking. This section has nothing to do with that, for transfer is not involved. For instance, we can take an activity in any one of the departments. Maybe they have asked for $100,000. They use only $75,000 for that activity, so they have $25,000 left, and they start something entirely new, about which nothing has been said to the Appropriations Committee or the legislative committee, yet under the general power they claim the right to do it.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. That is illegal under present basic law, if I am not mistaken, and we affirmatively say here that the transfer and use of the funds shall be for the purpose originally intended.

Mr. SCRIVNER. There is no transfer involved in this. They just have the money left, they did not spend it all, so they start something new. Then they come to us and say, "We have to have $25,000 more this year because this program has already been started, it is already under way."

Mr. HOLIFIELD. I am under the impression that there is a basic law in regard to the expenditure of funds for the purpose which Congress intends.

Mr. SCRIVNER. But they do it. I trust this bill will stop that practice.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. Certainly we are not changing the basic law. The Comptroller General has the authority to disallow such expenditures.

Mr. KARSTEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BONNER].

Mr. BONNER. Mr. Chairman, for 20 or 30 years there has been discussion whether the function of prescribing accounting systems of the Government should be in the executive or legislative branch. The framers of the Budget and Accounting Act of 1921 placed this function, though not on a complete basis, with the Comptroller General of the United States, an agent of the Congress. This gave him a positive means of seeing that the accounting machinery provided an effective basis of control over the expenditure of public funds. Repeated attempts were made to shift this function from the legislative to the executive branch on the ground that accounting was an essential tool of management. These were vigorously resisted and defeated by the Congress on every occasion as an unwholesome encroachment on congressional control of the public funds.

There is no question that the development of accounting in the Government, from the standpoint of usefulness to management, has lagged. This is attributable at least in part to the fact that in arguing about where the functions should be performed not enough time and energy was devoted to getting together and getting the accounting job done properly from all viewpoints involved. There should be no question in anybody's mind that accounting needs to be developed and established in the Government both from the standpoint of being a useful tool to good management and to provide a sound structure for control of the public funds and full disclosure of the results of operations—in individual agencies and for the Government as a whole.

About 3 years ago the Comptroller General, representing the legislative branch, and the Secretary of the Treasury and the Director of the Bureau of the Budget, representing the executive branch, got together and organized a joint program to improve accounting throughout the Government. This program recognized the multiple purposes accounting must serve and was dedicated to the idea that legislative and executive functions in connection therewith had to be performed in proper relation. Notable progress has been made as a result of the cooperative work done under that program. Reports of that progress were filed in the hearings on this measure. The present bill recognizes the need for placement of responsibility in the executive branch for the establishment and maintenance of adequate accounting systems. At the same time it retains in the Comptroller General authority to prescribe the basic accounting requirements. It thus maintains in an agency of the Congress the means for making the accounting structure of the Government serve as a basis for effective control over the funds which Congress provides and as a means for seeing to it that the wishes of the Congress are carried out and that there will be full disclosure of the uses of public funds. The allocation of functions between the Comptroller General, the individual executive agencies and the central fiscal agencies in the executive branch is the result of actual experience and extensive work under the joint accounting program.

The Comptroller General is given the authority and responsibility by this bill for prescribing basic principles and standards to be observed by the executive agencies in connection with their accounting systems, after considering their needs. The Comptroller General's requirements will provide a basic framework for the Government's over-all accounting. They will, however, enable the individual agencies to develop their detailed accounting procedures so that they will most effectively serve their management needs and be adapted to the particular kind of operations for which they are responsible. It is obvious that these two sets of responsibilities must be exercised in proper relation to each other. In recognition of this the bill provides that the Comptroller General shall cooperate with the executive agencies in the development of their accounting systems. When agency accounting systems comply with the Comptroller General's basic requirements, they will be approved by him. Systems in operation will be reviewed by the Comptroller General, and the results of such reviews will be made available to agency heads, the Secretary of the Treasury, the Director of the Budget, and the Congress.

Effective provision is also made for tying in accounting in each executive agency with the central requirements of the executive branch. The Comptroller General, in prescribing principles and standards and related requirements, is required to consult with the Secretary of the Treasury and the Director of the Bureau of the Budget. Likewise, such basic requirements must provide for suitable integration between agency and Treasury accounting. Also, the Comptroller General is required to cooperate with the Treasury in the setting up of the Treasury's system of central accounting and reporting. In these ways the bill recognizes the need, not sufficiently satisfied under present conditions, for accounting in all agencies to form part of an integrated pattern which will make it possible for the Treasury Department to readily prepare over-all statements on the financial operations and condition of the Government.

These provisions represent an extension of the principles of the Federal Property Act of 1949. The Comptroller General is directed to continue to exercise the authority given him by that act with respect to property accounting, and, to the extent he deems necessary, the authority he has under section 309 of the Budget and Accounting Act of 1921 over appropriation and fund accounting. Any such exercise of authority is to be consistent with the pattern laid out in this bill, of consultation with the other central fiscal agencies, and consideration of the needs of all the executive agencies. The Comptroller General will thus be able to exercise all this authority over accounting systems in terms of prescribing principles, standards, and basic requirements, and cooperative development of systems. He will not have to go down to the point of minor procedural details in those cases where the agencies assume their proper responsibility as outlined in the bill, but will be able to exercise a guiding hand over the general development of a sound accounting structure, in all its phases, for the entire Government.

Mr. Chairman, it is certainly very pleasing to both sides of this aisle, I am sure, and to me as a member of this committee, to see cooperation on the part of the leadership on the left side and the leadership on the right side in endeavoring to work out here a piece of legislation that will be satisfactory to all.

The chairman of the subcommittee that held the hearings on this bill was certainly fair in inviting and giving notice of the hearings to all who desired to appear before the committee and giving them ample time. There appeared before the committee the Secretary of the Treasury. The Budget was represented, as well as the Comptroller General. All were unanimous in their approval of the bill and in the fact that the bill was satisfactory to each department.

It so happens that on the Expenditures Committee there are very fine men who are the ranking members of the committee on both the Republican side and the Democratic side. After the hearings were completed and we went into executive session, three sections of the bill were questioned. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HOFFMAN], who is a diligent worker and a splendid member of the committee, expressed himself to the effect that if sections were deleted it would be perfectly satisfactory to him. The Bureau of the Budget had some question or objection to one section. So the committee deleted all three sections. Then, no one else desiring to appear before the committee and no one being in opposition to the proposed legislation, the bill was reported favorably.

After that it came to the attention of the committee that the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER], for whom this House has the highest regard and respect, had certain ideas about changes in the bill. So anxious was the chairman of the subcommittee to meet all objections and get a piece of legislation that would do the job and meet the objections of both the majority and minority that he agreed with the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] to insert certain amendments and to make certain changes in the bill, and particularly to provide the worksheets that come down from the various departments and the Budget.

I have noticed distinguished members of the Committee on Appropriations have taken active part on the floor in asking questions about the bill. That is a wholesome thing. I have watched the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. WIGGLESWORTH], whom I admire greatly, make his observations. Now that the bill is all clear, I want to say this, and it is the first time I have had the opportunity or taken the opportunity with reference to the kind remarks that are continuously made here about a very close friend of mine—a very dear friend of mine—a splendid public servant. Those remarks are most pleasing to me, coming from the type of men that they do on both sides of the aisle in the House of Representatives, men who are respected throughout the Nation.

The Comptroller General of the United States is a fine man; he is a great citizen; he is a great leader; he is a true American; and it is pleasing to me to hear the high compliments that are paid him on account of my association with him since boyhood and also by virtue of my working with him for 16 years and then succeeding him in the House.

Mr. Chairman, I had prepared a statement to deliver on this legislation, but after seeing the unanimous agreement that we have reached on both sides, I have come to the conclusion that the less said about the bill after agreement had been reached on it would be the best.

I am delighted to have had a part in working out the agreements that we have reached. I admire the manner in which the leading minority member of the Committee on Appropriations appeared before the Committee on Rules and expressed himself about the bill. As it now stands, it is my opinion that we will have a piece of legislation which will enable the Comptroller General and the other officials of the Government to make a clearer and more rapid report to the Congress of the expenditures of funds, and save the taxpayers of America many dollars.

Mr. HARVEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the remaining time.

Mr. Chairman, the budget and accounting processes of our Federal Government need an overhauling and I think this is an example of a job that has been long overdue. One of the most frequent criticisms I have heard, even long before coming to Congress, is with reference to the tremendous amount of red tape involved in the fiscal processes of our Government. I realize the Government of the United States has grown and that it is never going to be a simple process, but I do think it could be much more efficient and economical. We have had the example of the Hoover Commission giving a great deal of study to this particular program. H. R. 9038 does conform almost entirely, while not entirely, to the Hoover Commission recommendations. I quote from their statement:

The citizens committee—

Which was a committee set up to promote the enactment of the Hoover report—

The citizens committee does not want to oppose major reorganization measures which are only in partial accord with the Commission's recommendations or which differ in only one or two particulars.

And to further quote:

The task of the citizens committee is to analyze reorganization measures and to point out how they differ from the recommendations of the Hoover Commission.

Now listen to this carefully:

The major difference between the recommendations of the Hoover Commission and that of this bill is that this bill places the authority for the accounting procedures and auditing in the Office of the Comptroller General, an agent of the Congress, rather than in a new office which the Hoover Commission suggested be called the Accountant General to be placed in the Department of the Treasury.

The Congress has been, and I think rightly so, very zealous of the fact that the Office of the Comptroller General remain an arm of the Congress. Corroborating what my good friend the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BONNER] has said, Lindsay Warren, the present Comptroller General and former Member of this House, has been an excellent administrator. He has saved the country millions of dollars. Even more important, through advice to the various Federal agencies concerning proposed expenditures, he has carried out the intent of the Congress.

Without impugning the motives of either the author of the bill, because he has been very cooperative, or the chairman of the committee, I do feel that the bill was reported out with insufficient hearings. The bill was drafted, according to the testimony—at least the basic philosophy of the bill—by the Secretary of the Treasury Snyder, Budget Director Lawton, and Comptroller General Warren. They were the only witnesses who were called to testify upon the bill. It would seem to me that members of the Appropriations Committee who are so intimately concerned with this measure should have been notified and given an opportunity to present their views. Congress should not lightly consider legislation that will have far-reaching effects upon fiscal affairs. Many of the phases of this bill are noncontroversial, and I think the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. KARSTEN] is to be congratulated upon presenting the legislation. I want also to suggest that he has been very cooperative in accepting amendments.

Mr. BONNER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HARVEY. I yield.

Mr. BONNER. With respect to reporting the bill out, of course it happens I made the motion to report the bill out. I have the highest regard and respect for the gentleman from Indiana. So much so that he will remember once on a subcommittee, of which I am chairman, a controversy arose about a matter in his State, and, demonstrating my confidence in respect to the ability of the gentleman, instead of sending a three-man subcommittee to Indiana, I sent the gentleman, who is now speaking, to Indiana and told him to come back and whatever his decision was about the matter would be adopted by the committee. So I certainly tried to pay my highest respect and show my confidence in the gentleman.

The point I want to make, the three gentlemen you spoke of are the only ones who appeared to testify about this legislation before the committee. I asked the question whether or not anybody else wanted to testify, and there was no one else there. I took it for granted that the matter had been on the committee calendar that hearings would be held, and that if anybody was opposed to any portion of it they would certainly have expressed themselves. As soon as we found out that the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] had some views and observations about it and desired to change certain sections, we met his objections.

Mr. HARVEY. The gentleman interrupted me before I had an opportunity to complete my statement, because I intended to say that even in spite of this fact Mr. KARSTEN and the committee had been cooperative in accepting proposed amendments to make the bill a better and more satisfactory piece of legislation.

I thank the gentleman for his contribution.

A performance budget would be simpler, for the usual breakdown of the budget into personnel, supplies, and travel expenses of any given department or agency would be eliminated. The cost would be given in lump sum. The costs would be broken down, if requested, into so-called units, such as average cost for maintenance and travel of employees. The breakdown, however, would not give the subcommittees of the Appropriations Committee the necessary and vital information. For example, in considering the budget for any given segment of an agency or department, one of the most important estimates is the number of employees contemplated, and the rate of pay. This figure—and I am speaking to members of the Appropriations Committee—you certainly would like to have the figures in any given segment for the number of personnel involved to compare with the previous year and the year before that. Without a breakdown into the number of personnel you are not in a position to give a constructive appraisal of the appropriation bill. I think that has been corrected in the so-called "green sheet" that will be sent up, and which the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] has suggested as a method of meeting that point.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield at that point?

Mr. HARVEY. I yield.

Mr. HOLIFIELD. We were very glad, as the gentleman said, to have the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] make this suggestion, because we all respect him and we know that he has the job of working with the Appropriations Committee and he needs every bit of information that is available. We went to the trouble of asking the Bureau of the Budget to give us an estimate of how much it would cost them to make these green sheets available. It was a very modest sum, and all of the members of the subcommittee felt that that expenditure would be more than justified in getting this valuable information to the members of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. HARVEY. Yes; I am glad the gentleman from California has reemphasized that because I think it will very possibly allay some of the suspicions that the members of the Appropriations Committee may have had that the performance budget would not give them the facts that they should have in considering appropriation bills.

Let me say also that the author of the bill has been very cooperative in revising the language of the bill so that the so-called performance budget will not be mandatory. The amended provision will take care of that. We all recognize the fact that the performance budget even as the omnibus appropriation bill, is purely experimental and if it should not prove as workable as we hope and think it will, we would certainly want to have an optional provision so that we would not be, as he expressed it, stuck with it.

Some of the desirable objectives of this legislation are to streamline the accounting and auditing procedures; and these features are in line with the Hoover Commission report. The powers given to the Comptroller General would center responsibility for accounting to an extent that is lacking at present. One significant feature that should produce great economy is the proviso that would eliminate the necessity of sending millions of vouchers and supporting evidence to Washington. The auditing could be done just as well at various substations at a great saving. Mr. Warren has also testified that the warrant system is outmoded, no longer serves a useful function, and should be abandoned. Also that many accounts his office is required by law to carry are no longer necessary and only serve to increase the workload in his office. Mr. Warren, however, had no estimate as to the number of such accounts subject to elimination. In the hearings I asked him whether it would mean 2, 20, or 500. Mr. Warren replied:

> We would have no idea in the world of that until we got the figures.

The following questions and answers followed on this subject:

> Mr. HARVEY. To go ahead regarding this section 116, would you have any estimate as to the number of ledger accounts that would be eliminated if the authority were given to the Comptroller General?
>
> Mr. WARREN. None whatever.
> Mr. HARVEY. Would it be 2, 20, or 500?
>
> Mr. WARREN. We would have no idea in the world of that until we got the figures.
>
> Mr. HARVEY. It could be as many as 500, could it?
>
> Mr. WARREN. Yes.
>
> Mr. HARVEY. How many ledger accounts do you carry?
>
> Mr. WARREN. They would run up to the thousands.
>
> Mr. HARVEY. Could you give me an example of one that might well be eliminated under this?
>
> Mr. WARREN. Mr. Weitzel, I wish you would give an example of that.
> Mr. WEITZEL. Mr. Harvey, one of those would be limitation accounts which are kept in the General Accounting Office, where there is a limitation of so many dollars under a particular appropriation, for example, on how much can be spent on personal services in the District of Columbia. We keep in the General Accounting Office a limitation account for each of those, and there are hundreds of those. The agencies keep those accounts, and we have found from long years of experience that the effective way of auditing to see whether the agency keeps within those limitations is right within the agency itself.
> We have had a system under which the agencies furnish us information from their records, which we post on those ledger accounts. But we have no way of verifying whether that information is correct without inspecting agency accounts.
>
> I do not want to discount the value of that under the present system, but as we go out and work with the agencies in setting up proper controls and prescribe certain related accounting-system requirements and make comprehensive audits of the agencies right at the site of their operations, that is the place where we can check whether they are keeping within their limitations.
> In that event, the limitation accounts in the General Accounting Office may not only become nonessential but wasteful.

The Citizens' Committee for the Hoover Report says that this bill gives the Comptroller General even greater powers than he has previously held, in that he is empowered to prescribe accounting practices for branches of the executive. With this objection, I do not hold. It would seem to me that some one person in authority should have the right to prescribe a uniform accounting system so that the auditing will be easier. After all, accounting is not a policy decision, but a mechanical device to keep a record of expenditures. There can be no valid reason for the many Federal agencies to use different types of systems.

Sections 201 and 203 of the bill give great powers to the President to modify appropriations made by the Congress, and I think it was agreed that these sections would be stricken by committee amendment. We were assured by the Comptroller General's testimony that this problem would be adequately covered by section 1111 of the omnibus appropriation bill. By the same testimony section 103 could be eliminated. This section gives great leeway to the various agencies in making the transition to the performance budget.

My greatest disappointment in this legislation is that it does not promise to alleviate the greatest evil of the fiscal affairs of our Government, which is deficiency appropriations. There are undoubtedly circumstances under which an agency would find added duties or unexpected costs would make its appropriation inadequate. But far too often an agency simply does not take seriously the will of Congress, goes right ahead spending and hoping that Congress will bail them out rather than close down the services. None of the three who testified, Mr. Lawton, Snyder, or Warren offered that this bill would help alleviate this condition, except under certain circumstances when an approaching deficiency could be detected sooner.

In conclusion may I suggest that members of the Appropriation Committee give this legislation their careful scrutiny for their committee is most intimately involved. Ths committee has a very great function to perform for the Congress and taxpayers. It is a very difficult assignment, involving hours of labor, too often unappreciated. It is my hope that this legislation will prove beneficial to the Appropriations Committee, the Congress, and to the people.

Mr. KARSTEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BECKWORTH].

(Mr. BECKWORTH asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous matter.)

Mr. BECKWORTH. Mr. Chairman, on tomorrow some very important agricultural legislation will be considered by the House.

As a part of my remarks, and for the information of the House, I wish to include the following letters and statistics:

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE,
PRODUCTION AND MARKETING ADMINISTRATION,
FIELD SERVICE BRANCH,
Tyler, Tex.

Representative LINDLEY BECKWORTH,
Member of Congress,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: This is written to acquaint you with the thoughts of the farmers of Smith County in regard to the very small cotton allotments that have been given to the farms that were classified as new growers, due to the fact that they had no cotton history for the years of 1946, 1947, and/or 1948. I am sure that you will be hearing from a certain percent of them and thought information from this office would be of assistance in answering their inquiries.

As you well know, the allotment for this county was very small and inadequate considering the trend back to cotton. Our allotment being only 14,500 acres for 1950, where it was 76,000 acres prior to the war.

The county committee (composed of farmers) were allowed, under the law, to set aside a certain percent of the county allotment for reserves. This was done, but reserves of sufficient size couldn't be set up to give the desired relief. In fact, we had many complaints from farms that varied greatly in size and in the amount of acres allowed for cotton.

We have just mailed to the farmers that made application as new growers their allotments. The reserve that could be set aside for this group was 607.8 acres, for this acreage we had 450 applications. The allotments being so small that many say that they can't afford to fool with it, to get ready to plant and cultivate such a small crop would cost more than could be realized out of the crop. These allotments varying in size from 0.01 acre to 5 acres, and to get a 5-acre allotment it had to be a very large farm.

The people of this county, who were looking to cotton for a cash crop, something that they could depend on, are certainly dissatisfied with the present cotton-allotment law. It is their belief, everyone that has expressed their opinion to me, that they as individuals and Smith County as a whole have been discriminated against. The way to make a living for their family is a thought and a question mark forever present in the minds of the small farmer of this county and this section of the State of Texas.

This letter is not written in criticism but merely to convey to you the feelings of the farmers of this county.

Yours truly,

DAN G. OWEN,
Secretary, Smith County PMA.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE,
PRODUCTION AND MARKETING ADMINISTRATION,
Canton, Tex., March 20, 1950.

O. L. HAPTONSTALL,
Fruitvale, Tex.

DEAR SIR: This is to advise that the county committee finds it necessary to set up a zero allotment on the above farm serial number. Since we had 600 applications for new grower allotments and only 427.7 acres of cotton, you can see that the average allotment would have been 0.7 of an acre if all approved for allotments. The county committee approved 257 farms for new grower allotment with an average allotment of 1.7 acres. In view of the above facts we cannot see that you have been done any disservice by disapproval of your application.

Any appeal from the above must be made within 15 days from the date of this notice.

Your application was disapproved for one of the reasons set out below.

1. Work stock and equipment not available.
2. Has a cotton allotment on another farm.
3. Cotton allotment not necessary to livelihood of operator.
4. Land not adapted to production of cotton.
5. Allotment which could be set up too small to be of possible benefit to farm operator.

R. W. BROWN,

Hon. LINDLEY BECKWORTH,

Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. BECKWORTH: The county committee has requested that I give the following answers to the questions asked in your letter of April 3, 1950.

1. Six hundred and forty-two farms received 5 acres or less in Van Zandt County.
2. Approximately 600 farmers made application for new grower allotments.
3. There were 427.7 acres of cotton to distribute to new grower farmers in this county.
4. Each farm which received an allotment received from 0.4 acre to 4.5 acres. The allotments averaged 1.7 acres.
5. It was necessary that a considerable number be given a zero allotment.
6. The committee regards approximately 70 percent of the applicants genuine farmers.

Very truly yours,

JAMES C. HODGE,
Secretary, Van Zandt County PMA.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE,

LINDLEY BECKWORTH,
House of Representatives,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. BECKWORTH: The information shown below was requested by you under the dates of May 8 and May 16. We regret very much that we were unable to furnish you with this information sooner. The Wise County PMA committee, composed of G. A. Collier, Chico; C. W. Slay, Rhome; W. D. Phillips, Decatur, has asked me to express to you their appreciation of your efforts in behalf of the small cotton and peanut producers.

We have 601 cotton producers in Wise County; 170 of these received less than 5 acres of cotton; 27 new producers applied for acreage. There was 90.5 acres to distribute to these new producers; 72.3 acres of this was distributed. None obtained zero acres. We consider 100 percent of these as genuine farmers. The recent cotton amendment helped our new producers to the amount of 75.3 acres. It helped the old ones to the amount of 388.2 acres. Ninety-five percent of our producers receiving less than 5 acres probably will grow no cotton; none will cease to farm for themselves.

We have 928 peanut producers in Wise county. Ten is the least number of acres a farmer can afford to economically grow. Four hundred and sixty-two producers received allotments of less than 10 acres. Sixty-five producers received allotments less than 2 acres. All of the producers receiving allotments of less than 2 acres will cease to grow peanuts. None will cease to farm for themselves. Thirty-six producers applied for peanut acreage in 1950. The new producers allotments were received from the State reserve. These 36 new producers received 130.1 acres.

Yours very truly,

F. P. MARTIN,
Secretary, Wise County PMA.

DEAR MR. BECKWORTH: In reply to your letter of May 6, 1950, we are listing below what we consider is an accurate estimate of the information you desire.

Number of cotton producers in county: 381.

Farmers receiving less than 5 acres of cotton: 49 old growers and 27 new growers.

Number of new producers applying for cotton acreage: 55.

Acreage available for new producers: 150.

Acres allotted to each new producer: An average of 4.2 each.

Number receiving zero acres: 19.

What percent regarded as genuine farmers: 100 percent.

Recent cotton amendment helped new producers by how many acres: None.

Helped old growers by how many acres: 1,206.7.

Number producers receiving less than 5 acres that will grow no cotton: 5 percent.

Number producers who will cease to farm for themselves: None.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN: This is in reference to your letter, dated May 13, 1950, to the Wood County PMA Committee.

We have approximately 400 peanut producers in the county. The least number of acres each producer can afford to grow is 2 acres. We have about 150 producers who received allotments of less than 2 acres. Of those growers having allotments of less than 2 acres, there will be about 25 or 50 who will cease to grow peanuts. I do not believe there will be any to cease to farm for themselves. The number of new producers were 35 and the number of acres distributed was 21.4 acres and the average to each was 0.6 of an acre.

The excess acreage (for oil) up to the 1947 picked and and threshed will help at least 150 or 200 producers in Wood County. (I am told today, June 5, 1950, by Mr. Akers, that peanuts for edible purposes are worth $200 to $220 a ton and for oil purposes from $100 to $120 a ton.) Part added in parenthesis by Lindley Beckworth.

Hoping the above is the desired information, I am

DEAR CONGRESSMAN: This is in reference to your letter of April 5, 1950, to the county committee.

(1) The number of farmers receiving 5 acres of cotton or less was 1,248. (2) The number of new producers that applied for allotments was 340. (3) The acreage that was available to distribute among the new producers was 300. (4) Each producer received from 1 acre to 1.1 acres. (5) The number of zero allotments was 10. (6) The percent of new producers regarded as genuine farmers was 83 percent (300) applications.

The number of applications left from item 2, less item 5, less item 6, consisted of 30 applications that did not meet the necessary eligibility requirements.

If you desire further information please advise.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE,
PRODUCTION AND MARKETING ADMINISTRATION,
Montague, Tex., May 9, 1950.

Re letter dated May 6, 1950.

Hon. LINDLEY BECKWORTH,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: In Montague County we have approximately 700 actual cotton producers.

We have 266 farmers in the county who received allotments of less than 5 acres under the original cotton law. Of course some of these figures were raised to more than 5 acres under the new 65–45-percent provision.

We had 139 applications for new grower cotton allotments in Montague County, and only 100 acres reserve was available for allocation to these applicants. These new producers received allotments from 0.5 to 2.7 acres, but none received a zero allotment. We estimate that 86 percent of these new producers are genuine farmers.

The recent cotton amendment did not help new cotton producers in our county since we did have enough acreage returned to the committee to cover the additional required for old producers under the 65–45-percent provision. However, the county did receive 1,244.3 acres additional allotment under the new law to aid the old producers.

We estimate that at least 50 to 60 percent of the 266 farmers receiving less than 5 acres probably will grow no cotton in 1950. Approximately 20 percent of this number will cease to farm for themselves.

Yours truly,

BUEL E. WRIGHT,
Secretary, Montague County PMA.

1. There are 221 cotton producers in this parish.

2. One hundred and fifty-four received less than 5 acres of cotton.

5. Each received a percent share according to cropland and requested acreage.

6. No producer received zero acres.

7. About 75 percent of new producers are genuine farmers.

8. The recent cotton amendment helped none of our new producers. The frozen acreage amendment gave us 4 acres for new producers.

9. The recent cotton amendment helped none of our old producers. The frozen acreage amendment gave us 13.1 acres for old producers.

10. About 15 of our producers receiving less than 5 acres will probably grow no cotton.

11. A very small percentage will cease to farm for themselves.

How many producers in county received allotments less than the number of acres mentioned above: 105.

DEAR MR. REPRESENTATIVE: In reply to your note of May 6, 1950, I will submit answers to your questions. I regret that I was unable to answer prior to this time, but we were prohibited from replying by Mr. Frank K. Woolley, Deputy Administrator, PMA. However, he has now removed the prohibition.

There are 1,263 cotton producers in Floyd County. There were 49 new growers and 11 old growers that received less than 5 acres of cotton. There were 271 applications for new growers acreage. There were 3,793 acres to distribute among new growers. Each new grower received 0.5476 of the indicated acreage (what the old grower received, which was 0.2623 of tilled acreage adjusted). No new producer received zero acreage. Of the applications received, less than 50 percent are genuine farmers. The new growers were not helped by recent cotton amendments. The old growers were helped to the extent of 6,911 acres additional cotton allotment. This was allocated to 339 farmers. There were 796 farmers who applied for adjustments, but only 339 received any relief. Of the producers receiving less than 5 acres only about 25 will actually grow cotton. There will be none to cease farming because of the allotment reductions.

At present time the total county allotment is 51,803.8 including all adjustments.

Very truly yours,

RAY S. MCENTIRE,
Secretary, Floyd County PMA.

DEAR MR. BECKWORTH: As requested in your letter addressed to the Baldwin County PMA Committee, I wish to advise that we have approximately 600 cotton farmers in this county. About 300 of these farms received less than 5 acres allotment. We only had about 180 acres to distribute to new growers; therefore they received an acreage from 0.1 up to 10 acres. We did not have any producers who filed for an allotment who did not get his percent. The recent cotton amendment only helped five farmers in this county with a total increase of 15 acres. I will say that approximately one-half of them will plant no cotton at all due to the fact that their allotment is so small. I am sure that none of them will cease to farm for themselves; although they cannot grow cotton, they will produce some other crop instead.

DEAR MR. BECKWORTH: With reference to your letter of May 2, 1950, in regard to cotton acreage of Lamar County, I am listing below the requested information:

Cotton producers in Lamar County: 1,200.

Farmers receiving less than 5.0 allotment: 540.

New producers applying for an allotment: 183.

Amount of acreage available to new growers: 680 acres.

Each new grower received approximately 3.8 acres.

Number of new growers receiving zero allotments: 11.

Genuine farmers: 80 percent.

Several new growers received help from the law recently passed by Congress from excess acreage which was turned back in by farmers that would not plant cotton this year. Approximately 70 acres was given to new growers and 450 acres given to old growers. Approximately 100 farms received less than 5.0 as allotment will not plant cotton this year. DEAR SIR: In answer to your recent letter we wish to advise that we have 410 farmers in George County with cotton allotments, 130 of that amount being applicants for a new-producer allotment. There were 262 farmers received an allotment of less than 5 acres.

This county received 465.7 acres for the new producers and as we were able to raise them to 3.8 no matter what the factor gave them, the majority received the 3.8 allotment. None received zero allotments.

Most of the ones asking for new allotments had been doing war work and are now wanting to start up farming operations again.

The recent cotton amendment helped only 5.1 acres in this country on the old allotments but none on the new producers except that the released acreage for reapportionment will bring them up to 40 percent of their cropland.

Most of the ones who received allotments and did not release are intending to plant all they are allowed, but a few say that they did not receive enough to plant. Very few will cease to farm for themselves.

I hope this information will help you. Please feel free to call on us at any time.

DEAR SIR: In reference to your letter of May 2, 1950, concerning information on cotton in Chatham County, N. C., it is as follows: (a) 920 cotton producers; (b) 857 received 5 acres or less; (c) 72 new producers applied for cotton acreage; (d) 50 acres to distribute to new producers; (e) each received from 0.1 to 2 acres; none received zero allotments; (f) about 75 percent genuine farmers; (g) the recent cotton amendment did not help new growers any. One old farm received increase of 1.1 acres from this amendment; (h) there probably will be 25 percent of the growers that received less than 5 acres will not plant any cotton because the allotment is too small.

Hon. JOHN E. MILES,
House of Representatives,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. MILES: This is in reply to your letter of June 23 addressed to Mr. Leslie Martin, chairman of State PMA committee, wherein you requested that we submit certain data regarding the 1950 cotton acreage-allotment program.

The following is a tabulation by county of the information requested:

County	Number of producers	Number receiving 5 acres or less	Number of new producers applying for acreage	Number considered genuine farmers
Chaves	731	54	34	34
Curry	11
De Baca	54	40	49	48

Sierra	67	5
Socorro	689	7
Valencia	100	10

The acreage was distributed to new producers on the basis of a factor applied to the cropland acreage, not to exceed the amount requested by the new producers. The only producers receiving zero acreage were those which were not considered to be genuine cotton farmers by the county committee.

New producers were not benefited by the increase in acreage because of Public Law 471.

All producers receiving a cotton allotment on 5 acres or less received such an allotment on basis of past cotton history. It is therefore anticipated that these producers will plant cotton since they are established cotton farmers.

Very truly yours,

ARCHIE M. VANCE,
Executive Officer, State Committee.

Hon. JOSEPH R. BRYSON,
House of Representatives,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. BRYSON: I wish to thank you for your letter of May 25 asking for certain data on cotton-acreage allotments in South Carolina.

Enclosed is a tabulation giving answers to most of your questions. Repeating your questions:

1. How many cotton producers are in each county of South Carolina? See column 1.

2. How many farmers in each county received less than 5 acres of cotton? See column 2. It might be added that 19,000 farmers in the State received an acreage allotment of exactly 5 acres. Changing your question then, there are 39,908 farms in the State receiving an allotment of 5 acres or less.

3. How many new producers in each county applied for acreage? See column 3.

4. How much acreage was there to distribute among the new producers in each county? See column 4.

5. How much did each get? See column 5. In answering this question, we have given the smallest acreage allotted to any one farm in the county and the highest acreage allotted in the county to any one farm. It should be understood that many farmers received new grower allotments between these two figures.

6. Did any receive zero acres? All applicants for new grower allotments that were eligible under the regulations did receive an allotment.

7. What percent of the new producers in each county do you regard as genuine farmers? I have no data on which to answer this question.

8. How much in acres did the recent cotton amendment help your new producers county by county? The recent amendments did not help new cotton producers in any county due to the fact that new cotton producers were not eligible to receive any additional allotment under the amendments. The amendments were based solely on history of cotton production and the new cotton producers did not have any cotton history.

9. How much in acres did the recent cotton amendment help old cotton producers? See column 6.

10. How many producers, county by county, receiving less than 5 acres probably will grow no cotton? I have no data on which to base an answer to this question.

11. How many will cease to farm for themselves county by county? I have no data on which to answer this question.

If there is any additional information that you think we may furnish you we will be very glad, indeed, to hear from you.

With kindest regards, I am

Very truly yours,

R. W. HAMILTON,
Chairman, South Carolina State PMA Committee.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE,
PRODUCTION AND MARKETING ADMINISTRATION,
Stillwater, Okla., June 16, 1950.

Hon. TOBY MORRIS,
Member of Congress,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN MORRIS: This is in reply to your letter of May 29, 1950, requesting certain information with respect to 1950 cotton-acreage allotments in Oklahoma. We are enclosing a tabulation which shows, by counties, most of the data requested in your letter.

We are unable to furnish you with a count of the number of cotton producers in each county; however, we have listed in column 1 of the enclosed tabulation the number of cotton-acreage allotments in each county, which will represent approximately the number of producers in each county.

Column 2 of the tabulation shows the acreage allotment determined for each county in accordance with the provisions of Public Law 272, Eighty-first Congress. In establishing these county allotments, the State committee held out and used for adjustments the maximum 15 percent provided in the law and, in most instances, county committees in Oklahoma reserved and used the maximum acreage provided for in the law for making adjustments in individual farm allotments.

Columns 6 through 10 show the effects of the application by the county committees of the provisions of Public Law 471, Eighty-first Congress. The application of these provisions resulted in a net increase in the State allotment of only 26,000 acres, although approximately 40,000 acres were granted under the 65–45–40 provision of the law, and 26,000 acres were reallocated from the acreage released. In some counties, the acreage required to provide the minimum (65–45–40) exceeded the acreage released, in which cases there was no acreage available for reapportionment to hardship cases and new farms. In other counties the county committees were not able to reallocate all of the acreage available because of the two limitations (40 percent of the cropland and past production of cotton) which were placed on the county committee in the law.

The 40-percent provision prevented the county committees from allocating additional acreage allotment to some farms on which a large percentage of the cropland had been devoted to cotton in the past and on which the county committees felt that the allotment was inadequate in view of the past production of cotton.

The "past production of cotton" limitation prevented the county committees, in many instances, from allocating additional allotment to farms on which there is little or no cotton history but which have been acquired through purchase or rental by cotton farmers who have the equipment, experience, and desire to grow more cotton. This provision also eliminated "war crop credit" from consideration in determining the maximum acreage which could be allocated to a farm.

You will recall that Public Law 272 provided for the determination of farm allotments on the basis of a prescribed percentage of the cropland on the farm, provided the acreage allotment so determined did not exceed the highest planted cotton acreage for the farm during the base period. In Comanche County, for example, of the 1,488 cotton allotments established, 162 farms received an allotment equal to the highest acreage planted in any year during the base period, which represented no reduction in the acreage for these farms and resulted in further reduction in the acreage on all other farms in the county.

Concerning your question as to whether any person received a zero allotment who made application for a new-grower allotment, the county committees established a new-grower allotment for each applicant who was eligible under the provisions of the law.

You will notice that columns 9 and 10 are incomplete. You have not obtained that information for all counties as yet.

There may be some minor changes in some of the items on the enclosed tabulation; however, there will be no substantial change in any of the county totals.

We are unable to answer all of the questions in your letter at this time. For example, we shall not be able to determine the number of producers who received allotments and who planted no cotton until after all cotton acreages have been measured. The eligibility provisions, the determination of allotments based on percentage of cropland, and the war crop credit provisions, as provided in the law, did result in the establishment of allotments on a considerable number of farms on which the producers had no intention of growing cotton in 1950.

We appreciate your interest in this matter and your efforts in connection with cotton legislation. We hope that this information will be helpful and that you will call on us for any additional information which you desire.

Very truly yours,
CHARLES T. CAMERON,
Chairman, Oklahoma State PMA Committee.

Mr. KARSTEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of the time to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. GARY].

Mr. GARY. Mr. Chairman, shortly after my daughter first entered school I met her teacher on the street one day and she told me laughingly: "Several days ago I asked your daughter a question. She said, 'I do not know the answer but my Daddy does and I will find out tonight and let you know tomorrow.'"

I am a lawyer and I do not know all of the answers about this accounting procedure. The Gary family, however, has diversified its activities. I have a brother who is a certified public accountant and who had the privilege of serving as Executive Assistant and Director of Research of the accounting phase of the Hoover Commission investigation. He is now engaged in the installation of a new accounting system in the Coast Guard which will conform with the recommendations of that Commission.

So I turned to him for information on this bill, and this is what he said:

There is no doubt in my mind but that H. R. 9038 represents the best possible approach to improvement of accounting and auditing for the Federal Government. It is complete consistent and incorporates into law the features of the accounting improvement program that is being conducted in the Coast Guard and other agencies of the Government under the joint program. In addition, it provides for the elimination of duplicate and cumbersome procedures which not only have made the installation of the accounting system in the Coast Guard more difficult, but also will effect economies in the handling of routine transactions.

It is my opinion that this proposed bill is all of the major legislation that is required to do the complete accounting and auditing improvement job for the entire Federal Government. I remember that some time ago you asked me why legislation was not developed that would write into law the approach to this problem that is being made by the joint program. This legislation does just that.

Mr. Chairman, the critical situation which we face today not only requires that we drastically curtail nonmilitary expenditures and eliminate all nonessential expenditures, but that we utilize the most modern budgeting and accounting procedures available to supervise and control the vast expenditures which we must authorize. This bill also does that and I hope it will be enacted into law.

The CHAIRMAN. All time having expired, the Clerk will read the bill for amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That this act may be cited as the "Budget and Accounting Procedures Act of 1950."

Requirements prescribed by the Comptroller General shall be designed to permit the executive agencies to carry out their responsibilities under section 113 of this part, while providing a basis for integrated accounting for the Government, full disclosure of the results of the financial operations of each executive agency and the Government as a whole, and financial information and control necessary to enable the Congress and the President to discharge their respective responsibilities. SAVING PROVISIONS

SEC. 302. (a) The omission of any provision of law from the provisions of law repealed under section 301 shall not be construed as limiting the application of section 201 or 216 of the Budget and Accounting Act, 1921, as amended, or the powers of the President thereunder, or as evidencing an intent that such provision was not to be superseded by such sections.

(b) Whenever any law authorizes expenditures for a particular object or purpose to be made from an appropriation item referred to in such law by the specific title theretofore used for that appropriation item in the appropriation act concerned, and thereafter such title is changed or is eliminated from such appropriation act, expenditures for such object or purpose thereafter may be made from any corresponding appropriation item.

The committee amendments were agreed to.

Mr. KARSTEN. Mr. Chairman, I have four minor amendments at the Clerk's desk. I ask unanimous consent that they be considered en bloc.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendments offered by Mr. KARSTEN:

Page 1, line 7, strike out "Definition."

Page 2, line 4, strike out "Performance Budget and Regulations"; line 13, strike out the comma and insert in lieu thereof a semicolon; line 14, strike out "constituting a performance budget;"; lines 15 and 16, strike out "'(b) a segregation of operating, and of capital and investment programs;".

"(b) The budget and statements furnished with any proposed supplemental or deficiency appropriations shall be accompanied by information as to personal services and other objects of expenditure in the same manner and form as in the budget for the fiscal year 1950: Provided, That this requirement may be waived or modified, either generally or in specific cases, by joint action of the committees of Congress having jurisdiction over appropriation."

Mr. HARVEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HARVEY to the amendment: Page 5, line 3, strike out the period and insert: "And provided further, That nothing in this act shall be construed to limit the authority of the Committee of Congress to request and receive such information in such form as they may desire in consideration of and action upon budget estimates."

Mr. KARSTEN. Mr. Chairman, I would like to make a brief explanation of the amendments I submitted. I would like to also add that we see no objection to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HARVEY] and will be glad to accept it.

Mr. Chairman, the Clerk, in reading the amendment, used the word "committee," singular. The word is "committees," plural. I suggest that the amendment be corrected accordingly.

The four amendments I am offering were suggested by members of the Committee on Appropriations. The amendments in no way impair the objectives of the bill. I have discussed these minor changes with the Comptroller General, the Secretary of the Treasury, and the Director of the Bureau of the Budget. They have no objection to the amendments.

Under the first three amendments the President will have authority to submit either a performance budget or an item budget. At the present time we are using what is known as the performance or functional budget. The proposed amendments will continue existing authority and under these minor changes the President may submit either a functional or item type budget.

The last amendment relates to the green-sheets provision. It simply provides that this statistical information shall be furnished to the Congress along with the budget in justification of budget requests.

Mr. Chairman, I hope the amendments will all be adopted.

Mr. HARVEY. Mr. Chairman, I have been informed that the amendment as offered will require a slight revision. I ask unanimous consent to withdraw it and reoffer it in the proper form.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HARVEY: At the end of the amendment offered by Mr. KARSTEN, add the following amendment. Strike out the period and insert: "And provided further, That nothing in this act shall be construed to limit the authority of the committees of Congress to request and receive such information in such form as they may desire in consideration of and action upon budget estimates."

Mr. KARSTEN. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will yield, the committees of Congress now have this authority. I think it is desirable, however, to restate it in the bill as the gentleman from Indiana has requested. I think we on this side can agree to the amendment.

Mr. HARVEY. May I say by way of explanation that we have taken language that has previously been written into appropriation bills and put it into substantive legislation. This was done at the request of the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. CASE], of the Appropriations Committee. I do not know that it is absolutely necessary, but it may well be an added precaution that will protect the rights of the Appropriations Committee and the Congress.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HARVEY] to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. KARSTEN].

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri, as amended.

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the Committee rises.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. ENGLE of California, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H. R. 9038) to authorize the President to determine the form of the national budget and of departmental estimates, to modernize and simplify governmental accounting and auditing methods and procedures, and for other purposes, pursuant to House Resolution 729, he reported the bill back to the House with sundry amendments adopted by the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. Under the rule, the previous question is ordered.

Is a separate vote demanded on any amendment? If not, the Chair will put them in gross.

The amendments were agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. KARSTEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have five legislative days in which to extend their remarks on the bill just passed.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

COMMITTEE ON EXPENDITURES IN THE EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENTS

Mr. HOLIFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments have until midnight tonight to file a report on the bill H. R. 9129.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

AUTHORIZING ANNUAL AND SICK LEAVE WITH PAY FOR COMMISSIONED OFFICERS OF PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE

Mr. PRIEST submitted a conference report and statement on the bill (S. 2160) to amend the Public Health Service Act to authorize annual and sick leave with pay for commissioned officers of the Public Health Service, to authorize the payment of accumulated and accrued annual leave in excess of 60 days, and for other purposes.

GOVERNMENT PUBLICATIONS

Mr. FURCOLO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. FURCOLO. Mr. Speaker, the other day in addressing the House I tried to point out the necessity for paying some attention to economy in those endeavors which have nothing to do with defense. In line with that thought I pointed out the need to try to limit the printing being done by a great many governmental agencies and departments. I prepared a resolution authorizing a committee to be set up to determine what publications the agencies and departments of Government were printing which had no relation whatever to defense matters.

I have since learned that the Joint Committee on Printing would have jurisdiction of such an investigation and I want to urge them to have hearings as quickly as possible to determine what publications, if any, can be eliminated during this emergency in trying to economize wherever it is possible to do so. This is merely one small attempt to economize, but I think it should be done right away.

The SPEAKER. Under previous order of the House, the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. LANHAM], is recognized for 20 minutes.

OUR NATIONAL DEFENSE

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Speaker, not once before have I asked for time to speak to the House under a special order. Last night as I lay upon my bed, not able to sleep, I determined to speak my convictions, although my speaking was only the voice of one crying in the wilderness and with no language but a cry.

Sleep would not come because of the weight of responsibility that rests upon me, and upon every other Member of Congress in this hour of crisis and danger. Of course, this same responsibility rests upon every citizen of the United States, but not to so great a degree as upon us, their representatives. Each one of us was chosen because the people back home at least believed us to be men of integrity, of character, of some ability, and with other qualities that fitted us for leadership. If we fail to exercise effective leadership during these trying and terrifying days, our constituents should and will retire us in favor of others who will furnish adequate leadership.

While I think that the Congress is not primarily to blame for the tragic lack of preparedness on the part of our armed services, nevertheless, we will be responsible if we allow it to continue. We were misled by some pompous and self-important officials of our Defense Establishment, to believe that our Defense Establishment was adequate for our protection against attack. Moreover, some of the funds appropriated by Congress were held up by the President, no doubt on the advice of the boastful man who heads our Defense Establishment. I cannot blame the President too much, since he had to depend for the facts and advice upon which he based his actions upon these same men who were sadly wrong in their judgment as to our needs for defense. He will have to bear the blame, however, if he allows these men to bungle further.

As I say, I feel we are not to blame for our lack of preparedness. But we are to blame if we allow this condition to continue, or if we allow our economic and fiscal affairs to degenerate to the same low ebb as our Defense Establishment.

How, then, shall we meet and measure up to our responsibilities?

In the first place, I am sure that we must face some hard facts, acknowledge their existence, and quit our wishful thinking and day-dreaming.

And the first hard fact that we must face is that world war III began with the invasion of South Korea. It is not the dramatic and awe-inspiring beginning that our defense chiefs expected; neither is it the kind of war they envisioned. But I am convinced that after Korea will come Formosa, and then western Germany, Yugoslavia, possibly Iran, Greece, and Turkey. The refusal of the Russians to fight the war our defense chiefs had prepared for reminds me of the old story of the boasting southerner who, before he faced his first Yank, claimed that the southerners could whip the Yankees with cornstalks. After four hard years of fighting, his statement was recalled to him. In answer he ruefully remarked that the Yanks refused to fight with cornstalks.

So if we would fight Stalin we must meet him fully prepared to fight whatever kind of war, and with whatever kinds of weapons, he employs. To recognize this as the beginning of world war III is necessary if we are to arm adequately and prepare our economic forces for the struggle. This does not mean that our might, both military and industrial, potentially now and eventually in fact, may not be such a warning to Soviet Russia that she will decide that discretion is the better part of valor and cease to urge her satellites to attack around the perimeter of the world as she now threatens to do.

The second hard fact that we must face is human nature as exemplified in the spectacle of selfishness and lack of patriotism that has caused a wave of unnecessary buying and hoarding. Enlightened self-interest, and the normal and laudable desire of every man to do well and prosper for his own and his family's sake is the spark plug of our free-enterprise system, and the glory of our free way of life. But until men's hearts are changed and they accept the Christian instead of the materialistic philosophy of life, which will happen only in the millennium, we must realize that this enlightened self-interest so easily degenerates under stress into utter selfishness.

The third fact that we must face is that there is no easy way out of our plight. Freedom has ever been hard-won and as hardly held. We cannot temporize with halfway measures.

Having faced these unpleasant and hard facts, what course shall we pursue to preserve our own liberty and that of the free peoples of the world?

In the first place, the President should give us military and civilian Defense Department heads in whom we can have confidence. Acknowledgment of failure on their part and repentance cannot suffice in this crisis. The President has a load of responsibilites upon his shoulders that is man-killing, and must have advisers upon whom he can depend and in whom the Congress has faith. This is a struggle for survival, and only the fittest should be placed in high places of leadership.

In the next place, the Congress must forget partisan politics and give the President the support and encouragement that he must have to wage a successful fight against the forces of despotism and brutality. This we can do by furnishing the necessary funds to hasten our armament program to the utmost.

We must then leave the actual conduct of the war to those leaders in whom we have confidence.

A few weeks ago when I suggested that the Secretary of National Defense ought to resign, I did that in a letter which I sent back home. It was intended only for the people back home. It was copied in the Atlanta Journal and then by the Associated Press. I want to tell you that the response from all over the country has been tremendous. When I suggested that I did not suggest it as a sort of punishment for this man who has made so many errors. I did not do it to try to seek a scapegoat for the Congress or for others who are responsible, but for this purpose alone: The man has demonstrated his unfitness for the job. In times like this, in a crisis like this, not only he but the head of every other department of the Government ought to be men of ability, men who can see that our national interests are protected.

But it is in the industrial and civilian mobilization effort that Congress must bear the responsibility and the blame if things go wrong. As I have said, this is a struggle for the survival of freemen and our way of life. Hence we must mobilize our civilian and industrial potential as thoroughly as we do our military forces. Business and industry must go on. But it cannot go on as usual. Recent events in the field of price rises, inflation, and hoarding prove that it cannot go on as usual. If we hesitate and delay our industrial mobilization and the enlistment of our civilian forces, we will fall into the trap set for us by Stalin, who thinks he will never have to fight us directly, if he can force us to spend our strength and waste our resources around the world, and dissipate our industrial power by profiteering and industrial strife at home.

So I urge that we quit talking about controls in the future, and act now to freeze, at the pre-Korea level, prices, wages, and profits. Action is imperative now that our manpower be conserved and our industrial strength protected. Wild inflation will ruin us. Prices and wages can easily be frozen at reasonable levels, and profits should be curbed by an excess-profits tax, imposed now and not next year.

Strikes should be forbidden by law. By and large labor cooperated wonderfully well during the past war with industry to do the greatest job of production the world has ever seen. But there were glaring exceptions which incensed the people and lowered the morale of our fighting men. This must not be repeated.

Our nondefense expenditures should be cut to the bone, else our economy will be unable to stand the strain. Moreover, we must finance this war as we go. The huge national debt is the result of our failure to do this during the last war, while huge fortunes were made. We cannot afford to add to this debt the stupendous sums that will be necessary to bring the present war and whatever may follow to a successful determination. Increased taxes are not popular, but they are necessary if we are to survive as a free nation. It may be that they should not be imposed until the Ways and Means Committee has had time to study the entire problem, and report sometime early next year. That applies to taxes generally, but not to the excess-profits tax which should be enacted now.

These are hard and unpopular measures. But so is the job of fighting which our young men are so bravely doing. Surely if we can ask them to give their lives for freedom and a free world, we can discipline ourselves and show the world that a democracy can survive in the face of the worst that a ruthless and Godless enemy can do.

We can win and preserve freedom, justice, and Christianity for the peoples of the world, but we cannot do it by halfway measures.

We are sometimes discouraged and disheartened at the apparent success of brute force and criminal practices in world-wide affairs. Occasionally, I am tempted to agree with the pessimistic philosophy of Matthew Arnold so well expressed in some of the most beautiful words in all English poetry, and I quote:

The sea of faith
Was once, too, at the full, and round earth's shore
Lay like the folds of a bright girdle furl'd.
But now I only hear
Its melancholy, long, withdrawing roar,
Retreating, to the breath
Of the night-wind, down the vast edges drear
And naked shingles of the world.

And, love, let us be true
To one another! for the world, which seems
To lie before us like a land of dreams,
So various, so beautiful, so new,
Hath really neither joy, nor love, nor light,
Nor certitude, nor peace, nor help for pain;
And we are here as on a darkling plain
Swept with confused alarms of struggle and flight,
Where ignorant armies clash by night.

But we should take heart and renew our faith. For, after all, this is a moral universe, and right will win in the end. Yet, unless we are prepared to meet force with force, and propose a superior moral and ethical ideal to the materialistic Marxian philosophy of our enemies, the triumph of right may be delayed for generations.

As Ernest Bevin recently said, "Free men have never been vanquished by slaves." So in spite of the pessimistic view of our civilization that predicts its total eclipse, I believe that free men, following Christian morals and ideals, and exercising the power of these forces, backed up by the necessary physical force can and will preserve our western civilization, and our free way of life. But we cannot dilly-dally. This is the hour. We must act.

The SPEAKER. Under previous order of the House, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN] is recognized.

SMALL BUSINESS DEFENSE PLANTS ACT OF 1950

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, today I have introduced in the House a bill (H. R. 9243) to create the Small Defense Plants Corporation and to preserve small-business institutions and free, competitive enterprise. The distinguished Senator from Alabama [Mr. SPARKMAN] has introduced an identical bill in the Senate. As you know, Senator SPARKMAN is the chairman of the Small Business Committee of the Senate, while I have the honor of being the chairman of the Small Business Committee of the House.

Senator SPARKMAN and I have issued a joint statement which, in our opinion, sets forth compelling reasons for introducing at this time legislation which will, when it becomes law, provide an instrument to effectively mobilize the economic resources of the small-business institutions of our country in the defense effort. Senator SPARKMAN will place in the RECORD our joint statement on the Small Business Defense Plants Act of 1950, and I sincerely hope that Members of the House will find an opportunity to read it.

For the further information of the membership, I shall ask unanimous consent to include in my remarks a copy of the bill which is to be cited as the "Small Business Defense Plants Act of 1950," together with a summary and analysis of the bill and a comparison with the 1942 act creating the Smaller War Plants Corporation.

The Smaller War Plants Corporation, which I had the privilege of being joint author, created by the Congress in 1942, was a welcome addition to the war effort in World War II, but its passage came late. It did not come during the period of preparation when we were mobilizing our economic and industrial resources. The present proposal for a Small Defense Plants Corporation is needed to supplement and coordinate the small-business segment of our economy with the Defense Production Act of 1950 now under consideration by the Committees on Banking and Currency of the Senate and the House of Representatives.

The proposal of Senator SPARKMAN and myself to create a Small Defense Plants Corporation is wholly in keeping with objectives of the Defense Production Act of 1950 and with the President's message to the Congress transmitting a report on the situation in Korea—Document No. 646. The Defense Production Act states:

> It is the sense of the Congress that small-business enterprises be encouraged to make the greatest possible contribution toward achieving the objectives of this act.

In order to carry out the policy so enunciated, we must have affirmative and positive legislation. The Small Business Defense Plants Act of 1950 provides means for carrying out congressional policy in regard to small business in an affirmative and positive manner.

I am confident that Senators and Representatives will join with Senator SPARKMAN and myself in enacting this legislation into law. We cannot afford to take a chance. Small business must be provided with an effective instrument which will insure participation in our defense effort. Small business' contribution to our economy in times of stress has been magnificent. We need small business in the present defense effort more than ever before, and we need that effort now.

Therefore, any plan of mobilization of economic and industrial resources which does not utilize the capacities and skills of small business is incomplete, negligent, and dangerous. Decentralization and diversification must be based on small-business participation and, therefore, must be made while we have the choice.

The matters above referred to follow:

[H. R. 9243, 81st Cong., 2d sess.]

A bill to create the Small Defense Plants Corporation and to preserve small-business institutions and free, competitive enterprise

Be it enacted, etc., That this act may be cited as the "Small Business Defense Plants Act of 1950."

SEC. 2. (a) One of the corporations created under the Defense Production Act of 1950 shall be a body corporate under the name "Small Defense Plants Corporation" (hereinafter referred to as the "Corporation"), which Corporation shall be under the general direction and supervision of the President. The principal office of the Corporation shall be located in the District of Columbia, but the Corporation may establish such branch offices in other places in the United States as may be determined by the board of directors.

Advances shall be made to the Corporation from the revolving fund when requested by the Corporation.

(c) The management of the Corporation shall be vested in a board of five directors, who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and two of whom shall have been engaged exclusively in private small-business enterprise, in industry or commerce, for at least 10 years. One such director shall be chosen from the ranks of labor, one from the ranks of farmers, and one from the public at large. The President shall designate one of the board members to act as chairman and administrative head of the Corporation. Each member of the board shall receive compensation at the rate of $15,000 per annum, except that the chairman shall receive compensation at the rate of $17,500 per annum.

The board of directors of the Corporation shall determine and prescribe the manner in which its obligations shall be incurred and its expenses allowed and paid. The Corporation shall be entitled to the free use of the United States mails in the same manner as the executive departments of the Government. The Corporation, with the consent of any board, commission, independent establishment, or executive department of the Government, including any field service thereof, may avail itself of the use of information, services, facilities, officers, and employees thereof in carrying out the provisions of this act.

(e) All moneys of the Corporation not otherwise employed may be deposited with the Treasurer of the United States subject to check by authority of the Corporation or in any Federal Reserve bank. The Federal Reserve banks are authorized and directed to act as depositaries, custodians, and fiscal agents for the Corporation in the general performance of its powers conferred by this act. All insured banks, when designated by the Secretary of the Treasury, shall act as depositaries, custodians, and financial agents for the Corporation.

SEC. 3. (a) The Corporation is empowered—

(1) to make loans or advances, on such terms and conditions and with such maturities as it may determine, to enable small-business concerns to finance plant construction, conversion, or expansion, including the acquisition of land, or to finance the acquisition of equipment, facilities, machinery, supplies, or materials, or to supply such concerns with capital, to be used in the manufacture of articles, equipment, supplies, or materials for defense or essential civilian purposes; and such loans or advances may be made or effected either directly or in cooperation with banks or other lending institutions through agreements to participate or by the purchase of participations, or otherwise;

(2) to purchase or lease such land, to purchase, lease, build, or expand such plants, and to purchase or produce such equipment, facilities, machinery, materials, or supplies, as may be needed to enable the Corporation to provide small-business concerns with such land, plants, equipment, facilities, machinery, materials, or supplies as such concerns may require to engage in the production of such articles, equipment, supplies, or materials;

(3) to lease, sell, or otherwise dispose of to any small-business concern any such land, plants, equipment, facilities, machinery, materials, or supplies;

(b) In any case in which the Corporation certifies to any officer of the Government having procurement powers, that the Corporation is competent to perform any specific Government procurement contract to be let by any such officer, it shall be the duty of such officer to let such procurement contract to such Corporation upon such terms and conditions as may be specified by the Corporation. Such subcontracts may be let upon such terms and conditions as the Corporation may deem appropriate in accordance with such regulations as may be prescribed under section 201 of the First War Powers Act, 1941.

SEC. 4. (a) Whoever makes any statement knowing it to be false, or whoever willfully overvalues any security, for the purpose of obtaining for himself or for any applicant any loan, or extension thereof by renewal, deferment of action, or otherwise, or the acceptance, release, or substitution of security therefor, or for the purpose of influencing in any way the action of the Corporation, or for the purpose of obtaining money, property, or anything of value, under this act, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $5,000 or by imprisonment for not more than 2 years, or both.

(b) Whoever, being connected in any capacity with the Corporation, (1) embezzles, abstracts, purloins, or willfully misapplies any moneys, funds, securities, or other things of value, whether belonging to it or pledged or otherwise entrusted to it, or (2) with intent to defraud the Corporation or any other body politic or corporate, or any individual, or to deceive any officer, auditor, or examiner of the Corporation, makes any false entry in any book, report, or statement of or to the Corporation, or, without being duly authorized, draws any order or issues, puts forth, or assigns any note, debenture, bond, or other obligation, or draft, bill of exchange, mortgage, judgment, or decree thereof, or (3) with intent to defraud participates, shares, receives directly or indirectly any money, profit, property, or benefit through any transaction, loan, commission, contract, or any other act of the Corporation, or (4) gives any unauthorized information concerning any future action or plan of the Corporation which might affect the value of securities, or, having such knowledge, invests or speculates, directly or indirectly, in the securities or property of any company or corporation receiving loans or other assistance from the Corporation, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $10,000 or by imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both.

(c) The provisions of sections 202, 216, 281, 431, 432, and 433 of title 18 of the United States Code, insofar as applicable, are extended to apply to contracts or agreements with the Corporation under this act.

SEC. 5. Whenever the Corporation has completed any transaction under clause (1), (2), or (3) of section 3 (a) of this act, it may transfer the loan, advance, plant, equipment, facilities, machinery, materials, supplies, leases, or other property resulting from such transaction to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation shall service and administer such loan, advance, or property, as the agent of the Corporation, remitting to it any interest, principal, or other proceeds or collections, after deducting actual expense of service and administration.

SEC. 6. (a) It shall be the duty of the Corporation, and it is hereby empowered, to coordinate and to determine the means by which the productive capacity of small-business concerns can be most effectively utilized for national defense and essential civilian production.

(b) It shall be the duty of the Corporation, and it is hereby empowered, to consult and cooperate with appropriate governmental agencies in the issuance of all orders limiting production by business enterprises, in order that small-business concerns will be most effectively utilized in the production of articles, equipment, supplies, and materials for national defense and essential civilian purposes.

(c) It shall be the duty of all governmental agencies, in the issuance of all orders limiting production by business enterprises, to consult and cooperate with the Corporation in order that small-business concerns will be most effectively utilized in the production of articles, equipment, supplies, and materials for national defense and essential civilian purposes.

SEC. 7. The Corporation shall have power, and it is hereby directed, whenever it determines such action is necessary.

(1) to make a complete inventory of all productive facilities of small-business concerns which can be used for defense and essential civilian production or to arrange for such inventory to be made by any other governmental agency which has the facilities;

(2) to consult and cooperate with officers of the Government having procurement powers, in order to utilize the potential productive capacity of plants operated by small-business concerns;

(3) to obtain detailed information as to the methods and terms which Government prime contractors utilize in letting subcontracts and to take action to insure the letting of subcontracts by prime contractors to small-business concerns at prices and on conditions and terms which are fair and equitable;

(4) to take such action in the letting of Government procurement contracts as is necessary to provide small-business concerns with an adequate incentive to engage in defense and essential civilian production and to facilitate the conversion and the equipping of plants of small-business concerns for such production;

(5) to certify to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, or any of its subsidiaries, the amount of funds required to convert to defense production any plant of a small-business concern interested in obtaining from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, or any of its subsidiaries, the funds necessary to provide for such conversion;

(6) to determine within any industry the concerns, firms, persons, corporations, partnerships, cooperatives, or other business enterprises, which are to be designated "small-business concerns" for the purpose of effectuating the provisions of this act;

(7) to certify to Government procurement officers with respect to the competency, as to capacity and credit, of any small-business concern or group of such concerns to perform a specific Government procurement contract;

(8) to obtain from any Federal department, establishment, or agency engaged in defense procurement or in the financing of defense procurement or production such reports concerning the letting of contracts and subcontracts and making of loans to business concerns as it may deem pertinent in carrying out its functions under this act; and

(9) to obtain from suppliers of materials information pertaining to the method of filling orders and the bases for allocating their supply whenever it appears that any small business is unable to obtain materials for defense or essential civilian production from its normal sources.

(10) to make studies and recommendations to the appropriate Federal agencies to insure a fair and equitable share of materials, supplies, and equipment to small-business concerns to effectuate the defense program or for essential civilian purposes.

(11) to consult and cooperate with all Government agencies for the purpose of insuring that small-business concerns shall receive fair and reasonable treatment from said agencies.

SEC. 8. (a) In any case in which a small-business concern or group of such concerns has been certified by or under the authority of the Corporation to be a competent Government contractor with respect to capacity and credit as to a specific Government procurement contract, the officers of the Government having procurement powers are directed to accept such certification as conclusive, and are authorized to let such Government procurement contract to such concern or group of concerns without requiring it to meet any other requirements with respect to capacity and credit.

(b) The Congress has as its policy that a fair proportion of the total purchases and contracts for supplies and services for the Government shall be placed with small-business concerns. To effectuate such policy, small-business concerns within the meaning of this act shall receive any award or contract or any part thereof if it is determined by the Corporation and the contracting procurement agencies (1) to be in the interest of mobilizing the Nation's full productive capacity, or (2) to be in the interest of the national defense program.

SEC. 9. The Corporation shall make a report every 60 days of operations under this act to the President, the President of the Senate, and the Speaker of the House of Representatives. Such report shall include the names of the business concerns to whom contracts are let, and for whom financing is arranged, by the Corporation, together with the amounts involved, and such report shall include such other information, and such comments and recommendations, with respect to the relation of small-business concerns to the defense effort, as the Corporation may deem appropriate.

SEC. 10. The Attorney General is directed to make, or request the Federal Trade Commission to make, surveys for the purpose of determining any factors which may tend to eliminate competition, create or strengthen monopolies, injure small business, or otherwise promote undue concentration of economic power in the defense program. The Attorney General shall submit to the Congress within 90 days after the approval of this act, and at such times thereafter as he deems desirable, reports setting forth the results of such surveys and including recommendations for such legislation as he may deem necessary or desirable.

SEC. 11. Section 101 of the Government Corporations Control Act is amended by inserting immediately after "Commodity Credit Corporations;" the following: "Small Defense Plants Corporation;".

SUMMARY AND ANALYSIS OF THE SMALL DEFENSE PLANTS ACT OF 1950

This bill provides for the creation of a Small Defense Plants Corporation, similar to the Smaller War Plants Corporation of World War II. It is designed to meet national defense and civilian needs. The proposed Corporation will have the authority to make loans and provide credit for small-business concerns. In addition, it will perform certain functions for small business relating to procurement and other matters.

Section 1: Section 1 cites the act as the "Small Defense Plants Act of 1950."

Section 2 (a): This subsection creates the Small Defense Plants Corporation within the framework of the proposed Defense Production Act of 1950. The purpose of this provision is to integrate this legislation with the basic mobilization law—the Defense Production Act of 1950.

Section 2 (b): This subsection provides the Corporation with a revolving fund not to exceed $500,000,000 for the exercise of its statutory functions.

Section 2 (c): This subsection authorizes the appointment and provides for the composition of the Corporation's Board of Directors. To insure that the Directors will have a genuine understanding and be representative of small business, it is provided that two of their number shall have had 10 years' experience in the small-business field. Labor, agriculture, and the general public are also represented.

Section 2 (d): This subsection provides that the Corporation shall be in existence until June 30, 1952 (the expiration date of the Defense Production Act of 1950).

Section 2 (e): This subsection makes provision as to depositaries for corporate funds.

Section 3 (a): This subsection contains the banking powers of the Corporation. These include the power (1) to make loans or advances, on such terms and conditions as it may determine, to finance plant construction, conversion, or expansion, or the acquisition of equipment, facilities, machinery, supplies, or materials—for defense or essential civilian purposes; (2) to purchase or lease land, plants, equipment, facilities, machinery, materials, or supplies as may be needed to provide small-business concerns with the same for defense or essential civilian production; (3) to lease, sell, or otherwise dispose of to any small-business concern land, plants, equipment, facilities, machinery, materials, or supplies; (4) to enter into contracts with the United States Government and any procurement agency for the purpose of furnishing articles, equipment, supplies, or materials to the Government; (5) to arrange for the performance of such contracts by letting subcontracts to small-business concerns.

Section 3 (b): This subsection enables the Corporation to act as prime contractor with the Government and to sublet awards to small-business concerns acting as subcontractors.

Section 4: This section provides for criminal penalties for false statements and other unlawful conduct in connection with the administration of the act.

Section 5: This section provides that Corporation's loans and advances may be transferred to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for servicing and administration.

Section 6: This section provides that the Corporation shall coordinate and determine, in cooperation with other governmental agencies, the means by which the productive capacity of small-business concerns can be most effectively utilized for national defense and essential civilian production.

Section 7: This section empowers the Corporation to integrate small business in the national defense effort by acting (1) to make or arrange for a complete inventory of all productive facilities of small-business concerns which can be used for defense or essential civilian production; (2) to consult and cooperate with procurement officers in order to utilize the potential productive capacity of small-business plants; (3) to take action to insure the letting of subcontracts by prime contractors to small-business concerns at prices and on conditions and terms which are fair and equitable; (4) to take such action in the letting of Government procurement contracts as is necessary to provide small-business concerns with an adequate incentive to engage in defense and essential civilian production; (5) to certify to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation the amount of funds required to convert to defense production any plant of a small-business concern; (6) to determine within any industry the firms which are to be designated "small-business concerns" for the purpose of this act; (7) to certify to a Government officer with respect to the competency, as to capacity and credit, of any small-business concern or concerns to perform a specific procurement contract; (8) to obtain from any Federal procurement or financing agency reports concerning the letting of contracts and subcontracts, or the making of loans, to small-business concerns; (9) to obtain from suppliers of materials information pertaining to the method of filling orders and the bases for allocating their supply whenever it appears small-business concerns are unable to get materials for defense or essential civilian purposes; (10) to make studies and recommendations to appropriate Federal agencies to insure a fair and equitable share of materials, supplies, and equipment for small-business concerns; (11) to consult and cooperate with all Government agencies for the purpose of insuring that small-business concerns shall receive fair and reasonable treatment from such agencies.

Section 8 (a): This subsection provides that certification of a small-business concern by the Corporation as to its competency with respect to capacity and credit shall be conclusive.

Section 8 (b): This subsection effectuates the congressional policy that a fair share of Government contracts shall be placed with small-business concerns. Any such small-business concern shall receive any award or contract, or any part thereof, if the Corporation and the contracting procurement agencies determine such action to be in the interest of mobilizing the Nation's full productive capacity in the national-defense program.

Section 9: This section provides that the Corporation shall make a report every 60 days to the President and to the Congress.

Section 10: This section directs the Attorney General to make or to request the Federal Trade Commission to make surveys to ascertain factors tending to eliminate competition and injure small business in connection with the defense effort.

Section 11: This section provides that the Corporation shall be subject to the provisions of the Government Corporations Control Act.

COMPARISON OF BILL CREATING SMALL DEFENSE PLANTS CORPORATION WITH 1942 ACT CREATING SMALLER WAR PLANTS CORPORATION

The sections contained in the present bill are modeled rather closely on sections contained in the so-called Small Business Mobilization Act of 1942. The 1942 act created the Smaller War Plants Corporation in section 4 thereof, and provided for servicing of its loans by RFC in section 5. The 1942 act also, in sections 1, 2, 3, and 5, conferred certain small-business functions on the Chairman of the War Production Board, which for the most part and for all practical purposes came to be exercised in time by the Chairman of the Smaller War Plants Corporation.

Thus, the first six sections of the Small Business Mobilization Act of 1942 contain a body of law which has been drawn on, with a few changes and a few supplements, to draft the present bill.

The following shows the comparative distribution of sections:

Present bill	1942 act
Section 1
Section 2	Section 4 (a) to (e)
Section 3	Section 4 (f)
Section 4	Section 4 (g)
Section 5	Section 6
Section 6	Section 1
Section 7	Section 2
Section 8	Section 3
Section 9	Section 5
Section 10
Section 11

SECTION BY SECTION COMPARISON

Section 1 of bill: This provides that the act may be cited as the "Small Business Defense Plants Act of 1950." The 1942 act provided for no official name, although it came to be known as the Small Business Mobilization Act.

Section 2 (a): This provides for the creation of the Small Defense Plants Corporation, instead of Smaller War Plants Corporation created by section 4 (a) of the 1942 act. The Corporation is to be created under the Defense Production Act of 1950 i. e., by the President, instead of being created outright.

Section 2 (b): This provides for a $500,000,000 revolving fund to finance the new Corporation. Section 4 (b) of the 1942 act provided for capital stock of $150,000,000 later increased to $350,000,000. The revolving-fund method is now preferred to the capital-stock method.

Section 2 (c): This provides that the Board of Directors be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, instead of by the Chairman of the War Production Board, as provided in section 4 (c) of the 1942 act. The only qualification specified in section 4 (c) of the 1942 act was that the directors be "deemed to be familiar with the problems of small business." Said section also provided for appointment of the chairman by the board members. No salaries for directors were specified in the 1942 act, although the salaries paid were substantially less than those specified in the present bill.

Section 2 (d): This follows almost exactly the wording of section 4 (d) of the 1942 act. There are only two exceptions. First, the new Corporation is necessarily given a different termination date than SWPC. Secondly, the bill substitutes the phrase "select and employ," in place of "select, employ, and fix the compensation of," as used in the 1942 act. The reason is to make clear that employees must be selected pursuant to the Classification Act and similar controlling legislation.

Section 2 (e): This follows the exact wording of section 4 (e) of the 1942 act.

Section 3 (a) (1): This follows the exact wording of section 4 (f) (1) of the 1942 act, with two exceptions. First, there is the addition of the phrase, "including the acquisition of land," after the phrase, "finance plant construction, conversion, or expansion." This merely adds expressly what is already implied as is evidenced by the references to "such land" in sections 4 (f) (2) and 4 (f) (3) of the 1942 act. Secondly, the power is conferred for "defense or essential civilian purposes," instead of "war or essential civilian purposes."

Section 3 (a) (2): This follows the exact wording of section 4 (f) (2) of the 1942 act.

Section 3 (a) (3), section 3 (a) (4), section 3 (a) (5): These follow the exact wording of section 4 (f) (3), section 4 (f) (4), and section 4 (f) (5) of the 1942 act.

Section 3 (b): This follows the exact wording of the balance of section 4 (f) of the 1942 act, with two exceptions. First, the certification is to be made, and the terms specified, by the new Corporation, instead of by the Chairman of the War Production Board. Secondly, the certification may be made "to any officer of the Government having procurement powers," which has the same meaning, in fewer words, as the 1942 act.

Section 4: This follows exactly the wording of section 4 (g) of the 1942 act with two exceptions. First, the section numbering is section 4 (a), 4 (b), and 4 (c), respectively, instead of section 4 (g) (1), 4 (g) (2), and 4 (g) (3) in the 1942 act. Secondly, the statutory references to the Criminal Code in section 4 (g) (3) of the 1942 act are changed to the appropriate references to title 18 of the present United States Code.

Section 5: This is exactly the same wording as section 6 of the 1942 act with two essential exceptions. First, the 1942 act, section 6, provided that the corporation "shall" transfer the loan, advance, etc. to another agency to service and administer same, whereas the bill states "may." Secondly, the servicing agency named in the 1942 act was Defense Plants Corporation, a then subsidiary of Reconstruction Finance Corporation, whereas the servicing agency named in the bill is the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Section 6 (a): Section 6 (a) of the bill is a modified version of the first paragraph of section 1 of the 1942 act. The duty is assigned to the new Corporation, instead of to the Chairman of the War Production Board, acting through a deputy appointed by him. The purpose is for "national defense and essential civilian production," instead of "war production" mentioned in section 1 of the 1942 act.

Section 6 (b): Section 6 (b) is almost entirely the identical wording of the second paragraph of section 1 of the 1942 act. Again, however, the duty is imposed on the new Corporation, instead of the Chairman of the War Production Board, and again it is related to "national defense and essential civilian purposes," with no reference to "war" production.

Section 7: Section 7 of the bill follows closely section 2 of the 1942 act. There are two main exceptions. First, the power is assigned to the new Corporation, instead of the Chairman of the War Production Board. Secondly, the purposes are not stated to be for "war" production, as specified in section 2 of the 1942 act, but for defense and essential civilian production. Other differences in the subsections may be noted as follows:

Section 7 (1): This is patterned on section 2 (1) of the 1942 act. However, the inventory study authorized is limited to small-business firms, whereas the 1942 act has no such limitation.

Section 7 (2): This is patterned on section 2 (2) of the 1942 act. However, the power conferred is "to consult and cooperate with," instead of "to direct the attention of" procurement officers, as provided for in the 1942 act.

Section 7 (3): This is patterned on section 2 (3) of the 1942 act, in regard to procuring information as to the extent of subcontracting to small concerns by prime contractors. However, the language is somewhat tighter than the 1942 act.

Section 7 (4): This is patterned on section 2 (4) of the 1942 act. The language, however, is tightened somewhat.

Section 7 (5): This is almost the exact wording of section 2 (5) of the 1942 act. The only exception is to eliminate the Corporation itself as one of the agencies to which a certification can be directed—inasmuch as the Corporation under the bill makes the certification.

Section 7 (6): This is a new provision expressly authorizing the new Corporation to determine in each industry which enterprises are to be designated "small-business concerns." SWPC, under the 1942 act, made such determinations without express authorization.

Section 7 (7): This is the exact wording of section 2 (6) of the 1942 act.

Section 7 (8): This is virtually the same wording as section 2 (7) of the 1942 act.

Section 7 (9): This is a new provision authorizing the obtaining of allocation information from suppliers themselves whenever it appears that small-business concerns are unable to obtain materials.

Section 7 (10): This is patterned on the first part of section 2 (8) of the 1942 act. However, it goes further than authorizing studies, and provides for the making of recommendations to Federal agencies—to insure a fair and equitable share of supplies to small-business concerns.

Section 7 (11): This is patterned on the second part of section 2 (8) of the 1942 act, in regard to insuring that small-business concerns receive fair and equitable treatment from Government agencies.

Section 8 (a): This is virtually the same as the first sentence of section 3 of the 1942 act. Again, the power is given by the bill to the Corporation, instead of the Chairman of the War Production Board. The second sentence of section 3 of the 1942 act is omitted in this bill.

Section 8 (b): This is a new provision effectuating congressional policy that small business receive a fair share of all Government procurement. It expresses congressional policy in language which is positive and affirmative rather than in the negative language of the 1942 act. Small business shall receive contracts if determination is made jointly by the Corporation and the procuring agency that it is in the interest of mobilizing the Nation's full productive capacity in the national defense program.

Section 9: This is the exact wording of section 5 of the 1942 act except that the report of operations under the act is made by the Corporation, instead of by the Chairman of the War Production Board.

Section 10: This is a new provision, not contained in the 1942 act, in reference to the antitrust laws.

Section 11: This also is a new provision placing the Corporation under the Government Corporation Control Act.

SENATE

THURSDAY, JULY 27, 1950

(Legislative day of Thursday, July 20, 1950)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

The Chaplain, Rev. Frederick Brown Harris, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Our Father God, Thou hast so formed our being that all the highways of our hearts lead to Thy face and our deepest cravings are satisfied only in Thee. Turning aside for this hallowed moment from the violence and turbulence of human strife, we would hush both the words of the wise and the prattle of the foolish.

Strengthen us with Thy might that we may bear our full part in the decisive struggle that has shadowed these days. Facing, now, unfinished tasks calling for courage and sacrifice and wisdom, upon the President of the United States, the Vice President, the Congress, and all public servants who, sharing the heavy load of these epochal days, shape our policy and guide our destiny, pour in double measure Thy enabling grace. Make our bodies Thy temple and our hearts Thine altar where the sacred fire ever burns. We ask it in the Redeemer's name. Amen.

"To the Honorable Harry S. Truman, President of the United States of America, and to the Honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress Assembled:

"We, your memorialists, the Senate and the House of Representatives of the State of Washington in legislative session assembled, most respectfully represent and petition as follows:

"Whereas the war emergency has placed an undue amount of wear and burden upon the highways of the State of Washington because of the movement of army matériel and equipment; and

"Whereas Fort Lewis and other military reservations and airfields are situated in the State of Washington; and

"Whereas Fort Lewis is so situated that the movement of matériel and equipment to and from Fort Lewis results in an especially heavy amount of wear and strain upon the highways of the State of Washington; and

"Whereas much of such movement is in the form of excess weights over and beyond the legal weights established by law and have caused, are causing, and will continue to cause an undue amount of damage to the highway of the State of Washington; and

"Whereas the United States Government has in the past recognized such excess use and deterioration of the highways by making suitable allowances to compensate the State of Washington for such use and deterioration:

"Now, therefore, your memorialists respectfully pray that the Congress of the United States speedily take appropriate action to recompense the State of Washington for such wear and deterioration of its highways; and be it

"Resolved, That copies of this memorial be immediately transmitted to the Honorable Harry S. Truman, President of the United States, the Secretary of the United States Senate, the Clerk of the United States House of Representatives, and to each Member of Congress from the State of Washington.

"Passed the house July 20, 1950.

"CHAS. W. HODDE,
"Speaker of the House.

"Passed the senate July 21, 1950.

"VICTOR A. MEYERS,
"President of the Senate."

A resolution of the House of Representatives of the State of Washington; to the Committee on Foreign Relations:

"We, the House of Representatives of the State of Washington, in legislative session assembled, most respectfully represent as follows:

"Whereas the recent action of the Government of North Korea in making an unprovoked attack upon the Republic of South Korea has shocked the conscience of the peoples in all the freedom-loving nations of the world; and

"Whereas such attack is against the thought and action of the United Nations; and

"Whereas the United Nations has wholeheartedly condemned such action; and

"Whereas it was entirely proper that aid be given to the Republic of South Korea in resisting the invading forces; and

"Whereas the President of the United States has taken the lead in resisting such invasion by force and arms and military might: Now, therefore, be it

"Resolved, That we, the House of Representatives of the State of Washington, in legislative session assembled, do hereby announce and declare that we approve the action which the President has taken in sending military aid to the defense of the Republic of South Korea; and be it further

"Resolved, That copies of this memorial be sent to the Honorable Harry S. Truman, President of the United States and to each Member of Congress from the State of Washington."

MAIL DELIVERIES—RESOLUTION OF THE EASTERN LABOR PRESS CONFERENCE

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, I present for appropriate reference and ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a resolution adopted by the Eastern Labor Press Conference dealing with the matter of mail deliveries.

There being no objection, the resolution was referred to the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

The following resolution was adopted unanimously by the ninth annual session of the Eastern Labor Press Conference in Washington, D. C., June 10, 1950:

"Whereas the recent Post Office regulations which curtail the operations of the Post Office Department to a drastic degree have affected delivery of the labor press along with all other mail; and

"Whereas the personnel of the Post Office Department is suffering from this curtailment in service through layoffs and excessive duties: Therefore be it

"Resolved, That the Eastern Labor Press Conference in annual meeting goes on record in opposition to the unjustified cut in the Post Office Department personnel, with its consequent delay and curtailment in the handling of the labor press publications; and be it further

"Resolved, That the Postmaster General and the chairmen of the Senate and House Committees on Post Office and Civil Service be urged to reconsider the unjustified results of this method of attempting to saddle the employees, and the public, with the costs of carrying on the Post Office services."

Report of committee: The committee feels that this resolution is of outstanding importance. Curtailment of the postal service places on the devoted employees of the Post Office Department an unjust burden entirely unworthy of our Federal Government as an enlightened employer. In addition, the curtailment of the postal service is highly injurious to the labor press and to the public and to the national economy as a whole.

RUTH TAYLOR,
Secretary.

INCREASE IN LIMIT OF EXPENDITURES BY COMMITTEE ON RULES AND ADMINISTRATION

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I have five resolutions unanimously ordered reported by the Committee on Rules and Administration which I hope will be adopted by unanimous consent.

From the Committee on Rules and Administration I report favorably, without amendment, Senate Resolution 311, and I submit a report (No. 2175) thereon. I ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. WHERRY. Reserving the right to object, will the Senator give an explanation of the resolution.

Mr. HAYDEN. It increases the amount of money available to the Senate Subcommittee on Campaign Expenditures by $25,000.

Mr. WHERRY. I have no objection.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

There being no objection, the resolution (S. Res. 311) submitted by Mr. GILLETTE on July 20, 1950, was considered and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the limit of expenditures authorized under Senate Resolution 250, Eighty-first Congress, second session, agreed to April 13, 1950 (authorizing the expenditure of funds and the employment of assistants by the Committee on Rules and Administration, or any authorized subcommittee thereof, in carrying out the duties imposed upon it by subsection (o) (1) (D) of rule XXV of the Standing Rules of the Senate) is hereby increased by $25,000.

ADDITIONAL PERSONNEL FOR COMMITTEE ON LABOR AND PUBLIC WELFARE

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, from the Committee on Rules and Administration, I report favorably, without amendment, Senate Resolution 309, and ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution.

Mr. WHERRY. Reserving the right to object, as I understand, it provides only for a continuation of the personnel the committee now has. Is that correct?

Mr. HAYDEN. Yes; two persons.

Mr. WHERRY. And it continues in effect until what time?

Mr. HAYDEN. Until August of next year.

Mr. WHERRY. Does the Senator care to comment on whether in the future this appropriation might be handled by legislative action?

Mr. HAYDEN. It is expected it will be.

Mr. WHERRY. And the main purpose of the resolution is to continue the item under the contingent fund because it is not now under the legislative fund?

Mr. HAYDEN. That is correct.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

There being no objection, the resolution (S. Res. 309) submitted by Mr. THOMAS of Utah on July 12, 1950, was considered and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the authority of the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare, or any duly authorized subcommittee thereof; under Senate Resolution 215, Eighty-first Congress, agreed to February 9, 1950, is hereby continued until August 31, 1951.

INCREASE IN LIMIT OF EXPENDITURES BY SELECT COMMITTEE ON SMALL BUSINESS

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, from the Committee on Rules and Administration I report favorably, with an amendment, Senate Resolution 315, to provide an increase in the limit of expenditures by the Select Committee on Small Business, and ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, reserving the right to object; did the Small Business Committee get a legislative budget?

Mr. HAYDEN. It did, but this is the $10,000 customarily paid to a standing committee out of the contingent fund of the Senate.

Mr. WHERRY. I understand this $10,000 is paid out of the contingent fund to provide for the expenses of the Small Business Committee. Is it not to be used prior to the time the legislative budget takes effect?

Mr. HAYDEN. That is correct.

Mr. WHERRY. So next year the Small Business Committee will be on the legislative budget and not on the contingent fund of the Senate?

Mr. HAYDEN. Yes.

Mr. WHERRY. I have no objection.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to the consideration of the resolution (S. Res. 315), submitted by Mr. SPARKMAN on July 21, 1950.

The amendment of the Committee on Rules and Administration was, in line 7, after the word "section" to strike out "1 of S. Res. 722, agreed to May 26, 1950," and insert "134 (a) of Public Law 601, Seventy-ninth Congress", so as to make the resolution read:

Resolved, That the Select Committee on Small Business created by Senate Resolution 58, agreed to February 20, 1950, is authorized to expend from the contingent fund of the Senate the sum of $10,000 in addition to any other amount available to said committee, for the purpose of holding hearings, reporting such hearings, and making investigations as authorized by section 134 (a) of Public Law 601, Seventy-ninth Congress.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, what does the public law referred to provide for?

Mr. HAYDEN. That is the public law which now provides $10,000 for a committee.

Mr. WHERRY. I have no objection.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

INCREASE IN LIMIT OF EXENDITURES BY COMMITTEE ON INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, from the Committee on Rules and Administration I report favorably, with amendments, Senate Resolution 308, authorizing an increase in the limit of expenditures by the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, and I submit a report (No. 2174) thereon. I ask unanimous consent for immediate consideration of the resolution.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I ask the distinguished Senator to give an explanation of the resolution.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, the resolution relates to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, which has a very large piece of work; namely, to investigate the airline industry, the merchant marine, and the domestic land and water transportation and radio, telegraph, and telephone communications.

The amount originally proposed in the resolution was $75,000. The committee proposes to reduce that to $69,000, to provide funds to permit the committee to carry on the work until the next year.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I understand that this resolution provides for a continuation of a matter already authorized, and is in connection with appropriations already made. The purpose of the resolution is to have that work continued, as I understand.

Mr. HAYDEN. That is correct.

Mr. WHERRY. I have no objection.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution (S. Res. 308), which had been reported from the Committee on Rules and Administration with amendments, on page 1, in line 7, to strike out "$75,000" and insert "$69,000;" and in line 9, to strike out "March 1, 1951" and insert "February 28, 1951", so as to make the resolution read:

Resolved, That the limit of expenditure contained in Senate Resolution 50, agreed to April 11, 1949 (authorizing the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce to investigate problems relating to the airline industry, the United States merchant marine, domestic land and water transportation, and radio, telegraph, and telephone communications), hereby is increased by $69,000, and the time within which the committee may complete the said investigation hereby is extended to February 28, 1951.

The amendments were agreed to.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

INCREASE OF COMPENSATION OF INDEXERS OF CONGRESSIONAL RECORD

Mr. HAYDEN. From the Committee on Rules and Administration, I report favorably, without amendment, House Concurrent Resolution 233, and I submit a report (No. 2176) thereon. I ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will be read by title.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. A concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 233) increasing the compensation of employees of the Government Printing Office engaged in the preparation of the indexes of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the concurrent resolution?

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I ask the distinguished Senator for an explanation of the concurrent resolution.

Mr. HAYDEN. The concurrent resolution is one which the House passed, in order to provide for the proper compensation of those who prepare the indexes to the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. They perform a very valuable service. Half of the proposed increase is to be paid out of the contingent fund of the House, and half out of the contingent fund of the Senate.

The employees affected are old-time employees, and they perform a very valuable service. The committee was unanimous in recommending the enactment of this measure.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the concurrent resolution?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the concurrent resolution.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I should like to ask one question. Yesterday I heard the testimony, and I think this is a worthy cause, and I think the appropriation provided in this case is warranted.

However, I wish to call the attention of the distinguished Senator from Arizona to the fact that other departments were also mentioned yesterday, in respect to eliminating inequities of overtime work. I shall not now go into a discourse in regard to those whose situations should be looked into; but I had particular reference to our own Official Reporters organization, which I understand is under contract. While we are correcting an inequity in the case involved in the concurrent resolution which we are now considering, I believe further study should be made in regard to all these inequities.

Mr. HAYDEN. I entirely concur with the Senator with respect to the Official Reporters of the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the concurrent resolution?

The concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 233) was considered and agreed to.

BILLS INTRODUCED

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. SMITH of New Jersey:

S. 3931. A bill for the relief of Irmgard Kohler; and

S. 3932. A bill for the relief of Tu Do Chau (also known as Szetu Dju or Anna Szetu); to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. SALTONSTALL (by request):

S. 3933. A bill to amend chapter 85, title 28, United States Code, by adding a new section 1360 relating to jurisdiction of district courts over certain military preference cases; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. LEHMAN:

S. 3934. A bill for the relief of Fuel Pietruszynski; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. MAGNUSON:

S. 3935. A bill for the relief of John W. Smith; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. TYDINGS:

S. 3936. A bill to provide family allowances for the dependents of enlisted members of the Armed Forces of the United States, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Armed Services.

By Mr. EASTLAND:

S. 3937. A bill to amend title 18, United States Code; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

(Mr. KEM (for himself and Mr. DONNELL) introduced Senate bill 3938, to provide for designation of the United States Veterans' Administration hospital to be constructed at St. Louis, Mo., as the Dwight F. Davis Veterans' Hospital, which was referred to the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare, and appears under a separate heading.)

DWIGHT F. DAVIS VETERANS' HOSPITAL, ST. LOUIS, MO.

Mr. KEM. Mr. President, there is now being constructed in St. Louis, Mo., a United States Veterans' Administration hospital. On behalf of my colleague the senior Senator from Missouri [Mr. DONNELL] and myself, I introduce for appropriate reference a bill to provide for designation of that facility as the Dwight F. Davis Veterans' Hospital in honor of the late soldier-statesman of that name.

Colonel Davis was a native of St. Louis, Mo. He served in World War I with great distinction and was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action at Baulny and Chandron Farm. He also was awarded the Legion of Honor by the Government of France.

Later, he served his country well in important Government positions, notably as Secretary of War and as Governor General of the Philippines.

He was prominent in philanthropic work with such organizations as the Tenement House Association and the Society for Prevention of Tuberculosis. He was one of the founders and later commander of St. Louis Post, No. 4, of the American Legion. As park commissioner in St. Louis he took down the keep-off the-grass signs and made the parks a place for comfort, recreation, and enjoyment of the people. This action was typical of him. Those interested in sports will recall him as the donor of the famous Davis Cup for international tennis competition.

It is our belief that it would be a source of pride and satisfaction to the people of the city of St. Louis and of the State of Missouri to have the new veterans' hospital bear the name of Dwight F. Davis.

The bill (S. 3088) to provide for designation of the United States Veterans' Administration hospital to be constructed at St. Louis, Mo., as the Dwight F. Davis Veterans' Hospital, introduced by Mr. KEM (for himself and Mr. DONNELL), was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare.

GENERAL APPROPRIATIONS—AMENDMENTS

Mr. BUTLER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the amendment intended to be proposed by Mr. BRIDGES (for himself and other Senators) to the bill (H. R. 7786) making appropriations for the support of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1951, and for other purposes, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

Mr. WHERRY submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the amendment intended to be proposed by Mr. BRIDGES (for himself and other Senators) to House bill 7786, supra, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

TRANSPORTATION IN INTERSTATE COMMERCE OF CERTAIN FOREIGN MOTION PICTURES

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. Mr. President, I submit for appropriate reference a resolution, which reads as follows:

Resolved, That it is the sense of the Senate that motion pictures which have been produced or directed by persons who (1) were active members of the Italian Fascist Party, or the German Nazi Party, at any time during the period in which the United States was at war with Italy or Germany respectively, or (2) are known to have collaborated with German SS troops in Germany or Italy at anytime subsequent to December 11, 1941 and prior to May 8, 1945, should not be transported in interstate commerce in the United States for exhibition purposes.

The producers of films have an unusual opportunity to spread propaganda and doctrines inimical to democratic government.

Such reprehensible characters as Roberto Rossellini should not be producing films for the American people. Rossellini became an active Fascist in 1942 and when Germany took over he was close friend and associate of Osvaldo Picchi, who in turn was denounced by the Allied Court for his connection with the infamous Nazi storm troopers—the Nazi SS forces.

These men and others of their ilk are the enemies of the United States and the things we believe in. If we are wise we will keep them and their films and their pernicious influence away from our shores.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will be received and appropriately referred.

The resolution (S. Res. 321) was referred to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a statement by Walter Winchell, entitled "Report to the People" be printed in the RECORD at this point as part of my remarks.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT BY WALTER WINCHELL IN NEW YORK

REPORT TO THE PEOPLE

This column has repeatedly warned the State and Justice Departments and the people that large numbers of Nazis and other Hitlerats have been creeping into this country. So far as Government security agencies are concerned most of our warnings have fallen on deaf ears. Here are a few instances in which we succeeded:

Last year we documented a case against Walter Gieseking, the pianist-collaborator who played Nazi tunes for Hitler. Rather than face Department of Justice investigation Herr Gieseking scurried back to Europe * * * We proved that Ferenc Vajta, the Hungarianazi, was a leader in the Hungarian Arrow Cross (Fascist) Party. The Department of Justice then nailed him. A few months ago Vajta left the United States "voluntarily" for South America * * * We stripped Edward Sittler, the Nazi radio official who tried to stay in this country after he completed his testimony as a witness in several treason trials. Sittler squealed that he wanted to become an American citizen again. The heel was born here. He is now awaiting deportation hearings * * * Our most recent target was Lajos Marschalko, another Hungarian who, during the war, poison-penned newspaper articles which urged the shooting of captured American aviators. Marschalko is now at Ellis Island awaiting Uncle Sam's boot by deportation order.

But the Nazi parade into the United States continues. On May 23 of this year Karol Sidor sneaked across the border from Canada as a visitor. This democracy hater was given a visa by an American consul in Montreal, despite the fact that his name was on a United States State Department black list. There was good reason for black-listing Karol Sidor. Look at his record:

After the Munich-Hitler rape in September 1938 Czechoslovakia was divided into three states. Karol Sidor was National Vice Premier. Joseph Tiso was Premier of one of the states—Slovakia—until March 10, 1939. Two days later Sidor became Premier of Slovakia. Two days after that the Nazis walked into Czechoslovakia. Tiso immediately became the Hitler-puppet Premier of the Slovak Government and Karol Sidor his Minister of Interior.

Tiso's record as a Nazi tool: First Premier, later President of Slovakia, he forced his country into the Nazi economy and war apparatus. For his crimes Tiso was arrested after the war and tried as a Nazi. He was convicted and hanged in April 1947 by the Czechs before Russia seized their little democracy. Note that date—April, 1947—because Karol Sidor and others like him now claim that Tiso was a victim of Communist persecution. A convenient excuse behind which Nazis like to hide.

During this same Tiso-Nazi regime (from July 1939 to 1945) Karol Sidor was a diplomat in the Slovakian foreign service. His government declared war on the United States, by Hitler's order) and in his 6 years as an ambassador for Slovakia Sidor was an important cog in the machinery of Axis diplomacy.

After Munich, Karol Sidor and Joseph Tiso transformed the Hlinka (until then a minority political group) into a totalitarian party. They suppressed or annihilated all opposing parties, using a strong-arm gang of storm troopers, the infamous Hlinka Guard. Sidor was the organizer and first leader of the Hlinka Guard. The terrors and outrages committed by Hitler's storm troopers in Nazi Germany were duplicated by the Hlinka Guard in Slovakia.

Like his boss Tiso, Karol Sidor was accused (after the war's end) of collaboration with the Nazis. Unlike Tiso, who was nabbed in Czechoslovakia, Sidor stayed on in Italy where he had a diplomatic post and thus avoided punishment. In October 1947 he was tried in absentia by the Czechs national court, convicted of collaboration, and sentenced to prison for 20 years. Note that the Commies had not yet seized Czechoslovakia, which was still a democracy under President Eduard Benes.

Today Herr Sidor roams freely in the United States, thumping his chest and posing as a good anti-Communist—conveniently forgetting his pro-Nazi record. He has duped many good citizens of Scranton, Pa. (where his daughter lives), into helping him. He has even made passes at a United States Congressman to introduce a bill in the House of Representatives which would allow him to remain in the United States as a permanent resident. Of course, Sidor didn't tell this Congressman that in February 1939 he sent a delegation to Berlin for discussions with Gen. Hermann Goering, and we'll bet the Congressman doesn't know that on January 25, 1945 (when the United State was at war with Hitler), Sidor was responsible for a statement to the effect that the Slovak people were the friends of Germany.

The State Department approved Sidor's visa in May after he asked permission to deliver one speech before a Slovak group in Cleveland. That speech has come and gone, but not Sidor, who has a half-dozen public-speaking engagements scheduled between now and August 6 in Pennsylvania, West Virginia, and Wisconsin.

Here's the proof of State Department stupidity in this case: Nine months ago Herve J. L'Heureux, Chief of the State Department's Visa Division, in Washington, D. C., wrote as follows: "The records of the State Department show that the American consulate general at Naples, Italy, refused a visa to Mr. Sidor under the authority of title 22, section 53.33, of the Code of Federal Regulations, as a person whose entry would be prejudicial to the interests of the United States." One month later George L. Brandt, American consulate general in Naples, wrote a letter stating that his office had refused an immigration visa to Karol Sidor on the ground that Sidor's admission would be harmful to the interests of the United States.

If Karol Sidor was no good in the eyes of the United States State Department in September 1949, what made him a desirable visitor in May 1950? Why didn't the American consul in Montreal (who O. K.'d Sidor's visa application) know as much about the man's rotten record as the American consul in Naples, Italy? Or did he?

In short, this is just one more instance of blundering red tape, or perhaps it's part of an idiotic plan on the part of some State Department officials to give American shelter to the killers of American soldiers. Either way, Secretary of State Acheson, you try explaining it to Gold-Star Mothers and crippled GI's in vets hospitals. We can't.

CONFIRMATION OF NOMINATIONS IN THE NATIONAL GUARD AND REGULAR ARMY

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, from the Committee on Armed Services, I report favorably, as in executive session, certain routine nominations in the National Guard of the United States of the Army of the United States and in the Regular Army. All the nominations relate to uniformed men, no civilians. The report by the committee regarding them is unanimous.

Because of the war situation, I think it imperative that all these nominations be acted on promptly.

Therefore, I ask unanimous consent, as in executive session, for the immediate consideration and confirmation of the nominations.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, reserving the right to object—and I shall not object—I wish the RECORD to show again that these are routine nominations, and that no civilians are included in the list. In order to save the expense of printing and to save time, no objection will be made, so far as the minority is concerned.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Maryland? The Chair hears none, and, as in executive session, the nominations will be received, considered, and confirmed.

THE PRESIDENT'S POINT 4 PROGRAM—LETTER FROM DR. FRANK C. LAUBACH AND GEORGE K. BATT

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. President, under date of July 19 I received a communication from Dr. Frank C. Laubach and Mr. George K. Batt, who wrote to me on the stationery of the Laymen's Movement for a Christian World, Inc., who set forth in their brief letter a cogent argument supporting the point 4 program as a part of our total effort to meet the challenge of both the cold and hot wars now facing us.

As I am personally acquainted with both the gentlemen who signed this letter, and appreciate the sincerity of their approach and the approach of their associates, I ask unanimous consent that the letter be inserted at this point in my remarks, in the body of the RECORD, as an important contribution to the discussion of this particular subject.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE LAYMEN'S MOVEMENT
FOR A CHRISTIAN WORLD, INC.,
Benton, Pa., July 19, 1950.

The Honorable H. ALEXANDER SMITH,
The United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR SMITH: Please read this thoughtfully. If it is right, it is of immense importance.

The most ardent hope of the Communists is that we shall get so obsessed with military preparations that we shall abandon point 4, as a result of the Korean war. If we give up point 4, Russia will eventually win the world, even though we win the Korean campaign. Indeed it is possible that Russia will withdraw from Korea after giving us such a hard fight that we will conclude that our military strength alone can save the world. She hopes that we shall be stupid enough to believe that.

For her main weapon has been and will continue to be propaganda, infiltration, conspiracy, sabotage, and revolution, at which she has had more experience and better success than any other country in history. She has won a third of the world with it. We cannot check it with counter propaganda alone, with what we call "truth." The truth will not help us unless we also help the people who are hungry, dissatisfied, sick, and underprivileged. Our deed will prove their propaganda to be lies.

We are in a vulnerable position because we are fantastically prosperous, with countless millions of tons of surplus going to waste in our country, as the Reader's Digest and other magazines are revealing to the world. Where people are in poverty that is enough ammunition for the Communists. But if we are helping those people to become prosperous by showing them how to employ their resources they will feel grateful. It is the only way in which we can maintain the moral leadership of the nations.

The churches of the United States and Canada have organized a committee to search through the churches for the finest Christian men in America, possessing technical skills, and are offering these men to the United States and the United Nations. If men of outstanding character and a love of humanity go forth by the hundreds or by the thousands, to help unselfishly, they will represent America in her best and most appealing role. Then if we make loans, public or private, we shall be able to make sure that those loans are wisely and honestly used. These men will be able to encourage integrity into the world, where it is now sadly lacking.

All this those smart poker players in Moscow see, and they dread point 4 more than they dread our atom bombs. If they can't block point 4 they will lose the world. They hope to jostle us into covering the planet with American soldiers and officers, trained to win wars, but not qualified to win a war against discontent and misery. Let's not stupidly fall into that trap.

We write you with a heavy heart but not without hope that God can still lead us out of our bewilderment without the mass killing of total war. He can and will speak through you. We pray that He will. May we hear from you?

Faithfully yours,

FRANK C. LAUBACH.
GEORGE K. BATT.

P. S.—We are indeed grateful for the report in Tuesday's Herald Tribune that point 4 appropriations have been restored to thirty-four and one half millions by the Senate Appropriations Committee.

TELEGRAMS RELATING TO REPORT ON DISLOYALTY INVESTIGATION

Mr. McMAHON. Mr. President, I have received a telegram from Joseph Barnes, who is a resident of Warren, Conn., and who was mentioned in the Foreign Relations Committee report. I replied to him by telegram, and I have received a telegraphic reply from him. I have also received a telegram from Jim Warburg, of Greenwich, Conn. I ask unanimous consent to have the telegrams incorporated in the RECORD at this point.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, it was a little difficult to understand what the distingushed Senator from Connecticut said. I should like to ask, if I may—and I am not going to object to the insertion of the telegrams in the RECORD—the name of the one involved. I am interested in one particular person mentioned in the report. Is the Senator going to make a report on that subject.

Mr. McMAHON. Oh, no.

Mr. WHERRY. That is not the purpose?

Mr. McMAHON. No.

There being no objection, the telegrams were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

NEW YORK, N. Y., July 18, 1950.

Senator BRIEN MCMAHON,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:

I have wired Senator TYDINGS following telegram: "Associated Press states that your subcommittee has released testimony by Louis F. Budenz last April charging General Carlson and myself with being Communists. Since your committee specifically repudiated other charges made before it the release of this charge without comment leaves possible inference that committee gives it credibility. I can and do deny this charge unreservedly but I would like to learn from you what recourse is now open to a citizen so slandered publicly through your subcommittee release. General Carlson is dead, but I am alive and definitely kicking." I would like to ask the same question of you as Senator from Connecticut where I live.

JOSEPH BARNES.

JULY 20, 1950.

JOSEPH BARNES,
New York City:

Retel. I fully understand how you feel and, believe me, I deeply regret that you didn't get an opportunity to submit a denial as the charges were published. Why not send me a statement immediately and I will give it to the press and put it in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

BRIEN MCMAHON,
United States Senator.

TORRINGTON, CONN., July 21, 1950.

Senator BRIEN MCMAHON,
United States Senate:

Thank you for your reply and your offer. I am delighted to repeat that I can and do deny unreservedly charge that I am or have ever been a Communist. Since hearings ended without my having chance to get this on your record as you point out, I will naturally prefer your releasing these three telegrams and putting them in CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, of course, with any comment you may want to make.

JOSEPH BARNES.

GREENWICH, CONN., July 18, 1950.

Hon. BRIEN MCMAHON,
United States Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

Referring my previous telegram in view of your committee's splendid repudiation of charges against others cannot understand Associated Press report that your committee has released without comment Budenz allegation that General Carlson and Joseph Barnes were Communists. All I know about General Carlson is that he served his country well in time of war and is no longer here to defend himself. Barnes has wired Senator TYDINGS asking that committee repudiate Budenz statement. I most emphatically second this request and do not hesitate to say, knowing Barnes intimately and being proud to be his friend, that I would vouch for his loyalty as I would for my own. Best regards.

JIM WARBURG.

EXEMPTION FROM DUTY OF CERTAIN SOUND RECORDINGS IMPORTED BY THE DEPARTMENT OF STATE

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, yesterday the House of Representatives passed a bill, H. R. 8514. On June 8 the Senate passed an identical bill, S. 3545. The bills are identical in all respects. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the House bill, H. R. 8514.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate House bill 8514, coming over from the House of Representatives, which will be stated by title.

The bill (H. R. 8514) to amend the Tariff Act of 1930 to provide for exemption from duty of certain sound recordings imported by the Department of State, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the House bill?

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, will the distinguished Senator repeat what he said? My attention was diverted.

Mr. GEORGE. On June 8 the Senate passed a bill which is identical with House bill 8514, for which I ask present consideration. The bills are the same in all respects. I ask for the present consideration of the House bill, which the House of Representatives passed yesterday.

Mr. WHERRY. The distinguished Senator states that both bills are in exactly the same language?

Mr. GEORGE. In the same language.

Mr. WHERRY. I have no objection.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill (H. R. 8514) to provide for exemption from duty of certain sound recordings imported by the Department of State, and for other purposes, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMENDMENT OF INTERNAL REVENUE CODE RELATING TO TAXATION OF PERSONAL FINANCE COMPANIES—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I submit a conference report on House bill 6073, to amend section 501 (b) (6) of the Internal Revenue Code, relating to taxation of personal finance companies, and I ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The report will be read for the information of the Senate.

The report was read, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6073) to amend section 501 (b) (6) of the Internal Revenue Code, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the following: "That section 501 (b) (6) of the Internal Revenue Code is amended to read as follows:

"'(6) (A) A licensed personal finance company under State supervision, 80 per centum or more of the gross income of which is lawful interest received from loans made to individuals in accordance with the provisions of applicable State law if at least 60 per centum of such gross income is lawful interest (i) received from individuals each of whose indebtedness to such company did not at any time during the taxable year exceed in principal amount the limit prescribed for small loans by such law (or, if there is no such limit, $500), and (ii) not payable in advance or compounded and computed only on unpaid balances, and if the loans to a person, who is a shareholder in such company during the taxable year by or for whom 10 per centum or more in value of its outstanding stock is owned directly or indirectly (including in the case of an individual, stock owned by the members of his family as defined in section 503 (a) (2)), outstanding at any time during such year do not exceed $5,000 in principal amount; and

"'(B) A lending company, not otherwise excepted by section 501 (b), authorized to engage in the small loan business under one or more State statutes providing for the direct regulation of such business, 80 per centum or more of the gross income of which is lawful interest, discount or other authorized charges (i) received from loans maturing in not more than thirty-six months made to individuals in accordance with the provisions of applicable State law, and (ii) which do not, in the case of any individual loan, exceed in the aggregate an amount equal to simple interest at the rate of 3 per centum per month not payable in advance and computed only on unpaid balances, if at least 60 per centum of the gross income is lawful interest, discount or other authorized charges received from individuals each of whose indebtedness to such company did not at any time during the taxable year exceed in principal amount the limit prescribed for small loans by such law (or, if there is no such limit, $500), and if the deductions allowed to such company under section 23 (a) (relating to expenses), other than for compensation for personal services rendered by shareholders (including members of the shareholder's family as described in section 503 (a) (2)) constitute 15 per centum or more of its gross income, and the loans to a person, who is a shareholder in such company during the taxable year by or for whom 10 per centum or more in value of its outstanding stock is owned directly or indirectly (including in the case of an individual, stock owned by the members of his family as defined in section 503 (a) (2)), outstanding at any time during such year do not exceed $5,000 in principal amount.'

"SEC. 2. That section 501 (b) of the Internal Revenue Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"'(8) A finance company, actively and regularly engaged in the business of purchasing or discounting accounts or notes receivable or installment obligations, or making loans secured by any of the foregoing or by tangible personal property, at least 80 per centum of the gross income of which is derived from such business in accordance with the provisions of applicable State law or does not constitute personal holding company income as defined in section 502, if 60 per centum of the gross income is derived from one or more of the following classes of transactions:

"'(A) Purchasing or discounting accounts or notes receivable, or installment obligations evidenced or secured by contracts of conditional sale, chattel mortgages, or chattel lease agreements, arising out of the sale of goods or services in the course of the transferor's trade or business;

"'(B) Making loans, maturing in not more than thirty-six months, to, and for the business purposes of, persons engaged in trade or business, secured by—

"'(i) accounts or notes receivable, or installment obligations, described in subparagraph (a) above;

"'(ii) warehouse receipts, bills of lading, trust receipts, chattel mortgages, bailments, or factor's liens, covering or evidencing the borrower's inventories;

"'(iii) a chattel mortgage on property used in the borrower's trade or business; except loans to any single borrower which for more than ninety days in the taxable year of the company exceed 15 per centum of the average funds employed by the company during such taxable year;

"'(C) Making loans, in accordance with the provisions of applicable State law, secured by chattel mortgages on tangible personal property, the original amount of each of which is not less than the limit referred to in, or prescribed by, subsection (b) (6) (A) (i), and the aggregate principal amount of which owing by any one borrower to the company at any time during the taxable year of the company does not exceed $5,000; and

"'(D) If 30 per centum or more of the gross income of the company is derived from one or more of the classes of transactions described in subparagraphs (A), (B) and (C) of this paragraph, purchasing, discounting, or lending upon the security of, installment obligations of individuals where the transferor or borrower acquired such obligations either in transactions of the classes described in subparagraphs (A) and (C) of this paragraph or as a result of loans made by such transferor or borrower in accordance with the provisions of clauses (i) and (ii) of paragraph 6 (A) or of clauses (i) and (ii) of paragraph 6 (B) of this subsection, if the funds so supplied at all times bear an agreed ratio to the unpaid balance of the assigned installment obligations, and documents evidencing such obligations are held by the company; provided that the deductions allowable under subsection 23 (a) (relating to expenses), other than compensation for personal services rendered by shareholders (including members of the shareholder's family as described in section 503 (a) (2), constitute 15 per centum or more of the gross income and that loans to a person who is a shareholder in such company during such taxable year or by for whom 10 per centum or more in value of its outstanding stock is owned directly or indirectly (including in the case of an individual, stock owned by members of his family as defined in section 503 (a) (2)) outstanding at any time during such year do not exceed $5,000 in principal amount.'"

And the Senate agree to the same.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the conference report?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the report.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, in addition to the report itself, which speaks for itself, I wish to make one statement. Section 2 of the conference report is believed by the conferees to be a restatement of the regulation of the Bureau of Internal Revenue and of the law as it now exists.

There is a typographical error in the conference report which could be technically corrected by adoption of a concurrent resolution, but since the error is apparent on its face and could probably be given no construction except the correct construction, I ask that the conference report be adopted just as it has been adopted by the House.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The report was agreed to.

GENERAL APPROPRIATIONS, 1951

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 7786) making appropriations for the support of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1951, and for other purposes.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, we have now resumed the appropriations bill, I believe.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Yes; and the next amendment will be stated.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Chapter IX—Civil functions, Department of the Army—Quartermaster Corps—Cemeterial expenses," on page 359, line 8, after the word "cemeteries", to strike out "$5,500,000" and insert "$5,000,000."

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment to this chapter offered for myself, the Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON], the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. SALTONSTALL], the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD], the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. HENDRICKSON], the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. MARTIN], and the Senator from Delaware [Mr. WILLIAMS], the Senator from New York [Mr. IVES], and the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE].

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is the amendment offered to the committee amendment which has just been stated?

Mr. BRIDGES. No; it is an amendment to the chapter the Senate is now considering.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, cannot that amendment go over until we reach that point in the chapter?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment is not now in order.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. FERGUSON. Cannot the amendment lie on the desk? There are seven amendments which should lie on the desk, and called up at the proper time, when they are in order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. This amendment is not in order, because it is not an amendment to the committee amendment which has just been stated. There will be opportunity later on for the amendment to be offered, at a time when it will be in order.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, cannot the amendments lie on the desk, and each one be called up as we reach the parts of the bill to which they relate?

The VICE PRESIDENT. If the Senator from New Hampshire wishes to have the amendment printed and lie on the table, he may make a request to that effect. However, if he wishes to offer the amendment to a committee amendment, the committee amendment to which his amendment relates will be before us in a very few minutes, when we reach that part of the bill.

The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment on page 359, in line 8, which has just been stated.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 359, after line 16, to strike out:

ENTOMBMENT OF AN UNKNOWN AMERICAN SERVICEMAN OF WORLD WAR II

For expenses, not otherwise provided for, incident to the selection and burial, with appropriate ceremonies, of the remains of an unknown American who lost his life while serving overseas in the Armed Forces of the United States during the Second World War, as authorized by the act of June 24, 1946 (60 Stat. 302), including the construction of a tomb in the Memorial Amphitheater of the Arlington National Cemetery; alteration of the Amphitheater; and transportation and travel expenses (including a per diem allowance of not to exceed $10 in lieu of subsistence) of such dignitaries as may be officially invited to participate in the ceremonies, $350,000, to remain available until June 30, 1952.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I am not going to make a speech about the civil functions chapter of the bill. As everyone knows, we have a unified appropriation bill this year. It was to be sent to us by April 15. Actually, it reached us on May 11, as I recall. It passed the House of Representatives on May 10.

The Senate committee was not inactive in regard to the bill and its various provisions. A unified bill is a new scheme in regard to the making of appropriations. We are trying out this new plan, and the Senate committee joined heartily in trying to work it out in the best possible way.

Explanations have been made in regard to the eight chapters of the appropriation bill handled thus far by the Senate, in each case the explanation being made by the chairman of the particular subcommittee concerned.

Now we have come to the ninth chapter of the bill, and I should make an explanation regarding it.

However, I understand that a considerable number of amendments are to be offered. Therefore, in order to save time—for we are late in acting on this bill and we may have to pass a joint resolution continuing appropriations, in view of the delay in disposing of this bill—I shall not make a speech in explanation of this chapter of the bill, but shall submit a statement in regard to it. I shall be glad to answer any questions which may be proposed by any Members of the Senate.

Mr. President, let me also say that we are so far behind that I think it is necessary for us to do a little less talking. Therefore, I shall set a good example by not talking further at this time, and shall ask that the clerk proceed to state the amendments.

I ask unanimous consent to have printed at this point in the RECORD a statement in explanation of this chapter of the bill. If it were not for the circumstances stated I would make the explanation orally; but, purely in order to save time, I ask that the explanation be printed, instead of reading it, which ordinarily I should be very glad to do.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

There being no objection, Mr. McKELLAR's statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT BY SENATOR MCKELLAR

CHAPTER IX—CIVIL FUNCTIONS, DEPARTMENT OF THE ARMY

Mr. President, Chapter IX of the pending bill relating to civil functions of the Department of the Army makes appropriations for cemeterial expenses; the Alaska communication system; rivers and harbors and flood control under the Corps of Engineers, practically all of which is in continental United States; the United States Soldiers' Home; the Panama Canal; and the Panama Railroad Company.

BUDGET ESTIMATES, HOUSE ACTION, AND SENATE COMMITTEE RECOMMENDATIONS

The 1951 budget estimates total $834,867,500. The House approved appropriations in the amount of $630,820,000, or 24.4 percent below the estimates. This was by far the largest reduction made by the House in any of the appropriation bills.

The Senate Appropriations Committee held long hearings, starting on January 26 of this year, taking over 1,100 pages of testimony before the bill passed the House. After the bill passed the House, the Senate committee held supplemental hearings of over 200 pages on chapter IX. In addition to departmental witnesses, the Senate committee heard a large number of outside witnesses as well as a number of Members of the Senate and House of Representatives.

The subcommittee worked long and hard in marking up the bill after the hearings were closed. The subcommittee and finally the full committee agreed upon a bill recommending appropriations totaling $762,924,620. Although this amount represents a net increase of $132,104,620 over the House bill, it must be remembered that the House had cut this chapter of the bill by over 24 percent, which was out of all proportion to action it had taken on other chapters in the bill.

Even though the total of $762,924,620 recommended by the Senate committee is an increase of $132,104,620 over the House bill, the committee's recommendation is still $71,942,880, or 8.6 percent under the 1951 budget estimates.

Since the Senate committee's recommendations are 8.6 percent under the 1951 estimates, and the House recommendations are 24.4 percent under the estimates, this chapter of the bill when it comes out of conference will be below the 1951 estimates somewhere between 8.6 percent and 24.4 percent, which in all probability may represent a greater percentage reduction than will be made in any other chapter of the general appropriation bill.

RIVERS AND HARBORS AND FLOOD CONTROL

The largest amounts carried in chapter IX are for rivers and harbors and flood-control items under the Corps of Engineers.

Of the total of $762,924,620 recommended by the Senate committee, $731,546,000 is for rivers and harbors and flood-control work. The House had reduced appropriations for this work by 25 percent. The amount recommended by the Senate Appropriations Committee is $132,401,000 above the House allowance for the Corps of Engineers but is $66,936,000, or 8.4 percent, below the 1951 budget estimates.

INDIVIDUAL PROJECTS

Mr. President, for the information of the Senate, I wish to call attention to some of the larger projects, for which it was necessary for the Senate committee to recommend sizable amounts of money to continue work in progress.

For the McNary lock and dam on the Columbia River in Washington and Oregon, the Senate committee recommends an appropriation of $37,500,000, although the budget estimate called for $45,000,000. The House allowed $35,000,000. The estimated Federal cost of this project is $227,028,000, and to date the Congress has appropriated $72,575,000 toward its construction.

For the Chief Joseph Dam on the Columbia River in Washington, the Senate committee approved the House allowance of $12,000,000 even though the budget estimate was $17,000,000.

For the Bull Shoals Reservoir in Arkansas and Missouri, the Senate committee recommends an appropriation of $16,772,000 as compared to $14,000,000 approved by the House and the budget estimate of $18,000,000.

For the Clark Hill Reservoir in Georgia and South Carolina, the Senate committee approved an appropriation of $20,000,000. The House had allowed $16,000,000, and the estimate for 1951 is in the amount of $22,000,000.

For the Wolf Creek Reservoir in Kentucky, the Senate committee approved the full budget estimate on recommendation of the Corps of Engineers, or $22,100,000. The House had allowed $19,000,000. A total of $56,835,800 has already been spent on this project toward the total estimated Federal cost of $82,700,000.

For the Harlan County Reservoir in Nebraska, one of the Missouri River Basin projects, the Senate committee approved $16,500,000 as compared to the House figure of $12,000,000 and the budget estimate of $18,000,000.

For the Buggs Island Reservoir in Virginia and North Carolina, the Senate committee approved the House allowance of $27,000,000 as compared to the budget estimate of $30,000,000. The Congress has already appropriated $34,900,000 for work on this project, the total estimated Federal cost of which is $78,870,000.

For the Garrison Reservoir in North Dakota, another one of the large Missouri River Basin projects, the Senate committee approved $33,000,000 as compared to the House figure of $27,000,000 and the budget estimate of $35,000,000. A total of $80,280,000 has heretofore been appropriated for work on this large project, the estimated cost of which to the Federal Government is $202,000,000.

For the Detroit Reservoir in Oregon, the Senate committee recommends an appropriation of $20,000,000, which is the budget estimate, as compared to the House allowance of $13,000,000.

For the Fort Randall Reservoir in South Dakota, the Senate committee has approved an appropriation of $36,110,000, whereas the House allowance was $28,000,000 and the 1951 estimate is $37,500,000. This is another one of the large Missouri River Basin projects authorized by the Congress, the total estimated Federal cost of which is $165,900,000, toward which to date Congress has appropriated a total of $53,800,000.

For the Lookout Point Reservoir in Oregon, the Senate committee approved $15,720,500 as compared to $10,000,000 allowed by the House and $16,000,000 proposed by the budget estimate.

For flood control on the Mississippi River and tributaries, the Senate committee has recommended a total of $66,778,000 as compared to the House allowance of $65,000,000 and the budget estimate of $72,000,000.

These are some of the larger projects and flood-control developments, for which it was necessary that the Senate committee recommend sizable appropriations to continue work already under way.

COMPLETION OF CERTAIN PROJECTS

Mr. President, the Senate committee has included a total of $2,919,400 under "Rivers and harbors" to complete 16 rivers and harbors projects. Under "Flood control, general," the Senate committee has approved a total of $10,867,800 to complete 26 flood-control projects. Mr. President, I submit the following list of these projects in the RECORD as a part of my remarks:

CONCLUDING STATEMENT

I have seen the President's recommendation for cutting down on some of this domestic construction. It seems to me that it should be left as it is under the law because as it is under the law, the President has the right during a war to discontinue any of these projects, and the fact that he will do it is shown by the fact that the President during the last war did discontinue all construction projects not essential to our national defense.

I wish to thank the members of the subcommittee handling this part of the bill for the long hours and days they gave to its consideration and to assure the Senate that the numerous projects and items included in this chapter have received the committee's earnest study and consideration.

I hope the recommendations of the Senate committee will be approved, Mr. President, and I ask that chapter IX be read for the committee amendments.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, we are now considering the so-called civil functions chapter of the bill, which contains a very large appropriation item, and has to do with construction. Construction requires man-hours and scarce materials. Since this bill was acted upon by the Senate Appropriations Committee, we have become engaged in the Korean War. This country is in a state of preparation to meet, in the best possible way, the emergency presented by the Korean War and the drain and strain and burden it will make upon our economy and upon the Treasury of the United States. I think a wholly different situation confronts the Senate, the Congress, and the country from the situation that confronted us when this bill was reported. I think the President recognizes that. I have in may hand a letter which I understand was sent to the various Secretaries, signed by Harry S. Truman, President of the United States, and dated July 21, 1950. I desire to read from that letter:

1. All civil public works, both direct Federal programs and grant-in-aid programs, should be screened with the objective, as far as practical, of deferring, curtailing, or slowing down those projects which do not directly contribute to defense or to civilian requirements essential in the changed international situation set forth in my message.

I think that is a very wise statement on the part of the President. I believe it is the duty of the Congress and of the Senate in considering this bill, and the particular chapter which is before us, providing appropriations of hundreds of millions of dollars, the total amount of which is $731,546,000, or almost three-quarters of a billion dollars, to meet this problem head-on and to meet it squarely, in line with at least the tenor of the President's letter from which I have just read.

Therefore, at the proper time, for myself, for the Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON], for the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. SALTONSTALL], for the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. HENDRICKSON], for the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. MARTIN], and for the Senator from Delaware [Mr. WILLIAMS], I shall offer an amendment, in substance as follows:

On page 361, line 25, strike "$1,600,000" and insert "$800,000."

On page 364, line 2, strike "$221,244,500" and insert "$110,622,250."

On page 365, line 9, strike "$900,000" and insert "$450,000."

On page 365, line 20, strike "$436,933,000" and insert "$218,466,500."

On page 367, line 3, strike "$66,778,000" and insert "$33,389,000."

On page 367, line 9, strike "$450,000" and insert "$225,000."

On page 367, line 14, strike "$2,524,500" and insert "$1,262,250."

In other words, Mr. President, what the amendment proposes to do, very simply, is to make a 50 percent reduction, cutting in two the appropriations for the items of appropriation contained in this chapter for civil functions. The amendment, as Senators will notice, does not touch the item for cemeterial expenses, for the Signal Corps, or for the emergency fund. It does cut everything having to do with construction and administration of construction.

As I said, it does not touch the emergency fund. It does not touch the cemeterial expenses. It does not touch the Signal Corps, and the account on the Soldiers' Home objective. But it does touch everything else.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, may I inquire what the cut is, in percentage?

Mr. BRIDGES. Fifty percent.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, has the amendment been printed and is it available to Senators?

Mr. BRIDGES. No. I have it typed, and I shall at the proper time send it to the desk.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Does the Senator have extra copies?

Mr. BRIDGES. Yes; I have at least one extra copy.

Mr. McCLELLAN. The Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON] has supplied me with a copy. I thank the Senator.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair inquires of the Senator from New Hampshire whether he proposes to offer a separate amendment as to each item, or to offer them en bloc and have them so voted upon?

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, if permitted, when the first of these amendments is reached, I shall offer the amendments en bloc, in order to save time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. That can only be done by unanimous consent.

Mr. BRIDGES. Then I shall at that time request unanimous consent for the purpose of saving time in the consideration of the bill.

Mr MAYBANK Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New Hampshire yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. BRIDGES. I yield.

Mr. MAYBANK. I should like to inquire of the Senator from New Hampshire whether the reductions which he will propose, as set forth in the statement which he has read, will effect an additional cut above the 10-percent overall cut which is proposed.

Mr BRIDGES. This would be in excess of the 10-percent reduction, and, if the 50-percent cut is made, we would naturally exclude from the 10 percent cut the items in this chapter which are affected.

Mr. MAYBANK. I thank the Senator.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, I have joined in these seven amendments because I feel that the situation confronting the Nation today makes it quite clear that the days of "business as usual" are behind us.

Likewise, it should be clear that we in Government must put behind us the days of "spending as usual."

Government spending on activities which are not essential to the defense effort upon which we are embarked cannot be distinguished from the hoarding of individuals. Both are serious threats to a stable economy.

The President, in his message to Congress July 19, faced up to the economic consequences of our rearmament program. He called for "a substantial redirection of economic resources." He recognized without hesitation that the dollars spent for military purposes "will have magnified effect on the economy as a whole," and he pleaded that "in the process we do not bring on inflation, with its resulting hardship for every family."

Mr. President, that is exactly what hoarding by individuals will do. That is what is happening when wives go to the grocery store, the hardware store, and various other stores and purchase goods which, as essentials, it is unnecessary for them to buy. We in the Government, in making these civil functions expenditures, will do the same thing, because we shall bring about a pressure which will cause inflation and the President recognized it only a few days ago.

The President has requested, and we are going to appropriate, no less than ten and a half billion dollars for immediate rearmament. Consider for a moment what that means to our national economy.

It means withdrawing 600,000 more men from the labor force of this country.

It means more than $6,000,000,000 of steel and tools and other critical materials that go into the manufacture of arms and ammunition.

In all, it is more than $10,000,000,000 of manpower, metal, and food that will be diverted from the channels of normal civilian consumption.

As the President has so carefully pointed out, the impact of that military spending will be terrific. There must be compensation for it.

He forcefully stated in his message:

> We must promptly adopt some general measures to compensate for the growth of demand caused by the expansion of military programs in a period of high civilian incomes. I am directing all executive agencies to conduct a detailed review of Government programs, for the purpose of modifying them wherever practicable to lessen demands upon services, commodities, raw materials, manpower, and facilities which are in competition with those needed for national defense.

Mr. President, continuing the quotation, I emphasize the concluding sentence:

> The Government, as well as the public, must exercise great restraint in the use of those goods and services which are needed for our increased defense efforts.

In other words, the Government must not be a hoarder. I repeat the President's words:

> The Government, as well as the public, must exercise great restraint in the use of those goods and services which are needed for our increased defense efforts.

The President has taken further steps to implement that point in his message. He has issued a directive to the heads of 14 departments and agencies under date of July 21. He has asked them to reexamine their programs, giving particular attention to three points, as follows:

> 1. All civil public works, both direct Federal programs and grant-in-aid programs, should be screened with the objective, as far as practical, of deferring, curtailing, or slowing down those projects which do not directly contribute to defense or to civilian requirements essential in the changed international situation set forth in my message.
>
> 2. Consistent with the restrictive policy already in force for housing credit, other credit programs should be tightened. The only exceptions should be those which directly contribute to meeting our defense and international responsibilities.
>
> 3. Procurement of supplies and equipment should be held to minimum amounts, especially purchases of motor vehicles, typewriters, and other equipment using critical materials. Inventories should be reduced to the lowest practical levels, and excess supplies and equipment should be made available immediately to the General Services Administration.
> In addition, I shall expect that in the reexamination of the programs of your agency, you will give first priority to those activities which contribute directly to national defense, including requests of other agencies for assistance.

Mr. President, Federal public works, and, most prominently, the civil functions of the Corps of Engineers, are the logical point at which to begin a cutback of Federal spending at a time when resources are being drained to accommodate the military effort, when construction of GI homes is being cut back under more rigid credit policies, and when every dollar spent is in competition with military dollars. The material and the men engaged in public works projects are needed elsewhere, in actual military projects, or in boosting national production for civilian consumption. The President recognizes that fact in the first point of his letter of July 21. We are here recognizing it with our proposal to cut back by one-half appropriations for Army civil functions.

While I am now speaking to the Senate, civil engineers have been called to the Budget Bureau to confer with the Budget Director on this particular proposition of attempting to cut back Federal civilian expenditures so that we may proceed to defend those who are now fighting and actually dying in Korea.

The Nation recognized the necessity for such action in 1942 when we were launched upon the Second World War. We are not sure, as we sit here today, that we are not now launching upon a third world war.

Appropriations for the fiscal year 1943, which was the first year we were really in the war, for that fiscal year began July 1, 1942, when we had been in it a little more than 6 months, were made upon a peacetime basis, so far as Army civil functions were concerned. Almost immediately, in 1942, it was recognized that those functions were draining off needed manpower and material. As a consequence, in October 1942, the War Production Board ordered a halt on all Army civil functions not essential to the national defense.

Mr. President, that is what should be done today. In view of the history of that era, we should do now what had to be done in 1942. Funds were impounded for projects which were not certified as essential to national defense. Thereafter, appropriations were made only on projects certified as essential to national defense.

The cut-back of 50 percent which we propose in these seven amendments may appear to some persons to be drastic. Our experience in 1942 will indicate, however, about what portion of going civil works can qualify as essential to national defense.

As I have stated, appropriations for the fiscal year 1943 were on a peacetime basis. This appropriation bill was prepared on a peacetime basis. The Korean war had not then broken out. The total appropriation for Army civil functions in the fiscal year 1943 was to be $234,394,300. In the following fiscal year the freeze order was in effect on projects not essential to national defense. Appropriations for that year were under certification of defense requirements. The total amount appropriated under those circumstances was $52,500,200.

Mr. President, the cut-back from fiscal 1943 to fiscal 1944 in recognition of the emergency amounted to 78 percent. Today essentially the same conditions prevail as prevailed in 1942. Only 22 percent of civil functions could then qualify as essential.

On that basis, we do not think a 50-percent cut-back today is unreasonable by any standard which recognizes the character of nonessential public works programs as an unwarranted drain upon our resources in these times. It is very vital at this time in our history.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Mr. President, I rise to support the position taken by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES] and the Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON] on the amendments offered to reduce certain amounts provided for in the civil-functions chapter of the appropriation bill. I have always felt, Mr. President, that when we have too big a load to carry, the security part of the load comes first. Let me use the example of a man going to a well with two empty buckets to fill. We have gone to the well to get two buckets of water. If, when we return from the well, trying to carry the two buckets of water, they appear too heavy for us, we lighten one bucket. We may not empty it, but we lighten it. I think our present situation is similar to that of a man who goes to the well to get two buckets of water which are too heavy for him to carry. One bucket is the bucket of our security and national defense; the other is the bucket of civil functions, that is, internal improvements. Obviously, we cannot have internal improvements unless we have security.

Mr. President, throughout my term in Congress I have tried to vote for security measures. I voted for the ECA bill, the MAP Act, and other measures that have had to do with the national security. I have voted the amounts required for the national defense. I have always felt these came first.

Today we are in a struggle in Korea. How extensive that struggle may become, no man can tell us. All we know is that the President has requested increased appropriations for the military. These increases are going to amount to large sums of money. To me these increases represent the bucket of security. It is becoming more and more full, and we have to be sure to be able to carry that bucket. It is most important for us to get that bucket home safely.

So, Mr. President, I have joined with the Senator from New Hampshire and the Senator from Michigan in offering the amendments. In committee we voted for the original appropriation several months ago when there was no sign of a struggle in Korea. As the Senator from Michigan has well said, the President has ordered all departments to cut expenditures. Congress can help by simply refusing to give them money. Congress takes the responsibility from them. The primary responsibility is that of the Congress.

We have a problem of procuring equipment for our boys who are fighting. We must help them to fight as efficiently and as safely as is possible. That is the responsibility of Congress. It is a responsibility which we all want to fulfill.

So it seems to me, Mr. President, that the buckets of water we are carrying have grown too heavy for us. In order to get our budget as near in balance as possible and in order to keep down our expenses as far as possible, we must favor the bucket carrying our security, and we intend to favor it. Therefore, we must postpone the internal improvements which we all want to have in due course, but which we cannot expect to enjoy unless we have a more peaceful world than we have at the present time.

It is with that underlying thought that I am happy to join the Senators from New Hampshire and Michigan in what I believe to be helpful amendments in the situation in which we find ourselves.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment on page 359, after line 16.

The amendment was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the next committee amendment.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Signal Corps—Alaska communication system," on page 360, line 24, after "(28 U. S. C. 2672)", to strike out "$1,000,000" and insert "$2,877,920"; on page 361, line 2, after "(1)", to strike out "a cost per family unit in excess of $28,000" and insert "an average cost in excess of $24,000"; and in line 4, after the word "including", to insert "but not limited to."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Corps of Engineers—Rivers and harbors and flood control," on page 361, line 25, after the word "exceed", to strike out "$1,450,000" and insert "$1,600,000."

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, on behalf of myself, the Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON], the senior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. SALTONSTALL], the senior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH], the Senator from Delaware [Mr. WILLIAMS], the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. WHERRY], the junior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. HENDRICKSON], the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. MARTIN], and the junior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE], I send amendments to the desk and ask that they be stated.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator has offered amendments which deal with several items in the bill. Does the Senator wish to have them considered en bloc?

Mr. BRIDGES. Because they are all on the same basis, involve the same issues, and all concern construction items, I ask unanimous consent that they be considered en bloc. In that way, we may save some time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the consideration of the amendments en bloc?

Mr. McKELLAR. In that way would one vote settle the whole matter?

Mr. BRIDGES. We would have one vote on all the amendments. In that way we could save time in the discussion of the amendments.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. McKELLAR. We shall have no more discussion about the subject?

Mr. BRIDGES. No. I am merely trying to expedite consideration of the bill.

Mr. McKELLAR. I have no objection to having one vote on all of them.

Mr. BRIDGES. That is all I ask.

Mr. McKELLAR. But I think they should be discussed.

Mr. BRIDGES. Yes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the unanimous-consent request of the Senator from New Hampshire that the amendments be considered en bloc?

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, will the Senator explain what items are covered by the proposed 50 percent?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the amendments for the information of the Senate.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 361, line 25, it is proposed to strike "$1,600,000" and insert "$800,000"; on page 364, line 2, to strike "$221,244,500" and insert "$110,622,250"; on page 365, line 9, to strike "$900,000" and insert "$450,000"; line 20, to strike "$436,933,000" and insert "$218,466,500"; on page 367, line 3, to strike "$66,778,000" and insert "$33,389,000"; on line 9, to strike "$450,000" and insert "$225,000"; and on line 14, to strike "$2,524,500" and insert "$1,262,250."

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the consideration of the amendments en bloc? The Chair hears none.

The amendments are open for discussion, if Senators wish to discuss them individually.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I hope very much that the distinguished and eminent Senator from Tennessee, the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, will agree to a very great cut in the appropriations for rivers and harbors. Although I have devoted a large amount of time and study to this matter, and have prepared some amendments myself, I was delighted to see our friends on the other side of the aisle propose a cut of 50 percent in these appropriations, and I am glad to see them persevering in well-doing. However, I think we can very well cut even more than is proposed by the eminent Senators on the other side of the aisle. In view of the national emergency we should not restrict ourselves to 50 percent, but should cut 60 percent. The proposal of the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES], the Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON], and the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. SALTONSTALL] will mean a saving of approximately $363,500,000. I propose a cut of 60 percent.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? My figure is $366,000,000, plus.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I thank the Senator. We are together within a few hundred thousand dollars. I propose a saving, approximately, of $435,000,000. I hope that the Senators on the other side of the aisle will support the amendments which I intend to offer at the proper time. The adoption of my amendments would bring about even greater savings. If my amendments are voted down, I promise that I shall then support the proposals made by the Senator from New Hampshire, the Senator from Michigan, and the Senator from Massachusetts. However, before we come to the concrete proposals, I wish to make an appeal to the eminent Senator from Tennessee that he will accept a 60-percent cut or a 50-percent cut in the appropriation.

As has been said, the provisions and appropriations contained in the bill were drafted prior to the Korean situation. The hearings were held prior to the Korean situation. The recommendations were made prior to the Korean situation. Even if they could have been defended at the time the appropriations were recommended—and I think Senators know that I probably would have been critical even under those conditions—certainly they cannot be defended at this time in view of the general emergency.

How can it be said that an appropriation for harbors for fishing boats and recreational craft along the Atlantic coast is a part of the war effort? How can it be said that provision for a 9-foot channel or the attempt to construct a 9-foot channel from Sioux City, Iowa, to Kansas City, Mo., is a part of the war effort? How can it be said that the deepening of the intracoastal channel along the coast of Florida is a part of the war effort? How can it be said that the starting of the construction of great dams in the Southwest and in South Dakota, which will not come to maturity for years and years, is a part of the war effort?

Mr. President, I think this is a time when we should adjust our thinking to the great emergency which has come upon us. I hope very much that the senior Senator from Tennessee, who has given such valiant service to the Nation over a period of many years, will crown his great career by voluntarily accepting a 60-percent cut or a reduction of $435,000,000. If he is not willing to do that, I hope he will accept a 50-percent cut. If he is not willing to do that, I hope he will accept a 40-percent cut.

First, I look toward him with great hope in my eyes that he will lift this issue above all partisan considerations and all local geographical considerations, and will voluntarily accept a $435,000,000 cut. When that happens I want to say that the whole Senate and the whole country will applaud the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DOUGLAS. I yield.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. I wish to commend the Senator from Illinois for what he has said. I am happy to find him cooperating with the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. SALTONSTALL], the Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON], the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES], and the Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD].

Mr. DOUGLAS. I hope the Senator from New Jersey will go along with an additional 10-percent cut, and will be willing to reduce these appropriations not only by 50 percent, but by 60 percent.

Mr. BENTON. Mr. President, in associating myself with the Senator from Illinois, I should like to ask him how he reached the figure of 60 percent. Why did he take 60 percent instead of 65 percent or 62⅔ percent? At what point is the percentage properly to be fixed according to his studies?

Mr. DOUGLAS. I may say that first we should eliminate all new starts, or substantially new starts. Secondly, we should eliminate all items which were not included in the House bill.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DOUGLAS. Let me finish, please. Furthermore, we should eliminate doubtful and deferable projects on which the benefit-cost ratio is less than one to one, projects that have been previously disapproved by the Bureau of the Budget, or from which benefits are extremely speculative. In the third place, we should eliminate the Senate committee's increases and make reductions of approximately 45 or 50 percent in all other items, thus slowing down the rate of expansion of these projects. All this will result in a total aggregate reduction of almost precisely 60 percent in the committee's estimates.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GILLETTE in the chair). Does the Senator from Illinois yield to the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. DOUGLAS. I yield to the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I have a few words to say about the proposal of the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. McFARLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. McFARLAND. I wish to ask the Senator if he will yield for the purpose of having a quorum call. I feel that the matter he is about to discuss is important, and there are not very many Senators present.

Mr. McKELLAR. I am happy to yield for that purpose.

Mr. McFARLAND. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee asks if he may yield for the purpose of having a quorum call. Is there objection?

Mr. McKELLAR. I do not want to lose my right to the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair hears no objection, and the clerk will call the roll.

The roll was called, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Benton	Hendrickson	Magnuson
Brewster	Hickenlooper	Malone

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A quorum is present. The Senator from Tennessee is recognized.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, under our system, as all Senators know, a bill involving appropriations for civil functions of the Army, is sent to a subcommittee. I desire to give the names of the subcommittee having charge of the civil-functions chapter of the pending appropriation bill. The subcommittee consisted of the Senator from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN], the Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. THOMAS], the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. MAYBANK], the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. ELLENDER], the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. MCCLELLAN], the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ], the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES], the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. GURNEY], the Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON], the Senator from Oregon [Mr. CORDON], and the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. YOUNG]. I was the chairman of the subcommittee. Under our system there are also ex officio members, whose names I will read to the Senate, and I hope Senators will listen to the reading of them, because the matter involved is one of great importance. They are the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. STENNIS], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. CHAPMAN], and the Senator from Washington [Mr. CAIN].

Mr. President, we are faced with the question, Are we going to disregard the time-honored method of having proposed legislation considered by committees, committees whose members are, for the most part, trained men of long experience? As Senators will agree, after having heard read the names of the members of the Civil Functions Subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee, it is one of the best committees, if we exclude the name of the senior Senator from Tennessee, in the Senate of the United States. Is the Senate going to pass a bill presented to it after 6 months of careful study by a committee, or is the Senate going to write a bill on the floor? Of course, the Senate can do the latter. The Senate has a perfect right to disregard the report of the committee. The question, however, is: Is that the right thing to do? Or should we pay attention to the Senators who are members of the committee, many of whom have been members of the committee for a great number of years? Some of the members of the committee have been Members of the Senate for more than a quarter of a century. They are good men. The very reading of their names indicates what kind of a committee it is. That committee has heard proof for not quite 6 months. The committee reported the bill on July 6. The members of the committee have been working on it for more than 6 months.

The reason this particular subcommittee was appointed was that Representative CANNON, one of the finest men I know, whom I have known for many years, a great parliamentarian in the House, had a plan, which was adopted by Congress. He came before Members of Congress with his plan. He was a Member of Congress before some of them were old enough to vote. I have the greatest respect for him. He got the idea that all appropriation bills could be brought together into one bill, that the appropriations could be considered in a much better manner if they were all brought together in one bill. He presented a measure providing for one single appropriation bill. The House passed the measure, and the Senate afterward passed it. As I said a while ago, we made every effort in the world to carry out that plan. It was a new plan. Everyone has to have a plan now, it seems, Mr. President. I do not believe a man can be considered to be a statesman unless he has a plan. We have tried to work out Mr. CANNON's plan. It will be a big blow to him if we now refuse to work under his plan, but agree to a plan that is brought up on the floor of the Senate at the last minute, without study for the most part, and pass the bill under that new plan.

Mr. President, I do not believe anything like that should be done. I do not believe that is the way to legislate. Let me show what would be the effect if we should act in accordance with the plan now proposed.

The pending amendment would cut many items by 50 percent. The Signal Corps item is included in the 50-percent cut as well as the other items. Should we make a cut in the Signal Corps at this time, when there is threat of war? I do not believe it to be wise. I believe it would be much wiser to adopt the provisions of the bill as they were prepared by the committee after extensive hearings.

Mr. President, let me call the hearings to the attention of the Senate. On this one bill there were hearings which fill 1,132 small-type closely printed pages. The testimony bears on every possible issue that was in existence at that time. Since that time there have been 165 pages more of supplemental testimony. The committee has gone into the matter exceedingly well. I do not believe any committee of the Congress could improve upon what has been done by this committee. I do not believe a better bill could be devised on the floor of the Senate. There are 96 Members of the Senate. I think probably 90 Members will be present before consideration of the bill is completed. Suppose every Member has a plan such as that of my esteemed friend, the Senator from Illinois [Mr. DOUGLAS]. He said he wants to reduce expenses. All of us would like to do that. No Senator would rise on the floor and say he would not like to reduce expenses as much as possible. I know that my record shows that I have been uniformly in favor of an economical Government from the time I came here 35 or 40 years ago.

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McKELLAR. I shall yield in a moment.

The Senator from Illinois has another plan. He says he wants to reduce some items by 50 percent. He says he wishes to save half of a great sum of money by making a 50-percent reduction. By the same token all he would have to do would be to amend his amendment and move to strike out 100 percent of the appropriations; thus he would cut the whole amount, and would save twice as much as he now proposes to save. His proposal is not based on evidence. The Senator said the other day that he did not have the evidence; that he had not taken any evidence of his own.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Tennessee yield, and if so, to whom?

Mr. McKELLAR. I was about to say that I am glad to yield to the Senator from Illinois. But will the Senator from Illinois excuse me for a moment, inasmuch as the Senator from West Virginia had risen previously and it is right and proper that I should yield to him first. After that I shall yield to the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. KILGORE. I wanted to ask the Senator from Tennessee a question. The report of the committee, as compiled, is the guiding hand, is it not, in the actual application of funds appropriated?

Mr. McKELLAR. That is true.

Mr. KILGORE. Is it not a fact, therefore, that if a 50-percent blanket cut is made it means throwing the report out the window, and leaving absolutely no guide for those who will be called upon to do the work required?

Mr. McKELLAR. Yes; I think that is so.

Before I yield to the Senator from Illinois I should like to say that, in a very eloquent speech the Senator said he was in favor of a cut of 50 percent; indeed, I believe he went up to 60 percent. I was wondering whether he was losing his interest in cutting down expenditures when he was so mild with respect to the amount he wanted to cut from the bill, when he wanted to cut simply 60 percent of it, regardless of whether it was a proper cut of any individual item of appropriation. Some items of the appropriation bill can not be cut at all. We cannot cut down on the amount of money we must pay for interest on the public debt. No one is going to do that. The Senator would have to rearrange that. I suppose his idea is to get some Senators to join with him in rearranging the bill on the floor of the Senate, and adopt his plan, because he proposes to save 60 percent. Well, he could save 100 percent as well as 60 percent.

I digress long enough to say to the Senator that, after all the proposals he has made to amend the bill since it has been under consideration on the floor, by cutting down appropriations some here, some there, and some yonder, sometimes a few dollars and sometimes more and sometimes less, I am amazed at his modesty in simply wanting to cut the bill down 60 percent.

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a further question?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield for a question.

Mr. KILGORE. I wish to ask a further question: When we adopt percentagewise cuts, is it not a fact that in that case we abdicate our power of determining how the money appropriated shall be spent, and therefore we make one step toward a totalitarian form of government, by handing that power over to the executive departments, and letting them spend the money as they will?

Mr. McKELLAR. Absolutely.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President——

Mr. McKELLAR. Now I shall yield to the Senator from Illinois; but before doing so, I wish to thank him for the good things he has said about me.

The Senator from Illinois seems very much interested in cutting down the appropriations, although I do not believe he has yet succeeded in having any of them reduced.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I have not yet been very successful, but I have hope; one must always live in hope.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator from Illinois has submitted only about 50 or 100 amendments, I believe.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Approximately 67.

Mr. McKELLAR. I understand that the Senator has several more to submit, although the ones he already has submitted have not been adopted. So I understand that he has hope, as he says.

However, I say to the Senator that I hope it will not tear down what has been built up in this body for more than 150 years. There is no reason in the world why we should undertake a guessing contest. I doubt that the Senator from Illinois could tell, unless he had the figures submitted to him, what the interest on the public debt is. I doubt that he could tell how much we have to pay in various ways to or for the veterans of the late war. Can the Senator state that amount at this time? If the junior Senator from Tennessee is helping him, perhaps he can tell.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I do not pretend to have great knowledge, but it is my memory that the interest on the public debt amounts to approximately $5,500,000,000; I do not think that figure is very far wrong.

Mr. McKELLAR. Well, Mr. President, the Senator from Illinois makes a guess as to that; and no doubt if we are to prepare this bill on the floor of the Senate, as he proposes, we should proceed in just that way—by making guesses. But if we do, we will become tremendously mixed up.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield at this point?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Will the Senator tell me when the last hearings on this part of the bill were held?

Mr. McKELLAR. In a moment I shall tell the Senator.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Will the Senator turn to page 1139 of the committee report and to page 204 of the supplemental report? There he will find a statement in regard to when the hearings were concluded.

Mr. McKELLAR. The last hearings were in the month of June, but previously they had been stopped in April.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I read from the main hearings, at page 1139, the last sentence:

> Whereupon, at 4: 40 p. m., Monday, March 6, 1950, the hearings on civil-functions appropriations for 1951, were concluded.

I now hold in my hand a volume on supplemental hearings on civil-functions appropriations; and the last sentence in it reads as follows:

> Whereupon, at 11: 20 a. m., Tuesday, May 2, 1950, the supplemental hearings on civil-functions appropriations for the fiscal year 1951 were concluded; and the subcommittee proceeded in executive session.

Mr. President, the invasion of Korea occurred on June 24, approximately 7 weeks after that. It is obvious from the committee report that although it was submitted on July 1, the decisions had been made prior to the President's announcement on June 27.

So I say that it is the committee which has not taken into consideration the changed circumstances of the world and of the country. For the committee to insist that we must appropriate approximately $750,000,000, indicates to me—in view of the change in conditions and the fact that supplies and equipment are needed for our armies—that, although with the best intentions in the world, the committee is sticking to tradition, rather than to the needs of the situation.

That is all I shall say.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I can understand the Senator's view. He is one of those who is in favor of world government, is he not?

Mr. DOUGLAS. May I ask this question of the Senator——

Mr. McKELLAR. No; I should like to have an answer to my question. Is the Senator in favor of world government, or of the United States Government?

Mr. DOUGLAS. I am not certain that that matter is related to the present discussion. What is its relationship?

Mr. McKELLAR. Of course, the Senator from Illinois has knowledge of everything.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I certainly do not. I am trying to discuss this subject matter.

Mr. McKELLAR. I thought the Senator from Illinois had sufficient information to be able to prepare on the floor of the Senate a bill which the committee spent weeks in going over, and on which it took more than 1,100 pages of testimony.

Mr. DOUGLAS. But that work was ended 6 weeks before the Korean war.

Mr. McKELLAR. Oh, yes; but does the Senator from Illinois know what it takes to conduct a war?

Mr. DOUGLAS. It takes money, for one thing—money which the committee is dissipating on these nonessential projects.

In the second place, it takes material and men, for which money is only one symbol.

Mr. McKELLAR. And the Senator from Illinois has hope that he will be able to reduce the amount of money appropriated.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I have hope that we shall be able to save some money, so that we shall be able to devote sufficient money and materials to the war.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator from Illinois would destroy all business as much as possible, and he hopes to get money for the Government in some other way. What other way is there to get money, except by taxation?

Mr. DOUGLAS. One way is to save money, and one way to save money is to cut $435,000,000 from the appropriations designed to be expended for rivers and harbors and flood control, and to transfer that money to the appropriations for materials and men in connection with national defense.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator from Illinois is only opposed to rivers and harbors and flood-control appropriations, it seems. He has a special reason for being opposed to them; he is not in favor of rivers and harbors and flood-control projects.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I am in favor of them, but I am not in favor of spending so much for them. This is a time, above all others, when we should exercise economy.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, let us consider cotton for a moment. I used to make cotton on a farm, and sold it at 8 cents a pound. Later on, it rose in price to 20 cents a pound; and then the South and sections where cotton is raised went wild; they thought that price for cotton was wonderful.

However, since the war cotton has increased again in price, to nearly 40 cents a pound; in fact, I think that for at least a few hours it went up to 40 cents a pound. Is the Senator from Illinois going to reorganize that, and is he going to cut down the expenditures wherever they affect cotton? Cotton is used for war purposes.

Then let us consider wheat for a moment. The Senator's own State of Illinois raises enormous quantities of wheat, and is one of the large wheat-growing States; and all around it, on the west and north and east, there are other large areas which produce tremendous quantities of wheat. Surely expenditures relating to the production of wheat are expenditures relating to war efforts.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. McKELLAR. I ask the Senator from Illinois to wait a moment, please. I am not going to talk long.

Mr. President, it is said that there is no other way to handle this matter. I was perfectly delighted when I heard two distinguished Republican Senators earlier today endorse what the President has said. Of course, one of them endorsed only one paragraph of the President's message or letter, but the other Senator endorsed two paragraphs of it. I was delighted to hear those two Senators endorse those parts of the President's letter.

Mr. President, at this point I ask unanimous consent to have the President's message or letter inserted in the RECORD, so that all of it may be available.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, July 21, 1950.

MY DEAR MR. SECRETARY: In my message of July 19 to the Congress, I announced that I was directing the executive agencies "to conduct a detailed review of Government programs, for the purpose of modifying them wherever practicable to lessen the demand upon services, commodities, raw materials, manpower, and facilities which are in competition with those needed for national defense. The Government, as well as the public, must exercise great restraint in the use of those goods and services which are needed for our increased defense efforts."

In order to adjust the programs of the Federal Government, I am writing to you and the heads of the other agencies whose programs involve substantial use of materials and other resources needed for the defense effort. Please reexamine your programs, giving particular attention, to the extent applicable to the following:

1. All civil public works, both direct Federal programs and grant-in-aid programs, should be screened with the objective, as far as practical, of deferring, curtailing, or slowing down those projects which do not directly contribute to defense or to civilian requirements essential in the changed international situation set forth in my message.

2. Consistent with the restrictive policy already in force for housing credit, other credit programs should be tigthened. The only exception should be those which directly contribute to meeting our defense and international responsibilities.

3. Procurement of supplies and equipment should be held to minimum amounts, especially purchases of motor vehicles, typewriters, and other equipment using critical materials. Inventories should be reduced to the lowest practical levels, and excess supplies and equipment should be made available immediately to the General Services Administration.

In addition, I shall expect that in the reexamination of the programs of your agency, you will give first priority to those activities which contribute directly to national defense, including requests of other agencies for assistance.

I am asking the Director of the Bureau of the Budget to work closely with you in this review and to report to me on the steps which you have taken in revising your program to meet these objectives.

Sincerely yours,

HARRY S. TRUMAN.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I wish to say, further, that I hope all Senators will read that letter.

Incidentally let me say that by a provision of law carried over from the last war, the President has the right, during war, to reduce appropriations. A great deal has been said about Korea and about the fact that the problems connected with the Korean situation have arisen since the Appropriations Committee submitted its report on this measure. That is true; those matters have developed since that time. However, the President can reduce the appropriations during a war. Of course, we are not yet in a war, and I hope to heaven we never are in another war; but we may be.

So the President himself can, in time of war, cure practically all the supposed shortcomings of this measure; at such a time all the economies now suggested by the junior Senator from Illinois can be put into effect by the President of the United States, under the present law. I am quite sure the President of the United States will do the right thing. I digress long enough to say that I was very happy to serve for quite a number of years in this body with the then Senator Truman, now our distinguished President. I am very happy to say that he was a member of this committee, and that he made a splendid member of it. He was an able, honest, and efficient man. I am one of his great admirers. In the present crisis, I believe the President will do his duty, and I believe he is in a better position than is the Senator from Illinois to say where cuts should be made and where appropriations which may help the country to carry on this war, or so-called police action, should be allowed to remain. There are other places in the bill where cuts might be made without detriment to the interests of the United States.

Mr. President, I shall detain the Senate but a few moments longer. I have read the President's letter of July 21, a portion of which was read earlier today. The letter was sent by the President to various departments and agencies. In the letter he sets forth the need for screening and cutting down where practical on the 1951 construction programs.

The subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Appropriations, by direction of the full committee, held long hearings upon this bill. I have in my hand and hold up for Senators to see, a volume showing the immense amount of work done. It contains the evidence regarding every appropriation except one. The subcommittee held long hearings and spent many hours working out recommendations on the numerous projects and items of the bill.

I urge Senators to keep in mind that we are threatened with a serious war. It is not Korea that we are fighting: it is Russia. Everyone knows that Russia, not Korea, is the enemy we will have to fight. I urge upon Senators that they approve the bill as reported by the Senate committee.

As I said before, I realize the superior knowledge of the distinguished Senator from Illinois. I take off my hat to him for the very great knowledge which he displays on the Senate floor. A majority of those who were in attendance on the committee did not agree with him. I desire to read the names of the committee members who voted for the bill. There are 21 members of the committee, and 4 ex officio members. Of the ex officio members, 3 were absent, only 1 was present. There were 22 Senators who voted on the bill. Those who voted for the bill were the Senator from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. THOMAS], the Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. MCCARRAN], the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY], the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ], the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. MAYBANK], the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. ELLENDER], the Senator from Alabama [Mr. HILL], the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. KILGORE], the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. MCCLELLAN], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. ROBERTSON], the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. GURNEY], the Senator from Oregon [Mr. CORDON], the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. SALTONSTALL], the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. YOUNG], the Senator from California [Mr. KNOWLAND], and the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. STENNIS]. To that tremendous majority in favor of the bill, I want to add one other—the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. MCKELLAR], who happens to be chairman of the committee, and who voted as one of the 19 members of the committee for the bill, against 3 who voted against it.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Tennessee yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. MCKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. WHERRY. Inasmuch as the distinguished chairman of the committee has called the roll of those who voted for the bill, I should deeply appreciate it if he would call the roll of those who voted against it.

Mr. MCKELLAR. I certainly shall do so.

Mr. WHERRY. I thank the Senator.

Mr. MCKELLAR. Those who voted against it were the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES], the Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON], and the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. WHERRY], who, I believe, came in late.

Mr. WHERRY. No, I was there all day long.

Mr. MCKELLAR. Was the Senator there all day long?

Mr. WHERRY. Indeed I was.

Mr. MCKELLAR. I apologize.

Mr. WHERRY. I accept the apology.

Mr. MCKELLAR. I would not do the Senator from Nebraska any injury in the world. There were, as I say, three Senators who were entitled to vote, but who did not vote.

Mr. President, I have read the names of Senators who are behind this bill, to which I am asking the Senate to agree.

If there are items in the bill which need straightening out, that will be done in conference. I hope the Senate will not go back on its tradition and its record and defeat the bill. We should continue our program which has served us so well since 1789.

Mr. President, the statement has been made that we should do away with these appropriations for the home front. If we do away with them, what shall we do about appropriations for the foreign front? Are we going to leave appropriations for foreign nations as they are, but vote to reduce appropriations for our own people to the amount of 60 percent, regardless of whether the money is to pay interest on our debt and regardless of whether we provide for the veterans who fought for us in three wars? Is that what we are going to do?

Mr. President, I do not believe I could get by with that in Tennessee. We are all Americans. How could we get by in our several States with such a proposition? If any Senator thinks he can get by in his State by voting to cut domestic appropriations by 60 percent and not cut other appropriations, I should like him to explain how it can be done. I know I could not do it in Tennessee. I do not believe other Senators can do it in their respective States. We were elected by the people of the several States. It requires votes in order to be elected, just as it takes money to carry on wars. It cannot be done with hopes. Hopes are fine things. It is said that "hope springs eternal in the human breast." But I do not believe we can operate the Government on hope. It requires money to operate the Government.

I sincerely hope the Senate will not go back on the committee, the subcommittee, and the proposals by which we have stood for years. I hope the Senate will defeat the amendment and pass the bill.

STATE DEPARTMENT EMPLOYEE LOYALTY INVESTIGATION

Mr. MCCARTHY. Mr. President, I should like to assure the Senator who has charge of the appropriation bill that I do not intend to take any great length of time.

Mr. MCKELLAR. I thank the Senator very much. I have sat here for 3 weeks under very trying circumstances. We have not made the progress which we should have made. I hope we can make progress today. I am sorry that something arose this morning which required me to talk for a little while. I want to thank the Senator for the assurance he has just given.

Mr. McCARTHY. Let me say for the Senator's benefit that I shall not take more than 5 minutes.

I merely want to present to the Senate a small amount of evidence in one of the cases which the subcommittee of the Foreign Relations Committee was appointed to investigate, evidence which the committee refused to consider. It has to do with a rather unusual picture of a transfer of property by the State Department's architect of far eastern policy.

Mr. Owen Lattimore has recently transferred the ownership of property in Bethel, Vt., under circumstances which raise some interesting questions. This property is located in or near the Hiss colony of Communists and Communist sympathizers.

Before going into that, I desire to give the background of the two persons to whom the property was transferred. It was transferred to Ordway and Mary Southard. Mr. Ordway Southard was a candidate for the governorship of Alabama, on the Communist Party ticket, in 1942. His wife, Mary Southard, is described in the Daily Worker as district secretary of the Young Communist League. She also was a candidate for office in Alabama on the Communist Party ticket. This gives a fairly clear picture of the persons to whom the property was transferred.

The record shows that Mary Southard has frequently written for the Daily Worker under her own name and that she lectured for the Communist Party's Jefferson School of Social Science during the past winter. Furthermore, the record shows that Ordway Southard was a member of the State committee of the Communist Party of Massachusetts.

On the 12th day of September, 1949, Owen and Eleanor Lattimore acquired a half-interest in certain property near Bethel, Vt. In other words, they became co-owners of the property. The deed, which I shall ask to have inserted in the RECORD later, was in consideration of $1 and other valuable considerations. It is possible to know the dollar value of the considerations from the amount of Federal stamp on the deed. As Senators know, there must be a 55-cent Federal stamp for every consideration of $500 or less paid for real estate. This deed contains a stamp representing $1.65, indicating that the consideration was between $1,000 and $1,500.

It has been previously testified, and there is no secret about it, that the way the Communist Party handles contributions is often by the transfer of property. In other words, a person buys something for $1, and it is transferred to some one in the party for $1,001 if the contribution is to be $1,000.

The purchase by Lattimore and his wife took place on September 12, 1949, according to the date on the deed. It was not recorded in the Bethel town clerk's office until April 10, 1950, at 8 o'clock a. m. The certified copy of the deed is attested to by Gladys C. Bundy, assistant town clerk. At an interview in June 1950 by an investigator with the town clerk, Robert E. Bundy, and assistant town clerk, Gladys C. Bundy, his wife, Mrs. Bundy said that Lattimore was ready to sell his interest in the property which he owned jointly with another individual because he needed money to defend the charge of communism. Incidentally, the man who owned the property jointly with Lattimore at that time belonged to 12 organizations which has been listed by the Attorney General as fronts for the Communist Party. Senators will understand that these are not organizations listed by the House committee, by the California committee, or by any congressional committee as being Communist fronts. He belonged to 12 front organizations named by the Attorney General as being fronts for the Communist Party. I shall name them. This is the co-tenant of Lattimore, the man who is the new co-tenant, with the Communist candidate for governor of Alabama.

He is listed as, first, a member of the American Committee for Protection of Foreign Born. His name is shown as a sponsor on a letterhead dated February 8, 1949. Second, the American Council for Democratic Greece. He was shown to be a member on the letterhead dated October 30, 1946. Third, American Council on Soviet Relations. He is shown as a participant in the conference according to the Daily Worker of May 20, 1940, on page 4. Fourth, he was a sponsor of the American-Russian Institute, according to one of the official folders. Fifth, he was a sponsor of the American Relief for Greek Democracy. He is shown as a sponsor in the New York Times of December 4, 1946, at page 11. Sixth, he was a sponsor of the Citizens Committee to Free Earl Browder, according to an official leaflet. Seventh, he was a signer of press releases for the Council for Pan-American Democracy. He signed press releases on June 8, 1945.

Senators will understand that I am not reading a list of organizations cited by any congressional committee. I am reading the names of organizations to which he belonged which had been officially cited by the Attorney General. These are some of the organizations to which Mr. Lattimore's co-tenant belonged.

Eighth. Sponsor of the meeting of the League for American Writers. Ninth. He signed the call of the official Council of American-Soviet Friendship, as reported in the magazine Soviet Russia Today, in the issue of July 1948, at page 5. Tenth. He was a member of the Reichstag Fire Trial Anniversary Committee. Eleventh. Sponsor of the United Spanish Aid Committee. He was a sponsor of the meeting, according to the program dated October 9, 1941. Twelfth. He was a sponsor of the "Win the Peace Conference," according to an official program of April 5, 1946.

That will give Senators an idea of the connections of the co-tenant of Mr. Lattimore.

Mr. HICKENLOOPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCARTHY. I am glad to yield.

Mr. HICKENLOOPER. Can the Senator tell us, with reference to this co-tenant, how this co-tenant happened to become a co-tenant with Mr. and Mrs. Lattimore?

Mr. McCARTHY. He owned the property himself and sold an undivided one-half interest to Mr. Lattimore.

Mr. HICKENLOOPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for another question?

Mr. McCARTHY. I am glad to yield.

Mr. HICKENLOOPER. Did I understand the Senator to say that Mr. Lattimore and his wife have now sold this undivided one-half interest?

Mr. McCARTHY. That is correct.

Mr. HICKENLOOPER. To another couple?

Mr. McCARTHY. Yes.

Mr. HICKENLOOPER. Whom the Senator charges as having been active in the Communist Party?

Mr. McCARTHY. Yes. I do not charge them with being Communist but merely give the public record to show they were. There is no question about it. These are not hidden Communists. Ordway Southard, the husband, ran for Governor of Alabama on the Communist ticket in Alabama in 1942. His wife ran for the senate on the Communist Party ticket in Alabama.

Mr. HICKENLOOPER. Was it for the State senate or the United States Senate?

Mr. McCARTHY. She ran for State Senator. The Daily Worker describes her as district secretary of the Young Communist League, also.

Mr. HICKENLOOPER. Does the Senator feel that having run for office on the Communist ticket is any proof at all of association with the Communist Party or approval of the Communist Party, or is it an attempt to establish guilt by association? I should like to get the Senator's reaction.

Mr. McCARTHY. Well——

Mr. HICKENLOOPER. It seems that we have had a great deal of proof in the last few weeks which is about as strong with reference to other people. I am not talking now about the subject of the Senator's remarks. I wonder whether running as a candidate for office on the Communist ticket comes under the classification of attempting to prove guilt by association.

Mr. McCARTHY. I might say that according to the whitewash committee, which went out of existence this week, that would be smearing Mr. Southard and trying to prove him guilty by association.

Mr. HICKENLOOPER. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator one more question?

Mr. McCARTHY. I am glad to yield. First, let me give the Senator some further information.

Mr. HICKENLOOPER. This may be on the same point, if I may ask the Senator the question.

Mr. McCARTHY. I am glad to yield.

Mr. HICKENLOOPER. Does the Senator have any evidence or does he have any suggestion to make as to the compensation the Lattimores may have received from these new people who appear in this transaction as owners of the land?

Mr. McCARTHY. Yes; I have. I shall be glad to give it to the Senator. The deed whereby Lattimore and his wife transferred the property to Ordway and Mary Southard carried internal revenue stamps in the sum of $4.95. As stated, the law is to the effect that 55 cents in Federal stamps are required for each $500 or less paid for property. According to the revenue stamps, it would appear that he received somewhere between $4,000 and $4,500 for a piece of property which he had bought about 6 months before for somewhere between $1,000 and $1,500. Therefore he made a profit of around $3,000 in that 6 months' period.

Mr. HICKENLOOPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. McCARTHY. I am glad to yield.

Mr. HICKENLOOPER. Does the Senator have any evidence to show that uranium oxide may have been discovered on this property which would treble its value within a few months of the original purchase of the property by the Lattimores? I mean uranium oxide or any other highly valuable or sought-after metal in the ground which would enhance its value by 300 percent within a few months.

Mr. McCARTHY. No. There is nothing to indicate that the property value had changed. The Senator may know something about the colony near Bethel. It is part of the old Hiss colony. The place has not changed.

Mr. HICKENLOOPER. I merely wanted to inquire whether the Senator in his investigation was able to discover anything that would contribute to explaining this tremendous enhancement in value of the property within a few months. Can the Senator explain the 300-percent advance in price as shown by the revenue stamps?

Mr. McCARTHY. I have discovered nothing to indicate why the value of the property should have increased. However, I have found something which would indicate perhaps why Mr. Lattimore was paid a profit of $3,000. When Mr. Bundy, the town clerk, was interviewed he made the statement that the reason Lattimore was selling the property was that he had to have some additional money because of the charges of Communist activities which had been made against him. So we find a well-known Communist giving him a $3,000 profit, which he indicated he wanted to use in connection with his defense against the charges of Communist activity on his part.

Mr. HICKENLOOPER. Mr. President, I thank the Senator, because he has certainly intrigued me this afternoon. He has brought out some interesting facts. I assume, of course, that anyone who pays a substantial amount of money for something gets value received for the money that is paid. I assumed there was a quid pro quo some place in the matter, and I was merely searching to see whether there were any unusual deposits of minerals or the like which had been discovered on this land and increased its value 300 percent. I assume the Senator will pursue his inquiries on that phase, if he does not have full answers.

Mr. McCARTHY. Mr. President, I have a sizable number of additional affidavits covering not so much this transaction, but other activities of Mr. Lattimore, which I intend to present to the Senate when I have more time to do so. I would do it today except that I do not wish to take an unnecessary amount of time from the consideration of the appropriation bill.

Mr. KEM. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCARTHY. I yield.

Mr. KEM. I should like to ask the Senator to state the nature of the property which was conveyed by Mr. Lattimore to Mr. Southard.

Mr. McCARTHY. Frankly, I have not seen the property myself. I understand it is a residence.

Mr. KEM. In a summer colony?

Mr. McCARTHY. It is a summer colony. However, I think there are more appropriate adjectives to describe the colony rather than "summer."

Mr. KEM. The Senator spoke of the colony as the "Hiss" neighborhood or community. Does the Senator refer to Alger Hiss?

Mr. McCARTHY. Yes.

Mr. KEM. Was he one of the owners of the property in this community?

Mr. McCARTHY. He spent considerable time there. Whether he owned property in his own name or not, I do not know, but it is one of his favorite hangouts. It is up close to the Canadian border, and a sizable number of—to put it at least conservatively—fellow travelers were in that general colony.

Mr. KEM. Was that before or after the conviction of Mr. Hiss?

Mr. McCARTHY. He was there for a considerable time before he was convicted. I do not know whether he has been there since he has been convicted.

Mr. President, I am not sure that I covered this next point in answer to the questions of the Senator from Iowa, but the investigation revealed that a warranty deed was recorded on July 1, 1950, transferring an undivided half-interest in the property to the two Southards, Mary and Ordway Southard. Internal revenue stamps in the amount of $4.95 were attached to the warranty deed of July 1, 1950. This was three times the amount of internal revenue stamps on the warranty deed of April 10, 1950. So from April to July a profit of about $3,000 is indicated. I stand corrected; while the deed was recorded in April, the actual purchase had been made in September, so we find a profit made between the 12th day of September 1949 and the 1st day of July 1950.

Frankly, I have no documentary evidence and no testimony to the effect that Lattimore was or was not being paid off. These are questions which I think any committee which might investigate this architect of our far-eastern policy might want answered. They might want to know why this tremendous profit was made. They might want to know something about the neighbors of Mr. Lattimore when he was there, and also information about the general colony. I might say that a complete and thorough investigation of that rather unusual colony would shed considerable light on a number of subjects.

Mr. McCARTHY subsequently said: Mr. President, I wish to take about 10 seconds to answer a question to which I was unable to reply a short time ago. A Senator asked me whether Mr. Hiss was living in the area then referred to. I have just been informed that he is living there at this time—that is, in that general area.

VISIT OF EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF FUTURE FARMERS OF AMERICA TO SENATE GALLERY

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HOLLAND in the chair). Will the Senator from Wisconsin yield for a brief observation by the Chair?

Mr. McCARTHY. I am glad to yield.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The senior Senator from Nebraska [Mr. BUTLER] has suggested to the present occupant of the chair that he feels that the Senate could well give recognition at this time to the fact that the executive committee of the Future Farmers of America are in the gallery visiting the Senate.

Yesterday, the Senate voted to grant the Future Farmers of America a congressional charter. I believe the House has not yet acted on the bill. The Chair thinks the suggestion of the Senator from Nebraska is an excellent one, and the Chair asks the young men to stand so the Senate can see them.

(The delegation in the gallery rose, amid applause on the part of Senators.)

Mr. McCARTHY. Mr. President, I thank the senior Senator from Nebraska [Mr. BUTLER] and the Chair very much for calling attention to these outstanding young men now in the gallery of the Senate.

GENERAL APPROPRIATIONS, 1951

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 7786) making appropriations for the support of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1951, and for other purposes.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Mr. President, I wish to address my remarks to the pending amendment to the appropriation bill.

Mr. MAGNUSON. A parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. MAGNUSON. What page of the bill is the Senate now considering?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending question is on a group of amendments being considered en bloc, beginning at page 361 and going through to page 367 of the printed bill, the amendments being offered by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES], for himself and other Senators.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Mr. President, I understand that the pending question is on agreeing to the Bridges amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. McCLELLAN. The Bridges amendments would make several cuts in the appropriations provided in chapter IX of the bill with reference to the civil functions of the Corps of Engineers.

Mr. President, in the beginning I wish to say that I yield to no Member of the Senate in my good faith, desire, and purpose to bring about and effectuate as much sound economy in the Government as is possible without doing injury to those things which are essential for necessary governmental services and for the preservation and strengthening of our economy.

World conditions are such, and our fiscal policies and affairs are such, that it does behoove us in this crisis to make every practical saving, to make every reduction in domestic expenditures, either in the area of the chapter the bill now being considered or in any other, that it is possible for us tor make, and at the same time maintain the services of the Government which are indispensable either in time of war or in time of peace; and also to support and provide funds for the projects having to do with rivers and harbors and flood control which are now in course of construction, and which will also make a valuable and material contribution to any war effort we may be called upon to make.

Mr. President, the position I shall take with respect to the pending amendments and with respect to every effort to reduce our expenditures is not inconsistent with the position I have taken in the past. It is true that when the subcommittee which worked on this portion of the bill heard testimony, and at the time the bill was reported, the Korean situation had not developed. That situation, Mr. President, I will say in all candor and frankness, has not only shed a different light upon the money that is proposed to be appropriated for rivers and harbors and flood control but it directs our attention to and requires our diligent inquiry and reexamination into every other expenditure provided in the bill. With respect to the military and the national defense, we shall need to review all items dealing therewith, because of the necessity of revising those figures upward, not necessarily in this particular bill but in the supplemental appropriation legislation which will soon come before this body in line with the President's request to increase the military expenditures for the next fiscal year, or appropriations therefore, by some $10,500,000,000.

Mr. President, not only have we pending before the Congress now a request for an increase of $10,500,000,000 in appropriations for national defense and national security, but I am advised that the pending request will be followed in a day or two by another request for expenditures of $4,000,000,000 plus for military aid to the Atlantic Pact nations.

Yes, Mr. President, circumstances have changed, and we must make revisions in the pending bill. I shall support the amendment of which I am a cosponsor, offered by 32 Senators, to reduce many of the expenditures in the bill by 10 percent. The amendment to which I refer is lettered "A," and dated July 14, 1950. It is signed by the senior Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES] and 31 other Members. It would have the effect, if adopted, of reducing the appropriations in the pending bill by some $600,000,000. I helped work on that amendment. Work was begun on it by some of those of us who have signed it. Consultations were had on it, and work on drafting it was begun before the Korean war developed.

Mr. President, I call attention to the fact, which I am sure every Senator who was a Member of the Senate at that time remembers, that even last year, in view of the fiscal situation of our Government, I sponsored an amendment to one of the appropriation bills to require the President to make cuts in all the appropriations for domestic purposes, to bring about a reduction of from 5 to 10 percent, which would have reduced the expenditures for the last fiscal year by from $2,000,000,000 to $4,000,000,000.

I have stood for economy in the past. I stand for it now. I made a hard fight for that amendment. Notwithstanding that some 63 Senators signed a petition addressed to the majority policy committee and the minority policy committee, urging that the original resolution I had introduced be brought on the floor for a vote, that opportunity was denied to the Senate. Thereafter, those of us who then foresaw the danger of deficit spending and who are conscientious and sincere in wanting to bring about a reduction in nonessential expenditures insofar as it is possible to do so in order to get our fiscal affairs back in order and to operate the Government in this time of prosperity on a cash and carry basis, were not permitted to vote on the resolution in its own right and for its own purposes. Therefore we were compelled, as a last resort, to offer that resolution as an amendment to an appropriation bill. By reason of the fact that the amendment was legislative in character a parliamentary objection was raised to it. Therefore we had to move to suspend the rule which required a two-thirds vote of the Senate. In order that we could offer the amendment and have it considered in connection with the appropriation bill it was necessary to secure that two-thirds vote so as to suspend the rule. We were not able to secure the two-thirds vote which the Senate rule requires, but I rejoiced when we did receive 49 votes for the amendment, a majority of the full membership of this body.

Yes, Mr. President, some of us here have not merely in this emergency come onto the floor of the Senate and cried out against wasteful and unnecessary expenditures. Therefore the position I shall take today is consistent with the position I have taken in the past. I shall further point out that when taking the position I do in respect to the pending amendments I am not taking a position contrary to the position I have taken in the past on the issue of reducing expenditures.

Mr. MUNDT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCLELLAN. I yield.

Mr. MUNDT. As one who was associated with the distinguished Senator from Arkansas in the efforts made in connection with the last appropriation bill, and who is associated with him now, and with the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES], and a number of our other colleagues, in this effort, I wonder if the Senator from Arkansas does not feel, as does the junior Senator from South Dakota, that a horizontal cut of civilian and nonessential expenditures is the only equitable and effective way to establish sizable economies Congress has available to it, that the effort to slash vertically here and there a little individual appropriation is never going to achieve the over-all objective which is necessary in the interest of sound public financing?

Mr. McCLELLAN. If I correctly understand the able Senator, I agree with him. I am in favor of the adoption of the amendment I referred to earlier today. I am not sure that the Senator from South Dakota was on the floor at that time; I refer to the amendment signed or endorsed by some 32 Members of the Senate, an amendment which would bring about a reduction of more than $600,000,000.

However, I am opposed to the pending amendment, which singles out one phase of the domestic construction program and undertakes to emasculate it. I propose to state on the floor of the Senate the reasons why the amendment is not wise and why, if adopted, it is destined to do definite injury to any war effort we shall have to make.

Mr. MUNDT. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield further, I should like to associate myself completely with the point of view he has just stated. I also am one of those who signed the pending amendment providing for a 10-percent slash.

It is true, is it not, that the amendment was prepared at a period of time considerably prior to the time when war broke out in Korea?

Mr. McCLELLAN. I so stated earlier in my remarks, Mr. President.

Mr. MUNDT. I wonder whether the Senator from Arkansas will also agree with me that if, as is entirely possible, greater savings may now be necessary as a consequence of that war, the appropriate thing to do would be to increase the percentage of the horizontal slash to 15 or 18 or 20 percent, making it effective equally upon all the nonessential expenditures, rather than concentrating it injudiciously upon one or two projects.

Mr. McCLELLAN. We have already included in the bill the amount the committee recommended for reclamation. I do not recall that any assault was made upon that expenditure, by requesting that it be cut 50 or 60 percent.

I undertake to say that, as between the two, here we are considering a number of projects already far advanced in construction, projects which have great power facilities and power-production capacities. To abandon them or drastically curtail them would be a serious impairment of our effort to strengthen our position and our striking power and our productive capacity in the war which we may have to enter into upon a very much broader scale than obtains today.

Mr. President, a few days ago I was consulted by a representative of the Associated Press with reference to my position, particularly with respect to river-and-harbor and flood-control projects. I answered the questions which were asked me, and the reporter did a fair job of reporting the views I expressed. An article based on that interview was published in newspapers in my home State—I do not know whether it was published in other newspapers. I wish to read a few paragraphs from the newspaper article, which announced the position I took before I had any knowledge of or anticipated any such drastic amendment as the one now proposed to the pending measure.

I read now from the Associated Press newspaper article:

WASHINGTON, July 23.—Senator McCLELLAN, Democrat of Arkansas, president of the Rivers and Harbors Congress, said today the national emergency transcends in importance any domestic public-works program not indispensable or incident to the war effort.

He said he was in full accord with President Truman's directive of last Friday under which Federal agencies must as far as practical defer, curtail, or slow down projects which do not contribute directly to defense or civilian requirements essential in the changed international situation.

At the same time McCLELLAN said the Senate should go ahead and appropriate for the water projects set out in the $34,638,000,000 appropriation bill for the 1951 fiscal year which started July 1. He said he wanted the money available should conditions permit going ahead.

But if conditions did not permit, he added, then he would be in wholehearted accord with a suspension of the program during the emergency. He said some projects had reached a stage where it would be better economy to complete rather than abandon them.

Mr. President, I submit that this arbitrary proposal to cut these appropriations by 50 percent, as proposed in the pending amendment, or by 60 percent, as is intended to be proposed by the able junior Senator from Illinois [Mr. DOUGLAS], is not in the best interests and service of the Nation.

The President of the United States has already issued a directive to every agency of the Government, including the Corps of Engineers, to make an immediate study, to revise plans, and to submit a report as to which of the projects are vital and essential, and the construction of which is necessary to be continued in order definitely to support what may become—although I hope it will not—an all-out war effort.

Mr. President, I can report to the Senate that conferences between the Chief of the Corps of Army Engineers and the Bureau of the Budget are now under way, looking directly to finding the answers, and to making in these funds, after they are appropriated, every reduction which possibly can be made consistent with the needs of the country and its best interests while this emergency is upon us.

I am advised that thus far in the course of that conference, it has developed that in the case of many of these projects, particularly those which have tremendous hydroelectric power capacity, it will be the administration's desire, the desire of the National Defense Establishment, and the desire of all other agencies of the Government having to do the job of mobilizing and utilizing the resources of the Nation in a war effort, to have a number of these projects constructed.

I wish to say that in the consultations now in progress, in the case of a number of projects for which appropriations may be made, it will be decided that construction should be deferred, just as was done in the other war, when practically the entire program was suspended.

However, Mr. President, there are now in the course of construction—and some of them are nearing completion—many vital projects appropriated for in this bill which will give us more striking power, more productive capacity. From the point of view of economy, which is what we are talking about now, not only would it be uneconomical to abandon those projects at this time, because in such case we would have to pay the contractors with whom the Government already has contracted, and it would simply be false economy to stop those projects. It would weaken our defensive power, our strength of resistance, which we may require here at home some day.

Mr. President, the wise thing for this body to do is to pass this title of the appropriation bill, recommended by the committee as the result of its studies. There are certain projects, perhaps three or four in my State, which have power facilities. One is nearly completed. Another is about one-half completed. But it would not serve the interest of victory, in case of an all-out war, to abandon those projects. That power will be needed, and it will be needed badly. To support the war effort, not merely the men who are sent to the front are required, though of course, we must have them on the battlefield, but back of those men must be a strong economy, a productive capacity. In modern warfare that productive capacity must be increased and made available as quickly as possible. I do not know and no one can say that we shall have 2, 3, or 5 years in which to get ready to build up our strength for victory in the next conflict, as has been the case in the past.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Arkansas yield to the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. McCLELLAN. I am happy to yield to the able chairman of the Appropriations Committee.

Mr. McKELLAR. In accord with what the Senator is saying, I call his attention to the fact that there are 39 power projects contained in the bill, involving appropriations to the extent of $301,000,000.

Mr. McCLELLAN. I may remind the able Senator that if we cut these projects 50 percent—and, Mr. President, bear in mind that the Senate in this amendment is not trying to say how this money shall be spent——

Mr. McKELLAR. Not at all.

Mr. McCLELLAN. It is not giving any directions. In fact, if the amendment is adopted, we shall be making unworkable, if not repudiating, every direction given by the committee in its report.

Mr. McKELLAR. That is absolutely correct.

Mr. McCLELLAN. There is a proper way to approach this matter. I yield further to the able chairman.

Mr. McKELLAR. I say to the Senator that, as I understood, the last proposal was for a reduction of 60 percent, which would represent a reduction from $301,000,000 to about $120,000,000. If that is done, it will mean that, to that extent, our power to defend the country will be weakened. We all know that electricity is used—all that we can get of it. We know that, because we provide for it. Every day people come before our committee advocating the development of power projects. Of course, we make provision to build up electrical power for the country in every possible way, because it has done so much for the country. It can do still more for it in time of war. I am delighted to hear the strong statements made by my good friend, the Senator from Arkansas, whom I regard as one of the best men we have in the Senate.

Mr. McCLELLAN. I thank the able Senator for his compliment and for his valuable contribution to this discussion.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Arkansas yield to the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. McCLELLAN. I am glad to yield.

Mr. FERGUSON. The Senator, of course, is very familiar, is he not, with the letter which was written by the President to the various agencies, requesting them to cut down on all expenses that were not essential to the military effort?

Mr. McCLELLAN. Yes; and I have just stated to this body that the President's directions to which the Senator refers are now in process of being carried out by this agency and the Bureau of the Budget. I understand that in consultations to date it has developed and become perfectly apparent that many of these projects cannot be abandoned without economic loss, in the first place, and, in the second place, that many of them are needed as a vital contribution to essential preparation for the period ahead, when we may require total mobilization in order to meet the exigencies of the world crisis.

Mr. FERGUSON. The Senator is also familiar, is he not, with the fact that in World War II, under a similar set of circumstances, or very nearly so——

Mr. McCLELLAN. I do not agree that it was a similar set of circumstances. We did not have nearly so many projects under way, or so many projects that were so vital to the war effort.

Mr. FERGUSON. The percentage stated by the Executive was 78, with but 22 percent of the amount remaining. The Senator is also familiar, is he not, with the fact that these are lump-sum appropriations? For example, the projects cover flood control on the Mississippi River, so that the Corps of Engineers will be able to go over the program again, approve those which are vital to the national defense, and proceed with them 100 percent?

Mr. McCLELLAN. They will not be able to proceed with them, if this appropriation is cut 50 percent; I can assure the Senator of that.

Mr. FERGUSON. The Senator from Michigan feels otherwise.

Mr. McCLELLAN. The proposal for a cut is being carried entirely too far. What I am trying to establish, and to cause Senators to think of and realize, is that it is far better to pass this bill and let the Bureau of the Budget, as the representative of the President of the United States, in consultation with the Chief of the Corps of Engineers and the Defense Department, go over these projects and withhold the spending of money from projects which are not essential, but to make it available to them when they are essential. I challenge the Senate with this amendment. There is not a Senator on this floor who can now rise and make the selection, and make it accurately, as to which projects should be discontinued.

About 99 percent of the projects, referring particularly to dams for the development of hydroelectric power, are already under construction. We are not starting new projects. We are not starting a new program. There may be one or two exceptions, here and there; but about 90 percent of this appropriation is for work already under way, on which the Government would have to take a loss under its contractual obligations in connection with the construction of these projects.

Last year, when I urged adoption of a similar amendment, it was said by some that it was wrong to ask the President to do what would be required under the amendment, that he might cut out some of my projects, when we asked him to make a cut of 5 or 10 percent. I said on the floor of the Senate at that time that I would trust the President of the United States in time of peace to make a reduction in expenditures; that I would trust the President not to make cuts merely arbitrarily or for reprisal against anyone who had insisted upon the adoption of the amendment. I say today, Mr. President, that if I can trust the President in time of peace to try to effect economy, I can trust the President of the United States and the Bureau of the Budget and the Defense Department in time of war to construct only such projects as are vital and essential to the war program.

Mr. President, I may say further that we are going to yield far more power than that to the President within the next few days. We are going to pass a bill, either the one already recommended by the administration and which is now before the Banking and Currency Committee, or one even much stronger than that, delegating to the President of the United States unprecedented powers.

Mr. McKELLAR, Mr. FERGUSON, and Mr. THYE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Arkansas yield, and if so, to whom?

Mr. McCLELLAN. I yield first to the able chairman of the committee, who rose first, I believe. I am very happy to yield to him.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, much has been said about economy. If this amendment were agreed to, what would be its effect with respect to the item of $301,000,000? What would it mean? It would mean that instead of saving money it would cost the Government two-thirds of that amount, or about two-thirds. I shall not attempt to be exact, but it would be in the neighborhood of between $190,000,000 and $200,000,000.

I suppose the Senator from Illinois, the Senator from Michigan, and other Senators will say that is not very consequential. I am one of the old-fashioned persons who believe that a couple of hundred million dollars, especially when we are at war, is a rather important amount of money. I do not want to be extravagant in spending money. The contracts are already made, and two-thirds of them would have to be paid for twice.

Mr. McCLELLAN. I thank the able Senator.

I shall be glad to yield, now, to the Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. THYE. Mr. President, I should like to raise a couple of questions in connection with some items in the appropriation bill. These items relate to flood-control in the State of Minnesota. I am in favor of economy, and that is one reason why I am greatly concerned at this time because I find myself in the very unhappy position of opposing economy in connection with these items in the appropriation bill. But as I look at the report on flood control, I find an item of $35,000 for a survey or study in connection with the development of a plan of flood control at Aitkin, Minn.

All of us, Mr. President, read of the terrific flood which damaged and devastated much property in Minnesota within the past few months.

There is another project on the Clearwater River for which more than $2,000,000 has been appropriated and expended, and it will require $1,250,000 to complete the project. That amount is in the appropriation bill in connection with the project. If we fail to appropriate the necessary funds, the project must come to a standstill. Funds have been invested to no avail unless we complete the project.

Mr. President, I have seen that area. I have seen bridges absolutely washed out, power dams under many feet of water, including an entire power unit and building at Crookston, which had supplied power to the city and the surrounding communities. I saw the entire countryside under water.

The only reason I am speaking at this moment is that if one of the items, amounting to $1,300,000, is cut 50 percent, in accordance with one amendment, and 60 percent in accordance with another amendment, I am wondering what the full effect on the project will actually be when such a drastic reduction is made.

Mr. McCLELLAN. I may say to the able Senator that it will simply mean waste in Government if we pursue such a policy.

Mr. THYE. Mr. President, there is another question which arises in my mind with reference to the Red River of the North. There is a flood-control project in North Dakota which also affects Minnesota. There is an item of $1,300,000 in connection with it which would be affected by the proposed reduction.

Mr. President, I am for economy, but I am bothered at this moment because any Senator who votes against the amendments will be looked upon by every taxpayer in the Nation as one who is reckless and wasteful with Federal tax revenues. Yet, at the same time, I represent in part a State in which only a few months ago in some areas the water was anywhere from 6 to 12 feet deep. Furniture was floating around in dining rooms. The water was away up the walls, and homes were practically ruined by being submerged in water 6 or 7 feet deep for several weeks. Farms were standing under many feet of water, and they cannot produce anywhere near a normal crop this year. The farmers suffered damage to their real estate as well as losing a year's crops. They are in no position to look into the future with much hope or courage unless they can see steps taken to prevent future floods.

If the item in the appropriation bill of $1,300,000 for the project on the Red River, to which I have referred, is cut 50 percent, I should like to know definitely as to whether we shall have any construction which will give us any assurance of controlling future floods.

Mr. McCLELLAN. I may answer the Senator by saying that he will have to address his question to those Senators who are responsible for such amendments. I would not be able to answer the question for them, because I am opposing the amendments, and I pointed out in my humble way what the Senator from Minnesota has been explaining. I say there will have to be sacrifices made.

There is one small item in the bill about which I am particularly concerned, because the Federal Government has constructed on the opposite side of the river from a little county seat town a large levee which protects a great farming area on the eastern bank of the river, but in constructing it the result has been that the water level on the other side has been raised to such an extent that in January 1949 the flood level was so high that public schools had to be closed for 6 weeks. It would require only $228,000 to construct the protection levee, but even that may have to go by the board in this emergency.

I am pointing out that my community may be hit and the community of the Senator from Minnesota may be hit by any reduction which may be made. I do not want such drastic, ill-advised, and ill-considered reductions made which will result in curtailing or slowing down the construction of projects the completion of which is badly needed to help build up our military power.

Mr. THYE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. McCLELLAN. I yield.

Mr. THYE. Mr. President, I should like to ask the very able and distinguished Senator from Arkansas if he will join me in asking the Senator from Illinois [Mr. DOUGLAS], who has sponsored the 60-percent reduction in appropriations, if he can give us some explanation of how and in what manner he would propose that the engineer department deal with the flood situation in the Red River Valley if floods should recur at some future date, if we cut the appropriation which the committee has recommended.

I am sorry that the very able junior Senator from Illinois saw fit to walk off the floor while I was framing a question for his consideration.

Mr. McCLELLAN. The Senator from Illinois has not presented his amendment. The pending amendment is to reduce the appropriation 50 percent. I assume the able Senator from Illinois will offer his amendment, and when he does, I expect to ask him a number of questions along that line. I am sure we shall have that opportunity. Possibly he can give the answers in which the Senator from Minnesota and I are very much interested.

Mr. THYE. I thank the able Senator from Arkansas. I know his strong convictions about economy

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCLELLAN. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. I remember very distinctly the horrible floods which occurred in the Senator's State earlier this year. I remember the loss and destruction of property and the interference with business which occurred as a result of those floods. I should like to know if the businesses in that section of the Senator's State were particularly hurt, whether it added to the income taxes and other taxes this year, and whether it seriously detracted from the amount of income which would go to the United States Government.

Mr. THYE. Mr. President, I can answer the question of the very able senior Senator from Tennessee. The Senator was most considerate, not only of my own request, but of the request of the delegations which came from the Northwest and pleaded for appropriations. He was most considerate in allowing us all the time we desired in which to be heard.

Mr. President, I will say to the very able chairman that tremendous expense is entailed on a community which has sustained a flood, such as the stricken Aitkin community and the Crookston-East Grand Forks area in northwestern Minnesota, where water stood on the land for weeks and weeks, where buildings were submerged in water several feet deep along the sidings and walls, where the power dam was under a lake of water so that it was impossible to see the ripple of the water as it flowed over the dam, with the entire generating unit of the power plant, as at Crookston, standing in a lake of water. It is very easy to see that a community is called upon to bear a heavy expense in replacing or reconditioning power units alone. Then when for miles and miles and over the entire countryside all the farm buildings are in a bad condition because of the fact that they have been standing in water for many weeks, the pastures and the meadows are ruined, and the fields are too wet to put in a normal crop—and when the farmers lose their crop they have lost the land for a year—and the people are called upon to pay an extra assessment to repair the roads of their townships, and to pay their school districts for schoolhouse repairs, it is certain that the community will not, for many, many years, recover from the devastating loss caused by this one flood.

I know farmers who have absolutely folded up. They have sold their livestock. They have said, "What is the use? This is the third flood we have suffered now in the past 5 years, and we can't take it any longer; we are moving out." They are out of that community, a community in which they have resided for many years.

When I see an item for which I pleaded in the past 3 months, and on which delegations have come from my State to plead for, cut by 50 percent, I am the most unhappy man on the Senate floor, first, because, apparently, I am opposing an economy move and, second, because the amendment, if adopted, would take away from these people the appropriations which have been recommended not only to overcome future floods, but to try in some manner to correct the damage they suffered in the past few weeks or months.

So I say to the very able chairman, for whom I have the greatest personal feeling, because of the consideration he showed my delegations from Minnesota who came here pleading for this appropriation, that the communities that suffered these flood losses will be years and years overcoming the losses they suffered in the past 5 months due to the terrific floods, the damage from which we are attempting to correct by means of this appropriation.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Mr. President, in concluding my remarks I wish to mention two things. It appears to have become the periodic pastime with some elements in the Nation to attack the rivers and harbors flood-control program. There are those, Mr. President, who in times of peace, even if we had a surplus in the United States Treasury, would oppose these projects. I see the able Senator from Illinois [Mr. DOUGLAS] pointing to himself. I am surprised to know that he takes that view. However, since he wants to be so identified, I accept this self-identification. There is much too much false propaganda which is continuously spread, and smears are being made continuously that these are political pet projects. The term "pork barrel" is used, and an effort is made to do everything possible to discredit this program. I wish to say only a few words in defense.

If our budget were in balance and we were enjoying normal conditions, or anything like normal conditions, I would favor appropriations of twice the amount proposed here, if we had the facilities to make the expenditures economically during the next fiscal year. Throughout the history of this country the Federal Government has expended a total of $2,245,000,000 for rivers and harbors. Today on many of our harbors and in many of our ports we have valuable and indispensable transportation facilities which the Federal Government has built with these expenditures. From authoritative sources, and from the best sources, so far as I know, it is estimated that from 1928 through 1948, a period of 20 years, the savings resulting in transportation costs and other benefits incident to these expenditures amounted to $5,478,000,000, or $2.20 in benefits recovered in those 20 years for each $1 expended throughout the history of the Nation. That is a large dividend, Mr. President.

Mr. President, that kind of program builds an economy. That is the kind of program that keeps us from having to provide leaf-raking jobs for relief. That is the kind of program that promotes the development of power. That is the kind of program that makes the wheels of industry turn. That is the kind of program that provides transportation to carry the commerce of the country.

Throughout our history our Government has spent a total of $2,710,000,000 on flood-control projects. From 1928 through 1948 the benefits returned to the people from those investments amounted to $5,600,000,000, or $2.07 for every dollar the Federal Government had expended in all its history for this class of projects. Those who are prejudiced, uninformed, or careless call that "pork barrel" spending—how silly that is.

Mr. President, communities suffer terrific economic losses when floods occur, just as the able Senator from Minnesota has cited. Similarly hundreds of localities can be pointed to which have had the same experience and where people have had to abandon their homes and investments because of lack of adequate protection. In other places and in other areas, where projects have been constructed we find growing communities and we find a healthy economy. It is on that healthy economy that we build and make progress. It is that economy which brings in the revenue which is so vitally needed to support our Government today, with its high cost of operation and with the undue and extraordinary burden placed upon it in the support of foreign nations in an attempt to help them rehabilitate their economy and to face the threat to the security of the free peoples of the earth.

Mr. President, that does not take into account, and there has not been an estimate that is accurate, the number of human lives which these projects have saved. Yet it is smeared, "pork barrel." I say there is not a domestic program of public-works construction in the Nation today that has the actual value and holds out the prospect for the building and expanding of our economy as does the flood control and river and harbor and reclamation program, and I will add to them soil conservation and forest conservation. Those are programs which deal with resources which are very important and which afford an opportunity for people to earn a livelihood.

Mr. President, there is criticism of our program when we start to do something here in America. There is always a desire to smear every constructive effort pointing toward progress in this country. Practically all these projects not only provide jobs, but they make opportunity for jobs in the future. Of course, I refer to the major projects. I do not mean, of course, that every project in the bill is absolutely meritorious. Human judgment may err. The judgment of the engineers may err. The judgment of the committee may be in error. The judgment of Congress may be in error. But I say that no man within the sound of my voice can successfully challenge the constructive and progressive merits of these programs.

When it comes to spending money in foreign countries, however, to construct similar projects, we must not cut them; we must pour the money out. So the the critics of our home program say. I am not opposed to helping the countries abroad. I voted to help them. But, Mr. President, in view of our fiscal condition at home, I voted to reduce those expenditures, and I shall do so again. I wonder if those who propose the pending amendment, whose effect would be to reduce the public-works program in this country, the rivers and harbors program, by 50 percent, are ready to reduce foreign expenditures intended to rehabilitate the economy of the countries whose productive capacity we have already had to rehabilitate until it has reached a point over and above their capacity before the war.

Yet we have to continue to give them help. I desire to lend some help to them, but my information is that there will come before us a request for $4,000,000,000-plus, within the next few days, in order to help arm countries in foreign lands. That may be in our national interest, and I may support it, but I am not willing to send $4,000,000,000 over there to help arm other countries, who, if a world-wide crash comes, we hope will be our allies and will fight with the same bravery and with the same determination and with the same sacrifices our boys are exhibiting today in Korea, and at the same time absolutely stop and cripple, and irreparably injure our program here at home.

Mr. President, I am willing that this bill be passed, that these appropriations be made, and I approve of the directive given by the President in his letter a few days ago. I am in wholehearted accord with that. I am perfectly willing that the President, the Bureau of the Budget, his representatives, and the National Defense Establishment, consider these projects, weigh them, and determine those which will not make a substantial contribution in the emergency, and delay their construction, and withhold the spending of the money, but I would rather let them make the decision. They have to make many vital decisions which the Congress cannot make.

That is the orderly way to proceed. I can well appreciate that if that is done, possibly my State will lose some projects; but I am not interested in my State alone. I believe this program, if it protects a community, as the able Senator from Minnesota stated a while ago, if the action by the whole country protects one community, there comes back to the Government, from the productive capacity of that community, by reason of the protection they receive, revenue, when otherwise many of them would have to charge off losses and not have to pay taxes by reason thereof. Any flood-control project, any rivers and harbors project, constructed anywhere in this Nation, which contributes to the welfore, to the health, and to the economy of a local community, contributes also to the strength of our national economy.

Mr. THYE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCLELLAN. I yield to the Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. THYE. We are not only losing the income from those communities, but the National Red Cross has been there attempting to rehabilitate them, spending thousands of dollars in rehabilitation. The President of the United States from his own emergency funds has already assigned thousands of dollars to assist in the rehabilitation and to meet emergencies in the communities, to say nothing about the revenues which will be lost, not only directly, in the form of local taxes, but in the form of national income taxes.

Mr. McCLELLAN. I agree with the Senator. Those who refer to the effort to remedy that condition as a "pork barrel" project, are in my opinion going to get their criticism so salty that the people will not swallow it.

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCLELLAN. I yield to the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. WILEY. I have listened with interest to the remarkable address of the distinguished Senator, and I have been asking myself several questions. The Senator has just commented to the effect that there was something to be appended to the effect that the President would have certain discretion. Can the Senator tell me just what that is?

Mr. McCLELLAN. I did not say it would be appended to the bill. I said the President had already issued a directive to all the agencies of the Government, and I have checked on it. The Chief of the Corps of Engineers, and the Bureau of the Budget are now carrying on consultations to ferret out the projects which can be dispensed with and those which it is essential to carry on in a war effort, or to be carried on as a matter of sound economy. The Senator understands that practically every one of these projects is under construction, not every one, but practically all of them, and the Government has an obligation.

Mr. WILEY. In case we get into an all-out war, or in case we have to appropriate ten or fifeen billion dollars to carry on the war in Korea, what percentage of the material that would be used in these projects, represented in dollars, could be deferred?

Mr. McCLELLAN. I cannot answer that, because when projects are constructed, it is necessary to have the materials required on the particular projects.

Mr. WILEY. Perhaps I have not made my question clear, and no doubt it was my fault. I should like to preface my question by a statement.

In my own State, to which I expect to return again tomorrow, the middle-class people, who have their savings in what we call dollars, in insurance, in Government bonds, who have already given up 50 cents on every investment dollar because a dollar will now buy only 50 cents' worth, are terribly concerned lest we do something which will jeopardize the value of the dollar further. Widows, trust estates, educational institutions, all are tied up in that manner. If we get into the situation where the purchasing value of the dollar is 40 cents or 30 cents or 20 cents or 10 cents, we shall have robbed those who are the middle class of that which has and will sustain them.

I presume the argument of the Senator from Illinois [Mr. DOUGLAS] is based upon that theory that we must do that which is most nearly right. We are facing a world emergency. Whether or not the trouble in Korea is the beginning of a series of troubles involving our spending from ten to twenty billion dollars a month is another thing.

But the thought which has occurred most insistently to me after the distinguished Senator from Arkansas made the statement respecting Government agencies evaluating projects that can be postponed, is that if it could be said that 10 or 20 or 30 percent of them can be postponed, then we should not appropriate that money, because it means we have to levy it on the people. I wonder whether any information has yet been received from these agencies to indicate what proportion of the projects provided for might with justification be delayed.

Mr. McCLELLAN. There is no way of telling that at this moment. That, I believe, is the purpose of the consultation and the survey now being made. The purpose is to determine just what projects can be delayed. I shall have to defer to the judgment of those in charge of the Government. We are in a war. We are asked for $10,500,000,000. I cannot vote against that request. I do not like to spend that money. But I want our boys to be supported with the best we can give them, and I know every other Senator does. We have to defer to the judgment of others in respect to many of these things.

As to projects, I am sure some in my State will not be constructed. But with respect to those projects I believe it is wise to pass the bill as it is and letting those in charge of the Government make the choice instead of arbitrarily cutting 50 or 60 percent. If we cannot trust the Military Establishment and the Bureau of the Budget to make a wise choice according to their best judgment, and make an honest decision, then God pity the boys who are fighting. Then whom can they trust?

Mr. KEFAUVER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCLELLAN. I yield.

Mr. KEFAUVER. I wonder what amendment the Senator has in mind offering to authorize or direct the President to reduce the nonessential expenditures? I think we are all in favor of doing that. I simply wondered whether the Senator had an amendment prepared, or just what the nature of the authorization would be.

Mr. McCLELLAN. As the Senator may know, I subscribe to the other amendment to be offered by the able Senator from New Hampshire to undertake a reduction of 10 percent in a number of the agencies, that is, those not related to military requirements. The other amendment does not apply to those agencies. I think that in this crisis we may even have to call upon desirable services to make sacrifices in order to conserve and in order to make funds available for the war effort.

Mr. KEFAUVER. If a research were made by the departments, on the order of the President, and it should be found that a reduction of more than 10 percent could be made in those departments, does the Senator have in mind an amendment providing for withholding funds on projects which can properly be delayed?

Mr. McCLELLAN. I do not have in mind any such amendment. The President can stop the departments from spending any money he wants them not to spend. If the 10 percent we want to cut from some agencies not associated with the war effort should prove inadequate. I do not know whether greater cuts could be made or not. It may be that in consideration of the emergency a greater cut could be made. But there is no compulsion either upon the President or any agency to spend appropriated funds.

Mr. KEFAUVER. Does not the Senator think the withholding is more likely to be made if there were some direction by the President to that effect?

Mr. McCLELLAN. I agree with the Senator; and I would be more than willing to go to 20 or 25 percent if we can have any basis on which to justify it. But much as I want economy, I would not actually want to make cuts that would be harmful, that would not be prudent or practical in view of the services we expect our agencies to render.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCLELLAN. I yield.

Mr. MAGNUSON. The Senator answered the first question I wished to ask him. Of course, in all these cases the Executive can withhold or freeze, as we call it, any of these amounts.

Is it not true that the President of the United States has said within the past few days that with respect to what he terms nonessential expenditures he would freeze them and withhold spending on them, so we do not need to take action in that connection?

Mr. McCLELLAN. That is absolutely correct. That applies to the chapter of the bill we are considering. As I have reported to the Senate, consultations pursuant to that directive are now in progress. Definitely, I think we are going to find that in the case of a vast majority of these projects, as to amount at least—not in number but as to amount of appropriations—the military is going to determine, the representative of the President is going to determine, every agency of the Government that will have the direct responsibility for the war effort is going to determine that those projects are vital, and that we ought to continue their construction—they are already under construction—and that we ought to complete them as quickly as possible.

No one knows whether the final blow, the final assault upon the liberty of mankind, is going to fall this year. It may not. I hope it never will. But even if it does not in the next few months, or even in the current fiscal year, at present there is no one who can give us assurance that it will not in the next year, and in view of world conditions we must now begin sacrificing so as to implement whatever is vitally needed to contribute to the essentials of defense and offense when that critical time shall come.

Mr. STENNIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCLELLAN. I yield.

Mr. STENNIS. The amendment would make a 50-percent reduction. I wish to invite the attention of the Senator and the Senate to the fact that in connection with many of these projects a certain amount of the appropriation goes for maintenance of levees and flood-control projects. For instance, for the lower Mississippi Valley the bill carries a total figure for the area from Cairo, Ill., to the mouth of the Mississippi River, of $66,000,000. Is it not true that $15,000,000 of that is set aside for maintenance? Does the Senator have those figures before him?

Mr. McCLELLAN. I do not have figures before me, but the Senator has the report before him and can state the figures with accuracy. I accept them as he states them.

Mr. STENNIS. That would leave then $51,000,000 for what might be called new work, and if we apply the amendment to that and subtract $33,000,000 it would leave only $18,000,000 for that vast area from Cairo, Ill., to the mouth of the Mississippi River.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Much of that work is already under contract.

Mr. STENNIS. That is the point I am coming to. The Senator is familiar with nearly all the work which is underway in that vast area. Is it the Senator's opinion that $18,000,000 would be sufficient even to protect the investments which have already been made there, the projects which have already been started and upon which millions of dollars have already been spent? Can the Senator give us his opinion about that?

Mr. McCLELLAN. I think that amount would be wholly inadequate. Again I say, of course, that in forming my judgment I would defer to those who are most competent and experienced in such matters, and upon whose judgment we must rely.

Mr. STENNIS. That is correct; but at the same time does not the Senator from Arkansas feel, based on his experience, that we should leave this matter to the men who are in a position to form an experienced judgment regarding it, particularly with respect to the investments already made?

Mr. McCLELLAN. I agree with the Senator.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator from Arkansas yield, to permit me to ask a question of the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. McCLELLAN. Yes; if I may have unanimous consent for that purpose.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I call the Senator's attention to the fact that in addition to the cuts which would be made by these amendments, the committee itself already has made reductions of 8.6 percent—nearly 9 percent—below the amounts of the budget estimates. Accordingly, those reductions—amounting to 8.6 percent of all the appropriations—will decrease by a very large sum the appropriations; and that reduction should be added to the figures the Senator from Mississippi has just given the Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. STENNIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield, to permit me to make a further observation?

Mr. McCLELLAN. I yield.

Mr. STENNIS. On that point let me say that in addition to the 8.6-percent reduction below the amount of the budget estimate which already has been made by the committee, if we adopt the amendment calling for a 50-percent reduction and if we apply that amendment to the appropriation for this area, so far as construction is concerned the reduction would amount to 64 percent, which would have to be added to the 8.6-percent reduction which already has been made.

Mr. McCLELLAN. That would be a reduction of 64 percent below the budget estimates or the budget requests.

Mr. STENNIS. In total, it would amount to a 72-percent reduction below the amount of the budget estimates for this area, and it would be a reduction of 64 percent under the appropriations contained in the bill as reported by the Senate committee, for this area.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Mr. President, I may say that the amendment—which I intend to support, and of which I am one of the cosponsors—would result in a reduction of approximately $600,000,000.

Mr. WHERRY. I believe the reduction would amount to approximately $800,000,000.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Of course, different estimates have been given, including the $800,000,000 estimate just stated by the Senator from Nebraska. I accept that correction.

Mr. President, the amendment will apply to this appropriation. It is the intention—and I intend to join in that effort—to reduce as much as can possibly be done the appropriations for all nonessential projects. Those appropriations will be reduced another 10 percent, by that amendment. I intend to support it, because I intend to have us be just as economical in these matters as is possible and at the same time to be practical and at the same time to fulfill our obligations and our responsibilities in connection with getting ready for a mighty effort, and a final effort which may have to be made, to preserve the freedom of the world.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCLELLAN. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. I simply wish to say that the statement just made verifies a statement I made earlier in the day, to the effect that it is absolutely impossible to formulate a bill of this kind on the floor of the Senate; it simply cannot be done.

A bill of this sort must be formulated on the basis of the facts and the actual testimony.

Mr. McCLELLAN. I may say to the Senator that I think we have brought in an excellent bill, in view of the conditions which obtained at the time when the bill was reported. However, I feel that some reduction should be made. Therefore, I shall support amendments calling for reductions; but I shall also be happy to have the President and his agencies, in consultation, weed out and conserve any other parts of this appropriation so far as that can be done.

Mr. STENNIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to permit me to make a further observation?

Mr. McCLELLAN. I yield.

Mr. STENNIS. I wish to point out that actually the effect of the amendment calling for a 50-percent reduction would be to make a 72-percent reduction in the amount of the budget estimates with respect to the area from Cairo, Ill., to the mouth of the Mississippi River; and I think that amendment would have a similar effect on other projects throughout the United States, although I cannot be sure of that, because I am not so familiar with the other projects as I am with this one.

Mr. KEM. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCLELLAN. I yield.

Mr. KEM. Mr. President, I should like to say that the Senator from Arkansas is one of the most effective advocates of economy in this body. Ever since I have been a Member of the Senate he has talked that way and he has voted that way.

Mr. McCLELLAN. I thank the Senator.

Mr. KEM. I wish to ask the Senator from Arkansas a question in regard to the argument he has just made. As I understand, his position is that, if the bill is amended as is proposed by the Senator from New Hampshire and other Senators, the result will be to prevent the completion of the projects mentioned in the bill, with the result that they will not be effective in the war effort.

Mr. McCLELLAN. That is true with respect to a majority of the funds in the bill. I would not say it is true with respect to a majority of the projects in number.

Mr. KEM. Let me invite the Senator's attention to page 232 of the committee report, where the rivers and harbors program for the fiscal year 1951 is set forth.

Glancing down the list, I notice that the first item is one for the Alabama-Coosa Rivers, in Alabama and Georgia—in particular, for the Howell Mill Shoals Dam. The total estimated Federal cost, or the total amount estimated to be necessary to carry out the project, is $28,722,400. The total amount appropriated to date is $469,600, and the amount recommended by the Senate committee is $185,000.

I ask the Senator if it is not obvious that if the amount appropriated in this bill for that project is made available, the project cannot be completed, and therefore it cannot have any possible effect on the war effort.

Mr. McCLELLAN. The project to which the Senator has referred is definitely a project for planning, not for construction.

Mr. KEM. Yes. So the appropriation cannot possibly have any effect, in anyone's mind, on the war effort, can it?

Mr. McCLELLAN. Not so far as items for planning are concerned. However, because of its great power potentialities, the project may become necessary in the war effort. On that point, I defer to those who are in a position to know whether the project would be needed in an all-out war effort.

Mr. KEM. Yes. The Senator from Arkansas does not anticipate that it will be possible to complete the project during the present war, does he?

Mr. McCLELLAN. Of course, Mr. President, construction of the project is not to be started, under this bill; therefore I think the question is rather a moot one.

However, my point is that in the cases in which it is proposed that we spend money for planning, if we get into a war, no one knows—I am sure I do not, and I am sure the Senator from Missouri does not know—what projects can be completed before the war will end. We cannot know that, because we do not know when such a war would end.

However, my thought is that in the case of projects for the planning of which money is now included in the bill, in the course of the conference now taking place a decision may be reached as to postponing the expenditure of that money.

Mr. KEM. Does not the Senator think it is very unlikely that the expenditure of $185,000 for planning for the Howell Mills Shoals Dam on the Alabama-Coosa Rivers, in Alabama and Georgia, will promote the war effort?

Mr. McCLELLAN. I cannot tell, because no one knows how long the war effort will continue.

Mr. KEM. Yes.

Now let me refer to the next large item appearing in the rivers and harbors program for the fiscal year 1951; I refer now to the Demopolis lock and dam, Warrior River system. The total amount appropriated to date is $1,342,500. The amount recommended by the Senate committee at this time for construction is $3,800,000. My question to the Senator is, Is it not obvious that, even if the amount provided in the bill be appropriated, the project cannot be completed so as to be available in the present war effort?

Mr. McCLELLAN. I do not know what the Senator means by the "present war effort." If he means before the final decision in Korea, I would say "No." If he means by the "present war effort" the final decision in the war which we are apprehensive may develop, then I do not know that even this amount of money would be sufficient, or whether it should be doubled and stepped up and the project completed as quickly as possible, in order to make power available in that area to the iron industry and for the production of steel and other vital essentials and indispensables connected with the war effort. I cannot say—the Senator cannot say. That is why I am pleading with Senators to leave these projects in the bill, and to leave it to the Defense Department and to the Bureau of the Budget and to others upon whom we must rely, to make these vital decisions.

Mr. KEM. May I invite the Senator's attention to another item? Dropping down about six lines, we find the Tennessee-Tombigbee waterway in Alabama and Mississippi.

Mr. McCLELLAN. That is another case like the one the Senator referred to earlier. It is planning money. I may say to the able Senator that if this project could be completed, it would make a valuable contribution to the war effort. But this is planning money, and I expect all planning money, except in rare instances, to be withheld and not spent.

Mr. KEM. The Senator will admit, will he not, that the inclusion of $190,000 for planning on that project would not promote our cause in Korea?

Mr. McCLELLAN. I may say to the Senator we have spent a great deal of money on projects which are not promoting the effort in Korea.

Mr. KEM. Then the argument made by the very able Senator with reference to the bill is not applicable, is it, to all the items?

Mr. McCLELLAN. I have said so. I said in the very beginning of my remarks that the appropriations ought to be reduced, but I simply contended that a 50-percent reduction would, in my opinion, be tragic to the war effort.

I do not think we are competent to undertake on this floor now to make a selection of what projects can be dispensed with and to determine which of them are not available or needed in the war effort. I think we had better leave it to those who have the responsibility and who are experienced. Let them make the determination, and I shall abide by it. My State will be affected to some extent, I am sure. I should like to continue these projects. I should like to get certain others constructed that are not even provided for in this bill but which are vitally needed. But I know that we have to sacrifice all the way down the line, and I expect sacrifices to be made. But I do not want us to make sacrifices here and take arbitrary action which will hamper or hinder us in developing the maximum power that we should have if it becomes necessary to go into an all-out war effort.

Mr. KEM. If the Senator will yield further, I should like to ask him whether, in view of the fact that there are so many projects that the amount appropriated in this bill will not bring anywhere near completion, in his judgment, does the Senator think it a sound argument to advance that the bill should be passed exactly as it is brought to the Senate, in order to promote the war effort?

Mr. McCLELLAN. Yes. I say "Yes" to the Senator, subject to the proper reservations I have made all the way through my argument. I do not think it necessary to repeat them. I believe the reservations I have made in regard to passing the bill as it is at present, would cause us to follow a far sounder and wiser course than to arbitrarily cut it in half or to cut it 60 percent and term it "pork barreling," and say we are getting rid of pork barreling. We may have a barrel some day without any pork in it—and an empty barrel, at that—if we do not develop the resources of the country. I do not want the guns we are going to have to send over there to be too few; I do not want our boys to go over there without the equipment necessary to make them the best equipped army and fighting power the Nation can provide.

Mr. THYE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Arkansas yield to the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. McCLELLAN. I yield.

Mr. THYE. If the Senator will yield, I should like to make a brief comment.

Mr. McCLELLAN. I should like to conclude as soon as possible. May I yield the floor to the Senator?

Mr. THYE. If I might be recognized when the very able Senator from Arkansas has finished, I should like to comment briefly on the items in the bill in which I am particularly concerned.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Mr. President, I have concluded my remarks. I am just as anxious for economy as anyone else can be. I shall vote for economy in this bill. I shall not vote for the amendments which would call for a 50- or 60-percent cut in nonwar expenditures; but I want to see some reduction brought about, in the light of the changed conditions. Reductions should be made, and they will be made. They will be made, however, in the wisdom of the Defense Department, which is most competent to judge, and in the wisdom of the President and his representatives in the Bureau of the Budget. I hope the Senate will reject and repudiate this effort to emasculate this meritorious and vital construction program. It will be a sad mistake to adopt this injudicious and false-economy proposal.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD immediately following my remarks made earlier in the day on the amendment proposed by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES] for himself, the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. SALTONSTALL], and other Senators, to the flood control and rivers and harbors section of the bill, a letter from the Director of the Budget with reference to the Des Arc, Ark., project which is in this appropriation.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT,
BUREAU OF THE BUDGET,
Washington, D. C., July 12, 1950.

Hon. JOHN L. MCCLELLAN,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR MCCLELLAN: I have your letter of July 7, 1950, concerning the question of appropriation of $228,000 for construction of a levee on the White River in the vicinity of Des Arc, Ark. This project was authorized in the recent flood control act and, as was pointed out in the letter clearing the project authorization, we recognized that construction work on the east bank levee system had entailed an increase in flood heights in Des Arc. That letter also recognized that there was an obligation on the part of the United States to correct so far as possible the adverse conditions at Des Arc.

I have explained to you the general budgettary position which has been taken with respect to new projects, both under the Corps of Engineers and the Bureau of Reclamation. Whether or not this item comes within the category of new projects is a somewhat moot question now since it has been included in the appropriation bill by the Senate committee. We have no desire to raise an objection to the inclusion of this project in the bill.

Sincerely yours,
F. J. LAWTON, Director.

Mr. McCLELLAN. I also ask unanimous consent to have printed in the body of the RECORD immediately following my remarks a statement prepared by my colleague, the junior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. FULBRIGHT], who is necessarily absent from the Senate today, with reference to another project in the bill, the Dardanelle Dam.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT BY SENATOR FULBRIGHT ON THE APPROPRIATION FOR DARDANELLE DAM

The proposed Dardanelle Dam is a dual-purpose project for navigation and for hydroelectric power. It is a part of the Arkansas Valley comprehensive program which was authorized by the Seventy-ninth Congress in December 1946. The Arkansas Valley program was again considered in the rivers and harbors bill during the present Congress and the total authorization for the comprehensive program was substantially increased.

The Arkansas River Valley is one of the last remaining great river basins which have not benefited from a Federal river improvement program. While there are few navigable streams west of the Mississippi, progress is being made both to the north and to the south of the Arkansas River. On the Missouri River there is now a navigation project under way which would make the river navigable to Sioux City, Iowa. To the south of the Arkansas Valley, a navigation project is under way on the Trinity River. While the people of the area are acutely conscious of the admonition of the President that no new projects should be started, we believe that the Arkansas River Valley should be placed on the same footing as the other basins west of the Mississippi. We have been accustomed to handicaps since the Civil War but we now feel that the other areas have already been given a sufficient head start. I should like to emphasize the fact that there is not at the present time nor has there ever been either a navigation or hydroelectric dam on the three-hundred-and-fifty-odd miles of the Arkansas River from its mouth to the Oklahoma line. This is the most neglected large river in the United States.

As I mentioned previously, the proposed Dardanelle Dam is for navigation and power production. I should like particularly to stress the hydroelectric power potential since the dam will eventually be equipped to generate 60,000 kilowatts.

The Corps of Engineers now has in operation a multiple purpose project—the Norfork Dam on the north fork of the White River near the Missouri State line. I recently ran across a statement on the revenue from hydroelectric power alone at this project since the dam was first put into operation in June 1944. The first power unit installed at Norfork had a capacity of 35,000 kilowatts. This single unit by June 1949, generated power which returned to the Treasury of the United States $3,072,774. On February 12 of this year a second 35,000-kilowatt unit was put into operation, and although I do not have the revenue figures for the 1950 fiscal year, it is obvious that the returns will be much greater. Within the short space of 6 years, the Norfork Dam has already returned to the Treasury more than one-seventh of the total amount which was appropriated for its construction (about $28,000,000). This Nation has made few more prudent investments than Norfork Dam and I am confident that with the development of the South and Southwest, the Dardanelle Dam will be equally successful.

C., July 23, 1950, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

GENERAL APPROPRIATIONS, 1951

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 7786) making appropriations for the support of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1951, and for other purposes.

Mr. ELLENDER obtained the floor.

Mr. THYE. Mr. President, will the Senator from Louisiana yield long enough for me to make a very brief comment on certain items in this bill which might be affected drastically by the proposed 50-percent reduction?

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, I do not intend to speak very long, myself.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair will be glad to recognize the Senator from Minnesota a little later. The previous occupant of the chair indicated that the Senator from Louisiana desired to be recognized.

Mr. THYE. Mr. President, my reason for wishing to be recognized now is that I should like my remarks to follow those of the very able Senator from Arkansas, in order that there may be continuity for anyone who might be reading the RECORD.

Mr. ELLENDER. How long will the Senator speak?

Mr. THYE. I do not think it would take me over 3 or 4 minutes.

Mr. ELLENDER. I shall be glad to yield.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the Senator from Louisiana may yield to the Senator from Minnesota for that purpose.

Mr. THYE. I thank the Senator.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, if the Senator from Minnesota will permit, I should like to say I am very happy that he is going to make a statement, and that I am very glad it is going to be short, because I am very anxious to get a vote on this chapter this afternoon, if possible.

Mr. THYE. Mr. President, I assure the able chairman of the Appropriations Committee that I am just as anxious as anyone that we get action on the appropriation bill, and that I shall assist him by making my remarks very brief.

Mr. President, I am cosponsor of an amendment to the pending bill. It is on the desks of all Senators. It was offered on July 14; it is marked "A," and it calls for a 10-percent cut in many of the appropriations for the executive departments.

I am for economy, but when I look at the appropriations bill and consider the proposal for a general over-all reduction of 50 percent for the flood-control appropriations, I am wondering about the wisdom of such a drastic cut. It would affect many items contained in the bill, including appropriations for the completion of projects.

Insofar as it relates to appropriations for the State of Minnesota, I may say that I have worked and assisted those engaged in developing these flood-control projects for the past 10 years or more. There is one item of $1,350,000 for the Red Lake and Clearwater Rivers flood-control project, which is for the completion of this project. If the appropriation is cut by 50 percent, the work will have to be greatly curtailed and the time of completion naturally postponed to the extent that the construction work is curtailed.

There is another appropriation of $1,300,000 for the Red River of the North, which would affect the area in the vicinity of East Grand Forks. We all recall the devastating floods which occurred in that area within the past few months. I cannot see the wisdom of making such a drastic reduction. As I stated, I favor economy. I joined in the move for a 10-percent reduction, but I cannot and shall not support the 50-percent reduction, because we are proceeding blindly in regard to it. We are not proceeding with full understanding and knowledge of the ultimate effect that such a drastic cut would have upon the projects which are now in the process of construction and soon to be completed, or which would be completed if the funds were made available through passage of this bill.

So, Mr. President, I say it is with regret that I am unable to support the Senators who have proposed a 50-percent reduction in flood-control appropriations.

BURIAL IN THE NATIONAL CEMETERY, NASHVILLE, TENN., OF THE BODIES OF MEMBERS OF THE TENNESSEE AIR NATIONAL GUARD KILLED NEAR MYRTLE BEACH, S. C.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President——

Mr. KEFAUVER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ELLENDER. For what purpose?

Mr. KEFAUVER. In connection with a resolution relating to the burial of 30 boys who were killed in a National Guard plane in South Carolina. It will take not more than 1 minute, I think, if the Senator will yield.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the Senator may yield for that purpose.

Mr. ELLENDER. I yield.

Mr. KEFAUVER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending business be temporarily set aside, and that the Senate proceed to consider House Joint Resolution 513.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Chair lays before the Senate House Joint Resolution 513, coming over from the House of Representatives, which will be stated by title.

The resolution (H. J. Res. 513) to authorize the burial in the National Cemetery at Nashville, Tenn., the bodies of members of the Tennessee Air National Guard killed in a plane crash near Myrtle Beach, S. C., July 23, 1950, was read twice by its title.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Tennessee yield?

Mr. KEFAUVER. I yield.

Mr. WHERRY. Why is the resolution necessary?

Mr. KEFAUVER. Mr. President, let me say, in the first place, that I have consulted with the senior Senator from Tennessee, who is vitally interested in the matter, and I have spoken to the acting majority leader and to the minority leader. There is a technicality involved. Some of the young men who were killed were veterans and some were members of the National Guard. It is impossible to identify all the bodies and ascertain which were veterans and which were National Guard men. The President and the Secretary of War are anxious that the request of the boys' families be complied with, that they all be buried together, and because of that technicality this resolution is necessary.

Mr. WHERRY. Of course I am in favor of the resolution and want it to be agreed to, but I should like the Senator to explain why it is technically necessary.

Mr. KEFAUVER. I will say to the Senator that Representative PRIEST has advised the junior Senator from Tennessee that it probably could be worked out by an Executive order, but there are some legal complications, and he thought the resolution would be the better method. The funeral is to be held tomorrow.

Mr. WHERRY. I am in favor of the resolution. I think that is the proper way to handle it.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I appreciate very much the Senator's statement.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the consideration of the resolution?

There being no objection, the resolution (H. J. Res. 513) was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GENERAL APPROPRIATIONS, 1951

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 7786) making appropriations for the support of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1951, and for other purposes.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, I wish to associate myself with the views expressed by the distinguished senior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. MCCLELLAN].

We have become a great Nation because of the vast resources which our country has possessed. It is well known that as a result of the past two wars in which we were engaged many of these resources have been dissipated. We must not forget that they have been dissipated by other means, too. In the early days of our existence, and for many years thereafter, it was very easy for a farmer to select land of almost his own choosing on which to raise his crops and make a living, but today, were it not for the various projects which were carried out by our Government—for example, in the development of some of our arid acres—our land resources would soon be exhausted. One must travel through the great West and Northwest to appreciate what I am trying to picture. In the State of Washington, for example, where the population has grown in excess of 3,500,000 persons from a mere handful less than 50 years ago, if our Government had not assisted in developing the water resources, that great State would probably have, in a manner of speaking, died on the vine. It could not have increased in population because of its lack of tillable land and the scarcity of power generated from falling water. But now we see that it has become prosperous and incidentally its citizens are great contributors to our Treasury. What has made California rise to be the second State in the Union in population? Its population exceeds that of Pennsylvania. The answer lies in the development of those great water projects which have taken place within the past 25 or 30 years. By and through the assistance of our Government, the great rivers of that locality were harnessed and were made to produce power, and were also made to provide water for irrigating thousands of arid acres.

Today, Mr. President, our Nation is growing a third more food than it produced prior to the recent war. A great deal of that production can be charged to mechanization and better farming, but let us not forget that most of it must be attributed to our endeavors to retain our topsoil. The great Mississippi River has for centuries brought down toward the Gulf of Mexico billions of tons of precious topsoil. The very life blood—why, the heart—of the Mississippi Valley is being brought down to the Gulf by the great Mississippi River. Statistics show that we are losing in the neighborhood of 500,000 acres of land each year. Those lands from which this topsoil is stripped become marginal and incapable of producing crops profitably. Unless we protect our topsoil, I assure you that a large portion of our country will become barren and desert-like.

Mr. President, one would have to visit Persia, as I did last year, to see what would eventually become of our own great country were we not willing to make every effort to continue the preservation and conservation of our land and water resources. It was my privilege last November to visit what was once prosperous and fertile Mesopotamia. That country, only a few centuries ago, maintained a population of almost 20,000,000 persons. Today it can barely sustain the lives of four and a half million to five million persons. Why is that, Mr. President? The Tigris and the Euphrates Rivers with their tributaries, have carried down to the sea most of the top-soil of that great country, so that practically all that is left are narrow strips of land fairly fertile along the rivers and where date palms, vegetables and fruits are grown in small quantities. Further, in some of the valleys of that country, because of the accumulation of top soil, which now impedes the flow of water, much of the land has become alkaline, so that it cannot produce. It has become soggy and since it is not properly drained it will not produce. Doubtless, if the rivers and their tributaries of that great country had been properly harnessed, floods could have been averted and the water resources used for the benefit of its people.

In addition, last year it was my privillege to visit the Garden of Eden. Senators remember from their reading of the Bible how fruitful it is said to have been at one time. It was a beautiful fertile spot. Today it is as bare as my hand; there is nothing left except barren rocks and sand. The top soil of that locality was permitted to find its way unchecked to the sea.

In recent years we have been spending much money to prevent a situation from developing here, similar to that which confronts many of the countries of the Middle East and the Far East. We are acting wisely in preserving our precious water and land resources. It is a sound investment which is certain to redound to the benefit of generations yet unborn.

Mr. President, I could cite many instances to show how with a small expenditure years ago, we have been enabled, literally, to make the deserts of the West bloom. Take, for instance, the Salt River Valley project in Arizona. That project was completed in 1914 at a cost of approximately $20,000,000. Because we had the foresight and the good judgment to harness the rivers of that area for the development of electrical energy and for the irrigation of arid lands, today a section of the United States which was almost barren a few years ago is now paying into the coffers of the United States Treasury about $60,000,000 per year in income taxes. In other words, the $20,000,000 investment made by the Government 36 years ago, and most of which has been repaid, is now producing a tax revenue of $60,000,000 annually.

Or take the great Central Valley of California. Will anyone deny that our Government made a good investment in that area? It is very productive. It has great cities. It produces tons of food and fiber that is in daily use for the benefit of our people. All of that came about by developing a wise use of its water resources. Floods have not only been impeded but the waters have been made to work for the benefit of millions of people.

It has meant wealth to our great Nation, which in turn has been resown, as it were, and used to further develop many of the facilities which have caused us to attain leadership among the nations of the world.

Mr. President, it is because of the great productive capacity of our country today that we are in a position to help others. I might say that our productive capacity is useless without natural resources properly harnessed and cared for. It is axiomatic that our resources constitute the very basis of our production. The money which is asked to be appropriated to develop these resources of ours is absolutely necessary to the welfare of our country, in peace or in war.

Particularly I should like to address myself in reference to the item for flood control of the great Mississippi River. The pending amendment seeks to cut that item by 50 percent or to a little over $33,000,000. In 1928 a plan was worked out by the Corps of Engineers of the Army in order to hasten the flow of water to the Gulf. The river was straightened to a large extent, and many of its bends were eliminated. The river was shortened considerably and that meant a great accumulation of water in the lower reaches. As a result of this straightening the volume of water was so great at one point that in order to prevent serious flood damage it was necessary to find another outlet for that great river. This second outlet happens to be located in my own State. I know whereof I speak, and of the necessity of continuing with this work, lest uncontrollable floods continue to visit us each year.

Mr. EASTLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. ELLENDER. I shall be happy to yield in a moment.

As I stated, this work was authorized in 1928. It was supposed to be completed in about 10 or 12 years. Mr. President, it is still not completed. The entire project was to cost $1,285,000,000. Up to the moment we have spent $786,000,000. We have completed the greater portion of the work in the upper reaches of the river and some of its tributaries. But in order to undo the harm caused by the increased volume of flow that has resulted from the river-straightening process and protect our people in the lower reaches of the river it is absolutely necessary that the entire proposed plan be completed. Unless we complete it, those people will be washed out. Not a year passes now in which we do not have some overflow in Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, and Missouri.

I repeat, one of the reasons for such a situation is that to a large extent the waters from the Mississippi River have been coming down the river at a greater speed, and the waters have risen so fast on many occasions that they have either overflowed the levees or have broken them and inundated much of the fine, valuable land throughout that area.

I now yield to the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. EASTLAND. Does the Senator have the figures as to cost to the country of the great flood of 1927?

Mr. ELLENDER. I do not have the exact figures at the moment, but I surmise that they must amount to many hundreds of millions of dollars.

Mr. EASTLAND. Does not the Senator know that it was in excess of $2,000,000,000?

Mr. ELLENDER. The Senator has refreshed my memory; I believe he is correct.

Mr. EASTLAND. That is for the destruction of property and destruction of crops.

Mr. ELLENDER. I recall that the losses were very great.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ELLENDER. I yield.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Along the line suggested by the Senator from Mississippi, is it not correct to say that the actual value of the crops destroyed was only a small item of the effect it had on future crops, and that certainly future destruction cannot be enumerated in dollars and cents?

Mr. ELLENDER. Yes; and to this must be added the loss of life, which cannot be valued in dollars and cents. As I indicated, under the plan that was agreed upon in 1928, the Army engineers proposed to create a new and larger outlet for the Mississippi River at or near Angola, La. The capacity of the Mississippi River at that point is over twice as great as that of the great river in its lower reaches, hence the necessity for the planned outlet, known as the Morganza spillway. The completion of this outlet would prevent floods in those areas of our country, which I have previously mentioned.

As the situation stands today, the river with some of its curves straightened, drains more quickly its upper sector, and reduces the danger of flooding at its headwaters; but in so doing, it must carry a larger volume of water more quickly through the lower reaches, greatly increasing the danger of flooding its delta area.

To cut this appropriation of $65,000,000 in half and to continue such a process in the future would make it impossible to complete the project within a reasonable period of time. It would probably require 20 to 25 more years to complete it at that rate of spending and in the meantime our losses from floods would continue to add up. I plead with Senators not to cut the appropriation. The Bureau of the Budget estimated that $72,000,000 would be required this year for that project. The request of the engineers, as I recall, was for a much larger figure. The House, after long study, allowed $65,000,000 or a reduction of $7,000,000 from the Budget estimate. The Senate committee has accepted that figure. With the amount asked to be appropriated and a like amount next year, the engineers could by bending their every effort see the completion of the so-called Morganza spillway within the next 2 years. That is, the project would then be far enough advanced to be of use, in case of a major flood. The guide levees on each side of the spillway in the lower reaches of this outlet are not built. In addition to that, the proposed lock at Bayou Boeuf would have to be constructed as planned in order to prevent the overflow of the spillway onto some of the most fertile land in the United States. If the appropriation is cut to $33,000,000 it would be necessary to cancel most of the contracts that have been let looking toward completion of the lower reaches of the new outlet. As I previously stated this project must be completed if the people in south and central Louisiana, and in large parts of Arkansas and Mississippi, are to be protected from the annual floods, with the ensuing loss of life and destruction of farms and livestock.

Mr. EASTLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ELLENDER. I yield for a question.

Mr. EASTLAND. Does the Senator realize that one major flood would cost more, in loss of life and loss of property, than all the money that has been appropriated for the Mississippi River levee system and flood-control system, just one flood?

Mr. ELLENDER. There is no question about that. The figures cited by my distinguished colleague a moment ago prove that. The distinguished Senator from Mississippi has stated that the flood of 1927 cost in excess of $2,000,000,000. The recently estimated cost of this entire project, which was authorized in 1928—the year after the disastrous flood of 1927, was $1,265,000,000. So that, as the Senator has just pointed out, the losses sustained in 1927 alone were more than the cost of this project, which incidentally, was designed so that the States and all the land along the Mississippi River and its tributaries, from Cairo, Ill., downstream, could be protected by revetments and other structures.

Mr. President, as the distinguished junior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. STENNIS], stated a moment ago, of the $65,000,000 requested, $15,000,000 is to be used to maintain levees. When many of the bends in the Mississippi River were eliminated in order to shorten its length, it was necessary to build revetments on each side of the river to prevent the new river banks from caving in. To continue the construction of those revetments, money is necessary. Otherwise all of the money that has been spent will have been wasted. I would say that almost 25 percent of the money which is asked to be appropriated is going to be used to protect some of the work that has already been done, that is, by building these revetments in order to prevent the present banks from caving in. If that is not done, we are likely not only to lose a good deal of the investment that has already been made, but it would further endanger the lives and the property of many of the residents along the river. We have taken the first step in our Mississippi program by straightening some of its curves but, as I have mentioned, we have thereby exposed its lower banks—we must not, we cannot fail now to complete the lower river plans.

I hope that the Senate will see fit to vote down the pending amendments. Let us continue to preserve and protect our great natural resources rather than permit them to be destroyed or wasted on a plea of economy.

We are always faced with a possible recurrence of floods such as we experienced in 1927; to cut back this program now on the grounds of economy would indeed be penny-wise and pound-foolish.

Mr. LEHMAN. Mr. President, I intend to support a deep cut in the appropriation outlined in the bill for flood control and rivers and harbors. I say that in spite of the fact that I have been for many years a believer in conservation. Since I came to the Senate I have supported a great many bills to authorize appropriations for reclamation, for water power, for flood control, and for river and harbor work, and I expect to do so again in the future. But we are in a crisis, a great crisis, and I doubt whether most of our people even today realize the extent of it.

I have frequently stated on the floor of the Senate and elsewhere that I intended to support and vote for all appropriations to strengthen the defense of our country, and to insure its security, so far as it is possible to do so. I also have said that I intend to continue to vote for appropriations which are important for the health and welfare of the people of this Nation, and that I would also support all appropriations which are necessary for the operation of orderly government and in the interests of all the people of the country.

Mr. President, it does not seem to me that all the projects which are outlined in the report before us, covered by the proposed appropriations, are of direct necessity to the defense of our country. I have no doubt at all, and I wish to emphasize this, that while the projects of flood control and river and harbor work are normally of great importance—and we should continue to push them as far as possible in normal times—they are not of vital importance at this time in the war effort. I think that is shown by a reading of the report. There are a great many different projects outlined and appropriations set forth which really would not at this time further the war effort.

For instance, I note the item for the Alabama-Coosa Rivers, and in Alabama and Georgia the Howell Mills Shoals Dam. There is an estimated Federal cost of $28,722,400, against which the total amount appropriated to date is $469,600. Certainly the $185,000 which it is proposed to appropriate for that project cannot advance it very much.

The same comment applies to the Tennessee-Tombigbee waterway, Alabama and Mississippi. Against a total estimated Federal cost of over $169,000,000, there has thus far been appropriated only $858,000. The amount proposed to be appropriated in the pending bill certainly cannot possibly further that project very much.

In the Buford Dam project, there is a total estimated Federal cost of $40,225,000, against which the total amount appropriated thus far has been only $1,400,000. Certainly the $900,000 which it is proposed to appropriate in the pending bill cannot further that project.

Mr. President, I have mentioned only three projects, but there are any number against which the same criticism can be leveled. I believe that a cut, whether it be 50 percent, or 40 percent—I have not yet decided which one of these cuts I shall favor except to say that I shall favor a very substantial cut—will still leave enough money to carry on the essential work which must be pursued.

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LEHMAN. I yield to the Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. KILGORE. However, does not the Senator from New York feel that if cuts are made the Senate should make specific cuts and eliminate specific items, rather than make an over-all cut? If there were an $850,000 project and $425,000 were spent, we might get nowhere at all, but there are many projects which do have a definite effect upon our national-defense picture, or upon national industry, which is a part of the national defense.

Mr. LEHMAN. I very much wish that it were possible to take up and consider, and reduce, if necessary, the appropriations for specific items. That is the orderly way of government, and I regret that we are forced to the device now presented, but I believe that following the course suggested would consume so much time and effort that we would not get very far in our undertaking. I believe there will be enough left, after a reasonable cut, to pursue all the important items which are in prospect.

I want to say again, and I do not think I have to remind the Senate of it, that the President has strongly urged that there be conservation of funds, of manpower, and of resources. I wish to read again at this time, Mr. President, one paragraph of the President's letter of July 21, as follows:

> All civil public works, both direct Federal programs and grant-in-aid programs, should be screened with the objective, as far as practicable, of deferring, curtailing, or slowing down those projects which do not directly contribute to defense or to civilian requirements essential in the changed international situation set forth in my message.

I want to emphasize that a cut in the appropriation will mean not only a saving in dollars and cents, important as that is, but also a most important saving in the resources of the country and the manpower of the country which are of at least equal importance, because I believe that if this war spreads, as it might, we are going to find ourselves with a shortage both of manpower and of many important resources with which to prosecute the war.

Mr. MAGNUSON, Mr. HENDRICKSON, and other Senators addressed the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New York yield the floor?

Mr. LEHMAN. No, Mr. President, I do not yield the floor.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator yield to any Senator?

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. LEHMAN. Of course, I will yield to the Senator from Washington.

Mr. MAGNUSON. I appreciate what the Senator's objectives are. The Senator mentioned that, of course, he was for projects that would be valuable to the continuation of any war effort. In this section of the bill there are included several power projects, the continuation of power projects, which have been set out by the engineers of the Bureau of Reclamation under a certain schedule, to come in in a certain year. I wonder if the Senator from New York also recalls that when the President of the United States himself in his emergency message to Congress advocated, as we all agree, that nonessential spending should be cut to a minimum, he took particular pains to point out that this did not include, in his opinion, power projects, because power projects were just as essential to the defense of the United States, to the over-all defense, perhaps the long-term defense, as guns, tanks, or airplanes?

Mr. LEHMAN. I may say to the Senator from Washington that I do recall that. I want to say even more clearly than I may have said in the course of the debate on this bill that I certainly believe in the development of water power; that I feel such development is essential to the welfare of our country; I do not wish to contribute to any action that would interfere with the development of water power which can be made available within a measurable time—and I want to emphasize "a measurable time." I go so far, as a matter of fact, as to say that I believe there would be nothing of greater benefit than to develop the water power on the Niagara River and on the St. Lawrence River, water power which is so greatly needed, and will be even more needed in the near future. But I believe that under the terms of any reasonable amendment to reduce these appropriations, there will still be enough money to carry through such water-power development as can be carried through within a reasonable or measurable time.

I want to point out to the distinguished Senator from Washington that in the last war 80 percent of the public works were discontinued, at least temporarily. I believe there will be enough funds left, after the reduction in these appropriations, to care for these important water-power developments which can—and I again want to emphasize that—directly assist in the war effort.

Mr. MAGNUSON. I merely wanted to make an observation and ask the Senator a question. Of course, all of us thoroughly agree on the need for economy, but the reason I am voting against the amendment is that I can see how dangerous it would be to have an over-all cut. Further, the President himself can freeze funds, has done so in times past, will do so again, and so announced 3 or 4 days ago.

But we have a schedule, for instance, as to water-power development, and these appropriations are just the amount adequate to continue that schedule. For instance, we need another pot line to produce more aluminum in the Pacific Northwest. We will need a vast amount of power for a new pot line to produce more aluminum. Therefore it is important that we finish the McNary Dam on time, and that we finish the Chief Joseph Dam on time. The atomic energy plant has placed another extra load on power. Unless the schedules are continued, we will not have sufficient power. An over-all cut, a blanket cut, may have the effect of throwing the projects off for a complete year. That would directly affect not only our atomic energy development but the aluminum plants and all the great plants that develop power for production of war materials.

The reason I oppose the amendment is that the President can, and he will, for he has done so before, screen the projects for which the money is proposed to be appropriated. He and those in government who must make the decisions will say, "We will accept this project, we will accept the other project; this project is necessary and the other project is necessary." Whereas an over-all cut—and I make the statement because I have had experience with such cuts—sometimes becomes dangerous and throws the schedule off, particularly with respect to power, which the President himself said was essential and should not be cut in any respect. As a matter of fact, the President and the Bureau of the Budget last week asked the House Appropriations Committee to provide in a supplemental bill money with which to begin two new power dams in the Pacific Northwest since the Korean situation developed, believing that it is necessary to bring in this power on schedule as a part of the war effort.

I merely suggest that the method proposed for cuts could be very dangerous to the development of power projects.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LEHMAN. I am glad to yield to the distinguished Senator from Tennessee, but first I should like to answer the senior Senator from Washington.

I realize that whatever money is left after the cut is made by the Congress will have to be allocated, undoubtedly by the corps of engineers and the Budget Director and the President. I realize that. But I think the value of action at this time is in having the Senate go on record that we wish all nonessential public works projects to be postponed. I think that is of great importance. I think it is of importance as a guide to those who are going to allocate these funds, and I think it will bring confidence to the American people from whom we have to ask so many sacrifices and who I know will be willing to make sacrifices.

I now yield to the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I suggest to the Senator from New York that he is mistaken in his facts. He says there will be sufficient money in the general fund to build what is necessary, even with a 50-percent cut. How can the Senator feel that sufficient funds will be left, when $416,460,000 are required merely for maintenance and power projects in this bill.

The Senator from New York talks about what the President favors and what the President opposes. I call the Senator's attention to the fact that on July 12, the President sent to Congress a message in which he said two more power plants would have to be built—one in the State of Washington, the State represented by the distinguished Senator who has just taken his seat, and another—which we also shall have to build if we follow the President's recommendations—in Idaho.

If the Senator knew the facts, I am quite sure he would not take the position he has taken. Of course, it is very difficult to learn on the floor of the Senate what the facts are in connection with such matters. That information can be obtained only from the facts as presented in the evidence. In the committee we put witnesses on the stand and we take their testimony; and after we have taken their testimony, we approve these items. So we know what we are doing.

However, mere guessing will not enable us to arrive at a proper bill. It takes money—strange as it may seem to the Senator from New York, who has had money galore all his life, and never has been in need of money—it takes a considerable amount of money, to build a dam.

Furthermore, let me say that both the Senator from New York [Mr. LEHMAN] and the Senator from Illinois [Mr. DOUGLAS] have had a great deal to say about new dams and about how much would be spent for them. Appropriations of approximately $730,000,000 are carried in this portion of the bill. Of that enormous sum of money, can the Senator make a guess as to what part of that amount is proposed to be spent for the construction of new dams?

A while ago the Senator from New York was talking about guesses, and the Senator from Illinois was talking about hope. From either the hope chest of the Senator from Illinois or from the guess of the Senator from New York, can the Senator from New York tell us what part of the $730,000,000 is proposed to be spent for the construction of new dams?

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, a hope chest is accumulated by women, not by men.

Mr. McKELLAR. Is that a fact? Well, I am glad the Senator from Illinois has that information. He knows more about women than I do, and that is why he has that information. I thank him for it. [Laughter.] I admit that the information of the Senator from Illinois along those lines is vastly superior to mine.

So I should like to ask the Senator from New York to make a guess as to how much of the enormous sum of nearly $800,000,000 is to be spent for the construction of new dams. Does the Senator know?

Mr. LEHMAN. No.

Mr. McKELLAR. Only $11,000,000. Although in itself, that is a large sum, yet in comparison with what is to be spent for other purposes under this portion of the bill, $11,000,000 is quite a small amount.

Of course, I can understand that it takes the Senator time to become acquainted with these matters. However, I simply wish to point out that the Senator from New York does not have his facts correct.

Mr. LEHMAN. Mr. President, let me comment on what the very distinguished chairman of the committee has said.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I should like to ask one other question while the Senator from New York is meditating.

Mr. LEHMAN. Of course I am glad to yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. Is the Senator from New York opposed to the proposed dam on the St. Lawrence River, in his State?

Mr. LEHMAN. No.

Mr. McKELLAR. Oh, the Senator is not?

Mr. LEHMAN. Certainly not.

Mr. McKELLAR. Oh, I see, now. The Senator from New York has a plan for that river, has he not?

Mr. LEHMAN. Yes; on the Niagara River, too.

Mr. McKELLAR. Well, that will make the Senator a great statesman; there is no doubt about that. All of us have found that there have to be plans if there are to be great statesmen in this country. So I wish to congratulate the Senator from New York; he has a great plan.

But I suggest to him that he had better look into his facts. He has had a wonderful record in life, and I congratulate him on his fine record. However, in this body, strange as it may appear, facts are most important.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New York yield for that purpose?

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I have already had my inquiry answered; I wished to know who has the floor.

Mr. LEHMAN. Mr. President, I shall be glad to yield, but I do not wish to lose the floor.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator does not have to yield now.

Mr. LEHMAN. Mr. President, let me say to the distinguished chairman of the Appropriations Committee that I realize the great knowledge he has accumulated over these years.

Mr. McKELLAR. Oh, the Senator is mistaken about that; I wish I had.

Mr. LEHMAN. At any rate, that is my feeling, and I will stick to it.

Let me say, further, that it is with great reluctance that I am taking this position with regard to the appropriation. Ordinarily I would follow the Senator from Tennessee and his recommendations and those of his committee without the slightest hesitation; but today I think the situation requires drastic action.

I wish to say, also, that I am deeply appreciative of the superb courtesy and consideration which have been shown to me by the distinguished chairman of the Appropriations Committee and by the committee as a whole.

I wish to say again—and I say it apologetically—that in this appropriation bill there are included funds for certain projects for which I have made requests which have been granted by the committee. However, I feel very confident that even though every one of them, in my opinion, is sound, yet the people of the State of New York will be perfectly willing to have the implementation of those projects deferred until the world situation clears.

Mr. President, in conclusion, let me say to the distinguished Senator from Tennessee that although I claim no knowledge equal to his, yet for a great many years I have been interested in water-power development. More than 20 years ago, when I was Governor, I urged the development of the water power of the St. Lawrence, and I studied very carefully the cost and the difficulties and the problems of that project.

Since then I have been deeply interested in the development of water power on the Niagara River.

I have learned much, too, from the tutorship of the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY], the Senator from Oregon [Mr. CORDON], and other members of the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, since receiving the honor of being a member of that committee, on coming to the Senate in January.

I wish to emphasize without question that I am the strongest kind of believer in the development of water power and in reclamation. I think it is safe to say that I have voted for virtually every one of the proposals made for water power, reclamation, and irrigation, even though there was no direct benefit to the people of my State. I did so because I believe that what is good for one part of the country is good for every part of the country, and that New York, even though it did not directly benefit, would gain through the benefit which came to Wyoming and to Oregon and to Arizona and to New Mexico and to Utah and to Colorado.

Mr. CORDON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LEHMAN. I yield.

Mr. CORDON. First, Mr. President, I should like to ask the junior Senator from New York whether he feels that in all activities of the Federal Government in the field of hydroelectric power, wherever they may be, a reduction equal to the reduction which would necessarily follow from the adoption of this amendment should be made.

Mr. LEHMAN. I would qualify it by saying that so far as the funds permit—and I believe they would permit, even after a very substantial cut—water power should receive preferential treatment in the case of those projects which can be demonstrated to be of assistance in our war effort, and thus of aid in our defense and security.

Mr. CORDON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. LEHMAN. Certainly.

Mr. CORDON. Is the Senator from New York aware of the fact that our Government has furnished, gratis, to a number of European nations approximately $594,000,000 in United States money for the very same purpose, namely, hydroelectric-power generation and transmission, and that the bill now before the Senate contemplates the implementation of further hydroelectric-power development in Europe, with United States dollars, under approved projects for 1950–51 in the total amount of $320,000,000, of which $120,000,000 will be solely United States dollar assistance, and most of the balance will be in counterpart funds, which is the same thing, except in such case the United States dollar is changed into foreign currency.

Is the Senator aware that that is a part of the existing program covered by appropriations in this bill? If so, does the Senator feel that those appropriations should have a like 50-percent cut?

Mr. LEHMAN. The junior Senator from New York may say to the Senator from Oregon that while he does not know the breakdown of the figures of our ECA assistance, he does know that this country during the past 3 years has voted very large sums of money for the economic rehabilitation and strengthening of the western democracies. I have no doubt that as part of that project there may be, and there undoubtedly are, some power projects.

I certainly do not need to make any further explanation. I have already expressed my great sympathy with and approval of water-power development. I believe in it for this country and for every other country, from the bottom of my heart.

Mr. CORDON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for one further question?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New York yield to the Senator from Oregon?

Mr. LEHMAN. I yield.

Mr. CORDON. Permit me to preface the question by saying I fully appreciate that the Senator is directing his attention to this matter solely because he feels that every possible dollar that can be raised in this country should be either immediately made available or held for the purpose of furthering the present security and the future security of the United States; and I am not at all critical in my question.

Mr. LEHMAN. May I interpose one remark?

Mr. CORDON. Certainly.

Mr. LEHMAN. The junior Senator from New York has not only emphasized the saving of dollars but the saving of natural resources and manufactured resources and manpower, which he thinks are going to be of increasing importance in the war effort.

Mr. CORDON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question? This is a practical one.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New York yield to the Senator from Oregon?

Mr. LEHMAN. I yield gladly.

Mr. CORDON. The Senator from Oregon remembers that the distinguished Senator from New York has a long record of public service in his State, including his service as the Chief Executive of the State, and I may, I think properly, assume that the Senator from New York is reasonably familiar with the operation of large construction projects, because he has had many in his own State. The question on which the Senator from Oregon would like the opinion of the Senator from New York is this: In a series of cases such as we have, which are individually listed and the sum total of the appropriations for which are set forth in the civil-functions section of this bill, it is represented that the amount for partial or installment payments on existing construction is anywhere from 10 percent to 90 percent.

In cases where the funds have been appropriated, or are to be appropriated, as partial payments on that type of contract—that is, for construction which is under way—does the Senator feel that the values already created by the United States by virtue of such partial construction, running, as I suggest, up to as high as 90 percent of the total amount, should not be protected by at least having available adequate funds for the orderly cessation of work, for the protection of the works as they exist, for the finishing of such unfinished portions of work as is necessary, in order that there may be protection from weather and the like on these vast projects, if in the end we must close them down because we are in a greater war than the so-called police action in Korea? Does the Senator agree with the Senator from Oregon that we must have the funds to do that sort of thing for our own protection and to protect our own investments?

Mr. LEHMAN. Yes; the Senator from New York agrees with that. But I may point out that in going through the detailed reports of the projects covered by these appropriations, I find a great number—which I am not able to read at this time without taking up far too much time of the Senate—a great number of projects on which the appropriations that are set forth here cannot possibly further the work to any substantial extent. I should like to see them all finished. I should like to see this work done. I should like to see more money spent on it. Do not misunderstand me about that.

Mr. CORDON. I do not misunderstand the Senator.

Mr. LEHMAN. I appreciate the work of this committee. All I say is that we are in a situation now which in my opinion requires conservation of money, of resources, of manufactured commodities that may be in scarce supply, and last but not by any means least, manpower. I think that on these public-works programs which are not essential to the defense of this country and the strengthening of our security there can be some laying aside, and considerable laying aside.

Mr. CORDON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for one more question?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the the Senator from New York yield to the Senator from Oregon?

Mr. LEHMAN. I am glad to yield.

Mr. CORDON. Will the Senator then give thought perhaps to this type of procedure on the part of the Government; that we enact a bill which represents, I believe, the considered judgment of men who have studied this matter very carefully; that we make the appropriation recommended by the committee; then afford the appropriate executive officials the opportunity, which they will have, to determine the work which should go forward and that which can properly be stopped at this time, and leave that authority in the hands of the President, remembering that heretofore under similar circumstances the President has exercised the same type of authority, and that in the exercise of it we have saved every project the completion of which was essential as a part of the over-all national security?

Mr. LEHMAN. I may answer the Senator in this way: We have been doing a great deal of talking on the floor of the Senate about economy and saving money, about eliminating nonessential expenditures. But as I look back on our debates of the last 2 or 3 weeks, the only thing we have accomplished in the way of saving money was the defeat of the amendment which would have required construction of the new Senate Office Building. I spoke against that, and I voted against it, even though, as the Senator knows, it caused me considerable inconvenience. I think I have need of space about as much as any Member of the Senate. Aside from that, we have done nothing.

Mr. McKELLAR rose.

Mr. LEHMAN. It seems to me that the Senate and the people of the country are entitled to feel that their Senators are ready to go on record as providing for economy in Government so far as practical. That is why I think the adoption of an amendment of this sort would be of particular value.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LEHMAN. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. Does the Senator realize how much has been saved under the estimate? Does he know how much the estimate has been reduced?

Mr. LEHMAN. I know it is a very considerable amount. I think it is more than a billion dollars.

Mr. McKELLAR. That is correct. It is $1,473,000,000, which is a very considerable sum. As to a bill which is arranged on the floor of the Senate, we do not know whether it would provide for a cut of half a billion dollars, two billion dollars, or what the amount might be. We would be acting in the dark. We are now acting after having applied the best methods of legislation. We have received the views and experiences of many persons and have placed them in the RECORD. Has the Senator lost confidence in our good President?

Mr. LEHMAN. I have not lost confidence in our good President.

Mr. McKELLAR. I am glad to hear the Senator say that, because he seems so utterly opposed to carrying out the law which gives the President the right to reduce appropriations after looking into the facts. So far as I am concerned, I am willing to trust the President. I believe he will examine these items and reduce those which he thinks should be reduced, and, if necessary recommend an increase as to some items. He has recommended an increase for two dams amounting to $200,000,000. Since the letter of instruction was read a while ago, the President has recommended that $200,000,000 be invested in two dams for war purposes. They will not be used entirely for war purposes, but largely so. If the Senator does not believe in the President's ability and sagacity, I can understand how he reaches the conclusion he has reached and is opposing the committee bill. Otherwise I cannot understand his position.

Mr. LEHMAN. May the junior Senator from New York say to the senior Senator from Tennessee that he does not think the chairman of the Appropriations Committee needs to have any doubt with regard to my attitude toward the President of the United States? I think I have shown that in many, many ways over a great many years. I have the fullest and most complete confidence in the President and in his judgment, his good faith, his integrity, and his ability; and may I also say that I have the greatest confidence in the character, the ability, and the industry of the distinguished chairman of the Appropriations Committee. But that does not make any difference——

Mr. McKELLAR. Oh, I think it does. I thank the Senator for saying that he will stand by the President, because it looked as though he was going to do the contrary. When the Committee on Appropriations reports on the two dams to which I have referred, as no doubt it will do, is the Senator from New York going to vote against them?

Mr. LEHMAN. I want to know the facts. There are scores and scores of items as to which nothing can be accomplished by this appropriation. That is my point. I believe the Senate has a responsibility which it cannot shirk—a responsibility for saving funds, manpower, and resources.

Mr. STENNIS. Mr. President, in the brief remarks I shall make, I expect to demonstrate by the figures themselves that the effect of the pending amendment will be to reduce by 72 percent the construction funds for the Lower Mississippi Valley.

First, Mr. President, I desire to answer briefly the charges which are, I think, recklessly thrown about on the Senate floor and elsewhere with regard to pork-barrel projects and pork-barrel legislation. Those of us who have been through the experience know something about what a genuine flood means. I refer to the area in the Lower Mississippi Valley. That area covers parts of seven States, Missouri, Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, Arkansas, and Louisiana. More than 3,000,000 people are actually protected by the Lower Mississippi River Valley projects. Those people actually live on the lands affected, which embrace an area of 28,000 square miles in the seven States. In 1927 a flood occurred there which caused such an inundation that a steamboat could start from Alexandria, La., and go to Vicksburg, Miss., across what had been fields and highways. The then Secretary of Commerce, ex-President Hoover, visited the area. He was so impressed that when he returned to Washington he recommended legislation, and the Flood Control Act of 1928 was passed. During that flood 1,800,000 cubic feet of water a second passed the gages at Cairo, Ill. The estimated property damage alone during that flood was $2,000,000,000. That is the measure of damage in terms of dollars, but it takes no account of the lives that were lost or the human suffering entailed.

Last spring, long after the adoption of the Flood Control Act and after work on these projects had been done, 1,650,000 cubic feet of water a second flowed by that same gage, or approximately 150,000 cubic feet less than in 1927. However, this year the loss within the protected area was not one single dime.

That is the pay-off. The estimated actual cost of those projects has been only $650,000,000. On a very conservative basis the saving in flood damage this year was approximately $1,000,000,000. That amount is considerably more than the cost of the $66,778,000 proposed to be appropriated in the pending bill for the Lower Mississippi Valley. After subtracting $15,000,000, which is absolutely necessary for maintenance, only $51,000,000 would be left for construction. The over-all effect of the amendment would be to deduct $32,000,000, which would leave only $18,000,000 for construction. As the Senator from Arkansas has pointed out, that amount is not nearly sufficient to carry on the work and to preserve the millions of dollars which have already been expended on the projects now under construction.

It should be remembered also that it is not possible simply to stop work at a certain point on a project of this kind, as it is possible for example, to stop the construction of a highway. After construction reaches a certain point it must continue. The adoption of this amendment would not leave sufficient money available to take care of the lower Mississippi project. The revetment work must be maintained, supplemented, and carried on. If the water is to be controlled, it will cost a large amount of money.

We are considering here a river which drains parts of 31 States and parts of four Provinces in Canada. At flood stage the water reaches 1,850,000 cubic feet a second, which weighs billions of pounds. When such a flow of water comes down the river it washes away overnight, as easily as one can splash water with his hand, structures which have not had proper care and attention.

Whatever reductions in such appropriations may have to be made, they cannot rightfully or properly be made on the floor of the Senate. They must be subjected to the analysis, scrutiny, and decision of men who know the subject. They must be studied by men who are familiar with the problems involved, who realize the necessity of protecting the present investment and at the same time are willing to bring about whatever war economy that may be possible. Certainly I would be in the forefront with those who are willing to go just as far as it may be necessary to go with reference to the war effort, and to let this area bear its part of the burden of the cost. However, I submit in all humility that 50 percent represents an arbitrary and excessive way of approaching the problem, and it would jeopardize one of the finest investments which the United States Government has ever made. That investment is paying off. The figures prove that fact.

Mr. President, I submit that this 50-percent amendment should be forthwith and strongly voted down.

Mr. CORDON. Mr. President, I rise in opposition to the amendment. I have never found too much virtue in impulse. In my considered opinion, we are in the present international muddle because we have had diplomacy by impulse. I submit that this amendment is attempted legislation by impulse. No individual, not even the engineers who prepared the data upon which these estimates were based, could out of hand truthfully say to the Senate that they could make an informed guess as to how much of a reduction could be made in these estimates, and made soundly in the interests of the American people.

A number of us in this body believe in reducing expenditures, and have worked to that end. I have heretofore said on the floor of the Senate with reference to this bill that, in my opinion, after having served on five of the subcommittees which considered several chapters of the bill, and having sat in the full committee while the other chapters were being presented, that this is the best considered and best studied and best prepared appropriation bill I have ever seen come before the United States Senate. I feel that the sum total of it might still be reduced. I worked and put in some time on the amendment bearing the names of a number of Senators which seeks a 10 percent reduction. I shall support that amendment at the appropriate time.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CORDON. In a moment, if I may proceed a little further. Then I shall be very happy to yield to my distinguished chairman. However, Mr. President, I cannot understand the logic of anyone who would seek this type of reduction in the recommended appropriation. This money was not asked of the American people by guess. It represents the sum total of engineering examinations and analyses. Back of it are specific, carefully prepared engineering data on hundreds of projects.

I now yield to my friend the senior Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. McKELLAR. I am not seeking to interrupt the Senator because of his argument, but because of the very generous and splendid statement which he made about members of the Committee on Appropriations. I appreciate them more than I can say, and I thank the Senator with all my heart, not only for myself, but for every member of the committee, both Democrats and Republicans.

Mr. CORDON. I appreciate the Senator's statement. I made only what I thought was a fair statement of the work as I saw it done.

Mr. President, these figures come from the committee after careful analysis by the engineers in charge of this construction. I shall take but a moment of the Senate, but I do want to invite attention to what seems to be most pertinent information that should be before Senators before they vote.

Mr. President, I hold in my hand the sheets which were prepared for the use of the Committee on Appropriations by the Corps of Engineers, and on which are itemized all of the projects which were considered by the committee as they came from the Bureau of the Budget.

Among other things, the committee had before it immediate knowledge as to whether a project was a new one, one on which there had been no actual construction, or one on which construction was already in progress. It had the estimated full cost of each project. It had the amount of money which had already been appropriated, so that we might determine the extent to which construction had gone. It had the amount of money requested by the Corps of Engineers, and the amount finally granted by the Bureau of the Budget. It had the House action. It had space for Senate committee recommendations. It had the estimated amount necessary to complete each project.

The committee had before it a full description of each project, how much it was to cost, why it was necessary, what it would do, and the like. That information has all been available to every member of the committee, and has, by some of us, at least, been carefully studied. Many of these projects will be found to be absolutely essential to any great emergency which may face the Nation, including an all-out war.

Mr. President, the Senate cannot pass upon this question. The Senate is not in possession of the sort of information the committee had before it. The matter must be worked out most carefully. The construction that is encompassed in these sheets, and in this particular proposed appropriation, is construction by a division of the Department of Defense. That it will be most carefully reviewed, that not a dollar will be spent until it is determined it should be spent in the light of present conditions, no one can question.

I am sure no Member of the committee or of the Senate, and there should be no American citizen, who would object to the withholding of funds anywhere on any of these projects, if such withholding were found to be in the national interest. The money will be withheld; in has been in the past; it should be in the future. But an arbitrary withholding, such as is here proposed, would not permit the Department of Defense or the President to do a good job.

In one instance we seek to grant every dollar needed in one field. In another field, just as vital, in some instances, there is an effort to take money away, to reduce the possibility of the kind of judgment we expect to be exercised in the other instance. That is not logic, as I understand it.

Mr. President, I close as I began, by saying I oppose legislation by impulse.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FREAR in the chair). The question is on agreeing to the amendments offered by the Senator from New Hampshire, to be voted on en bloc.

Mr. LEHMAN. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

APPOINTMENT OF "WATCHDOG COMMITTEE" OF ARMED SERVICES COMMITTEE

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I send to the desk a statement which I am giving to the press with reference to the appointment of a subcommittee of the Armed Services Committee to keep continuous watchfulness over our entire rearmament and preparedness and defense program. I have appointed on this committee the Senator from Texas [Mr. JOHNSON] as chairman, the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. CHAPMAN], the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. KEFAUVER], the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. HUNT], the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES], the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. SALTONSTALL], and the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MORSE].

If anyone knows of any problems having to do with stoppages or difficulties in the armed services, in our preparedness program, in our procurement program, this committee, which is set up to deal with such matters, and which will have an adequate staff, should be notified, and it will investigate the situation.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the statement I have released may be printed at this point in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT BY SENATOR TYDINGS

The Committee on Armed Services of the Senate is charged by law with formulating legislation dealing with "the common defense generally." We conceive it our duty, however, not only to formulate proper legislation for the efficient operation of the Armed Forces of our country, but also to exercise continuous watchfulness over the execution of the laws which are within the jurisdiction of our committee. It is important not only that authorizations be made by law but that we should pursue these authorizations to make sure they are carried into effect economically, efficiently, and speedily.

During World War II, a special committee of the Senate was created which became known as the War Investigating Committee, to carry out at least a part of the functions now assigned to the Senate Armed Services Committee.

During the Eightieth Congress, a "Watchdog Committee" of the Senate Armed Services Committee was created for the purpose of determining whether or not the administration of the policies, programs, activities, facilities, requirements, and practices of the National Military Establishment were characterized by maximum efficiency. The need for this committee is greater today than at any time since it was created.

The situation in Korea confronts the Nation with an emergency of the gravest nature. In the minds of all of us, the looming possibility of world war III is ever present. It is true that we have reorganized our National Military Establishment in recent years but there have been natural growing pains as this new organization has tried to work out and eradicate the imbalances existing between the services, the weapons and the men in them.

Now these services are to be quickly expanded and an armament program is to be launched on a wide scale. It is important that there be cooperation and coordination between the Committee and the Military Establishment. It is most important that those who are carrying out the authorizations to provide weapons and supplies for our Armed Forces do not lag in the execution thereof. It is important that every minute of time possible in our expansion and rearmament program be saved. In short, it is imperative that the Armed Services Committee keep on top of the job to see that every program authorized by the Congress is relentlessly pursued without waste of time, effort or money to bring it to fruition and support our gallant troops in the field.

In order to expedite objectives herein mentioned, I am today appointing a subcommittee of the Senate Armed Services Committee, to consist of the following Senators: Senator JOHNSON of Texas, chairman; Senator CHAPMAN, of Kentucky; Senator KEFAUVER, of Tennessee; Senator HUNT, of Wyoming; Senator BRIDGES, of New Hampshire; Senator SALTONSTALL, of Massachusetts; Senator MORSE, of Oregon.

This subcommittee should function continuously and make such full investigations and recommendations as are required, in order that the full committee may be from time to time advised of the difficulties confronting our program and may remedy these difficulties through the medium of legislation, bring the matter to the attention of the proper committees of the Senate.

The present members of the highly efficient professional staff of our committee will be the nucleus for beginning this important investigatory and other work. This plan should be of vast help to the rearmament and expansion program of our military forces. Among other things, it will—

1. Keep the investigations necessary in the hands of the committee which has already considered the general subject matter thereof.

2. Eliminate duplicating investigations.

3. Keep the full committee, the entire Senate and, we hope, the country well informed on matters connected with the procurement and expansion program of the armed services.

4. It will focus in one place the time-consuming appearances of our military and defense leaders.

5. It will be an instrument through which the full committee can explore bottlenecks, delays, shortages, and other deterrents to a speedy accomplishment of the rearmament and expansion program.

6. It will, we feel, result in an increased efficiency of operation on the part of the National Military Establishment, and also in savings in lives, money and national effort.

The full committee, acting upon the result of research and investigation of its subcommittee, will thus be in a position to keep the country advised from time to time of the progress of our program.

Any member of the Senate Armed Services Committee may sit with the subcommittee whenever he is so inclined, as I expect to do myself and hope the ranking minority member will do likewise. As fast as the subcommittee makes recommendations, I shall lay the matter fully before our full committee for such action as is appropriate in the circumstances.

GENERAL APPROPRIATIONS, 1951

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 7786) making appropriations for the support of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1951, and for other purposes.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, the amendment immediately before us is the one proposed by three Senators, the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES], the Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON], and the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. SALTONSTALL], to cut the appropriations for rivers and harbors by 50 percent. This would reduce the total appropriation for these purposes from $731,000,000 to one-half of that figure, or effect a saving of approximately $365,000,000.

The alternative, which I have suggested, a cut aggregating 60 percent, would reduce the appropriation by about $435,000,000, and would leave $295,000,000.

Mr. President, we should recognize, however, that in addition to the appropriations which we will be making for the year 1950–51, there is also a carryover of unobligated funds previously appropriated which the Corps of Engineers can also expend during the current fiscal year. The figures which I have received indicate that as of the end of May of this year, which is the latest date for which I could secure figures, the Corps of Engineers had unobligated funds—and I emphasize the word "unobligated"—amounting to $131,900,000 for rivers and harbors, general flood control, and flood control on the Mississippi River.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at this point in my remarks a breakdown showing the distribution of these unobligated funds.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Unobligated funds

UNOBLIGATED BALANCES—CORPS OF ENGINEERS, MAY 31, 1950

(Source: Legislative Reference Service, Library of Congress)

Rivers and harbors	$37,000,000
Flood control, general	84,200,000
Flood control, Mississippi River and tributaries	10,700,000

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, if we were to accept the amendment of the three Senators I have mentioned there would be available not merely $365,000,000 but $365,000,000 plus $132,000,000, or approximately $497,000,000. If the alternative, or the 60-percent cut were to go into effect, we would have total funds available of about $427,000,000. So, Mr. President, we are not taking away all the funds from the Corps of Army Engineers for rivers and harbors and flood control by any means. We are still leaving large sums in their hands.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DOUGLAS. I should prefer not to yield until I have a chance to complete my remarks, and at that time I shall be glad to yield.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois declines to yield.

Mr. DOUGLAS. In both cases, as well as under the present appropriations, the President would have the right to discontinue any public works which he thought would not be in the general interest of the Nation. That power is already granted to him.

In this connection, I find myself quite unable to understand the logical consistency of the argument of the senior Senator from Tennessee, who in the opening part of his speech attacked these proposals on the ground that they would transfer undue authority to the executive branch to cut back projects within the limits of the amended totals, and then in the concluding portions of his speech made an argument against our cut going into effect because, he said, these matters should be left to the Executive. You cannot have it both ways.

The truth of the matter is that under both proposals the President would still have the power to reduce appropriations below the amounts authorized in the bill itself. The difference, however, between the proposals which we who seek economy are making and the proposals which the committee is defending, is simply this, that if we take the present committee proposals for $730,000,000 of additional funds—over $130,000,000, incidentally, more than the House appropriated—plus the $130,000,000 which is available, the President would have claims made upon him for $860,000,000. On the other hand, if our proposals are accepted, the amount he would have available, assuming that the conference committee agreed, would be $427,000,000 under my 60-percent reduction proposal, or approximately $497,000,000 under the terms of the amendment of the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. President, it has been said that we should leave this matter to the President and to the Army engineers, and very eloquent pleas have been made that if we do not do this we are indicating a lack of faith in the President and a lack of faith in the Government.

Mr. President, the President already has an extremely difficult task in getting his executive agencies to trim down their requests for public works. The President sent a letter to them on the 21st of July, to which reference has been made. I now ask unanimous consent that the letter be printed in the RECORD at this point in my remarks.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

JULY 21, 1950.

MY DEAR MR. ———: In my message of July 19 to the Congress, I announced that I was directing the executive agencies "to conduct a detailed review of Government programs, for the purpose of modifying them wherever practicable to lessen the demand upon services, commodities, raw materials, manpower, and facilities which are in competition with those needed for national defense. The Government, as well as the public, must exercise great restraint in the use of those goods and services which are needed for our increased defense efforts."

In order to adjust the programs of the Federal Government, I am writing to you and the heads of the other agencies whose programs involve substantial use of materials and other resources needed for the defense effort. Please reexamine your programs, giving particular attention, to the extent applicable, to the following:

1. All civil public works, both direct Federal programs and grant-in-aid programs, should be screened with the objective, as far as practical, of deferring, curtailing, or slowing down those projects which do not directly contribute to defense or to civilian requirements essential in the changed international situation set forth in my message.

2. Consistent with the restrictive policy already in force for housing credit, other credit programs should be tightened. The only exceptions should be those which directly contribute to meeting our defense and international responsibilities.

3. Procurement of supplies and equipment should be held to minimum amounts, especially purchases of motor vehicles, typewriters, and other equipment using critical materials. Inventories should be reduced to the lowest practical levels, and excess supplies and equipment should be made available immediately to the General Services Administration.

In addition, I shall expect that in the reexamination of the programs of your agency, you will give first priority to those activities which contribute directly to national defense, including requests of other agencies for assistance.

I am asking the Director of the Bureau of the Budget to work closely with you in this review and to report to me on the steps which you have taken in revising your program to meet these objectives.

Sincerely yours,

HARRY S. TRUMAN.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, the President sent his letter to the various Government agencies asking for a review of their public-works projects to determine which ones may be deferred, curtailed, or slowed. But they are to survey their own public-works projects, and they are the ones who are to come in and say which ones are to be cut.

Well, our experience shows us that no agency likes to do that and in all probability, if we can judge human nature in the future by human nature in the past they will all think that their particular projects are necessary to defense and should not be cut. That will throw upon the Bureau of the Budget the very difficult task of going over all these items.

I have heard rumors, indeed, that pressure is already coming upon the Office of the President not to make cuts on particular projects here or particular projects there. Whatever decisions the President makes will be extremely unpopular, because they will take away appropriations from some particular group or from some particular locality. He will do it under great pressure, and he will be blamed for the decision which is made, because while everyone is in favor of economy in general, people do not want to have economy pinch them on their own particular projects.

So, Mr. President, what we are doing by these amendments is to throw added support to the President of the United States and to the Executive Office in the achievement of the reductions in less essential public works which nearly all Senators say they approve. We are protecting him against tremendous pressures which will beat in upon him, pressures urging him to make as small cuts as possible, and to spare as many projects as possible. The ceiling proposed by the two amendments, with the $132,000,000 carry-over, will amount to $427,000,000, or $497,000,000. Congress should be willing to share the responsibility for enforcing necessary cut-backs and not pass the buck to the President to make all the reductions.

Mr. President, will that $427,000,000 or $497,000,000 total, which will be available with the unobligated funds from appropriations previously proposed, leave remaining an amount which will be sufficient to meet the ordinary needs of the Government for rivers and harbors and flood-control projects?

I was not quite certain what the distinguished Senator from Tennessee said was the total amount proposed to be spent for the maintenance of these projects. I had thought he said $470,000,000, but I later heard that I had misunderstood him, and that possibly he had said "for maintenance and power."

In any event, in order to keep the record straight, I would ask the distinguished Senator from Tennessee to turn to page 218 of the Senate committee report.

Mr. McKELLAR. I may say to the Senator that the amount he requested was $416,460,000 for maintenance and power projects.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Ah, for maintenance and power?

However, let us consider the items for operation, maintenance, surveys, regulations, emergency repairs, administration, and transfers. The total for that is $86,890,000 on rivers and harbors, and $13,570,000 on flood control, and $15,000,000 on the Mississippi River—making a total of approximately $115,000,000 for maintenance, including administration; and we can make economies on administration.

So under the proposed amendments we would still have left from $310,000,000 to $380,000,000 for power.

I know that every time a proposal for economy is made, power is brought into the picture, and it is said that if we cut those appropriations, we cut the heart out of public power. The power projects are used as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land.

The other day, when we were discussing the irrigation projects, we were told that we could not cut the appropriations for irrigation projects because cutting appropriations for irrigation projects would mean cutting the development of power projects.

Now, however, when we want to cut the appropriations for harbors along the Atlantic coast or for certain river improvements, we are told we cannot cut them because to do so would be to affect power disadvantageously.

Mr. President, the fact of the matter is that most of these power projects are, indeed, multiple-purpose projects, and we can slow down the rate of construction on a number of them. Even if we included in this bill an appropriation of funds for every power project, plus funds for maintenance, however, on the basis of my proposals there would still be sufficient funds remaining, because the Senator has stated that the total for maintenance and power is $416,000,000; and the total I would allow, with the carryover, would be $427,000,000; and the total amount provided under the Bridges amendment would be $497,000,000. So there would be enough money for all the power projects, even if we were to continue them as planned.

On the contrary, the truth is that some of them could be slowed down a little, because not all of them are vital to the national defense, and so little work has been done on others that they probably cannot be rushed to completion in time for this emergency.

In the course of the afternoon, a very eloquent speech was made, to the effect that if we reduce this appropriation, we shall be striking a blow at the program of the country for the control of soil erosion. This program for the prevention of soil erosion and the prevention of the running off of water from the land where it falls, is now only covered primarily in the Department of Agriculture section of the bill, which was passed the other day.

I wish to point out that in my attempt to make selective cuts, I did not propose a reduction of a single dollar in the expenditures proposed for the protection of the soil of our country. However, if we wish to protect the soil, we do not protect it at the mouth of the Mississippi River. On the contrary, as the senior Senator from Montana has pointed out on many occasions, we protect it at the points where the rain falls or where the snow falls—in the mountains, in the hills, in the uplands of the country. That work will not be interfered with by any deductions in the appropriations for rivers and harbors.

On the other hand, Mr. President, if we do not make very great cuts in the appropriations carried in this bill, then we shall be driven to making a general, meat-ax reduction, to which a great many Senators who oppose the reduction now proposed are committed. However, a general meat-ax reduction will fall on the program for soil conservation and will seriously reduce the amounts available for the protection of the land and for retaining the water on the land and to prevent the water from running off.

Mr. President, I shall not launch into a wholesale attack on this bill. Certainly it has many features which are dubious, features which would be dubious in peacetime, and even more dubious in wartime. For instance, we are appropriating money for the harbor on Dauphin Island Bay, which is purely a harbor of refuge for fishing and recreational craft, and has no commercial traffic upon it, according to the report of the Army engineers on Commercial Statistics of Water-Borne Commerce of the United States for 1947, on page 648.

There are any number of harbor projects for pleasure craft and recreational craft, where the commercial benefits are not discernible.

There are many provisions for waterways—for instance, the provision for a 12-foot channel on the Jacksonville-Miami waterway, which is very hard to justify; or provision of funds for the Gulf-Intracoastal waterway, where the tonnage in 1947 was less than it was in 1942, 1943, or 1944. All of us know that many of these projects have negligible value.

I may say that in totaling these figures, I find that if we eliminate all projects not approved by the Bureau of the Budget—all of which were omitted by the House of Representatives, and many of which are new starts—we shall have a total of $9,900,000. Then if we eliminate every other new or substantially new start and all doubtful or dubious projects, navigation projects of doubtful feasibility, projects previously disapproved by the Bureau of the Budget, projects for which the ratio of the benefit to the cost is less than one, or projects where the benefits are extremely speculative, we shall save another $28,000,000.

Then if we were to cut and eliminate the other increases proposed by the Senate committee we would reduce the figures in the amount of $104,000,000 more, and if we were to effect a 50-percent reduction in all other items, we would save another $293,000,000—making combined savings of $435,000,000, but still leaving approximately $427,000,000 available to carry on the work.

Mr. President, it is just a question of what we wish to do. Every additional dollar which we spend on these projects will mean an additional dollar of Federal expense. If we do not cut down anywhere else, that will mean that we shall either have to tax more or to borrow more; and we can be rather certain that in that event we shall borrow more. Then the banks will have to add to their credit to that extent, and the amount of money relative to goods will be increased to that extent, and we shall have an increase in prices.

If we cut down our expenditures, however, we shall be withdrawing expenditures from less vital services and projects and shall be making them available to more vital services.

So it seems to me that we are faced with a very important issue for decision.

We can save from $400,000,000 to $500,000,000 worth of men and materials, and thus release those materials for the war effort, and still give the rivers-and-harbors projects between $400,000,000 and $500,000,000, and further the national interest by our act.

Mr. President, I very much hope that the sponsors of this amendment, by unanimous consent, will permit the brave effort which they have started to be carried still further, so that their cut of 50 percent may be increased to an aggregate cut of 60 percent.

I am informed that the parliamentary situation is such that the pending business is the so-called Bridges amendment for a 50-percent cut, and since that is an amendment to a committee amendment no further amendment to it, such as my 60-percent cut, is in order, because it would be an amendment in the third degree. But it is possible for the distinguished Senator from New Hampshire to accept the greater reductions which I am proposing, namely, on page 361, line 25, to strike out "$800,000" and substitute "$640,000"; on page 364, line 2, to substitute "$90,750,000"; on page 365, line 20, to substitute "$173,450,000"; on page 367, line 3, to substitute "$26,700,000"; and on page 367, line 14, to substitute "$1,010,000." This would make the total appropriations in these five items $292,550,000, and together with the emergency flood-control items, which I do not propose to reduce, would make this appropriation a little more than $295,000,000. This compares with the appropriations of approximately $365,000,000 provided in his amendment, and would save approximately $435,000,000 as compared to the $365,000,000 provided in his amendment. I very much hope that the Senator will clear the parliamentary way for these greater cuts which I propose, and I ask unanimous consent that he be permitted to have these cuts substituted for those which he has proposed.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. McKELLAR. Is an amendment by the Senator from Illinois to the amendment offered by the Senator from New Hampshire in order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is informed by the Parliamentarian that the Senator from Illinois cannot offer the amendment, but the Senator from New Hampshire can amend his amendment or modify his amendment.

Mr. BRIDGES. A number of Senators besides the Senator from New Hampshire sponsor this amendment for a 50-percent cut. I have talked with them, and I have also talked with some other Senators, who though willing to support the amendment for a 50-percent cut, would not support an amendment for a cut of 60 percent. For that reason, I shall have to decline to amend my amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing en bloc to the amendments offered by the Senator from New Hampshire for himself and other Senators.

Mr. DOUGLAS, Mr. WILLIAMS, and other Senators requested the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD at this point in my remarks a chart compiled by the clerks of the Appropriations Committee, showing expenditures on flood control for the past 10 years. I point out this significant fact, that even if this amendment is adopted, thereby cutting this appropriation 50 percent, there would still be over $250,000,000 left to cover flood-control operations.

During the recent war, in 1944, this same item was reduced to $36,885,200.

Under the present bill $509,385,500 is called for. To say it cannot be cut at least 50 percent is ridiculous.

There being no objection, the table was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Appropriations for flood control (1938–48)

Year	Flood control, general	Mississippi River	Emergency fund, Mississippi River	Sacramento River	Total

[5] Includes $2,700,000 emergency fund.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, I also ask unanimous consent to have inserted in the body of the RECORD at this point a chart compiled by the clerks of the Appropriations Committee, showing the funds made available for rivers and harbors during the fiscal years 1936 to 1951. In view of the fact that the present bill calls for an appropriation of $221,244,500 for rivers and harbors expenditures, a reduction of 50 percent would be $110,000,000 which is about equal to the amount which was spent in any 2 years during the war period.

The amount expended for this purpose in 1943 was $74,421,025; for 1944, $48,021,130. I think it should be cut even more than 50 percent. We are in an emergency, and cuts are necessary. The Presidential directive authorizing a suspension of all nonessential construction applies only to those items upon which appropriations were authorized in prior years. It is up to Congress if we want to cut this year's appropriations.

It is cowardly for Congress to refuse to reduce these items and then later to expect the President to apply the cut.

I urge that the Members of the Senate study these charts to see just how far these appropriations are getting out of hand and then vote for the pending amendment.

There being no objection, the chart was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, the yeas and nays having been ordered, the Senator from Nebraska would like to explain his position with respect to this bill. I voted against reporting the appropriation bill as was reported to the Senate by the distinguished chairman of the Appropriations Committee. I believe 19 Senators voted for it, 3 voted against it, and the other members did not vote. I voted as I did because of the failure to adopt the Bridges-Byrd amendment which provides a cut of 10 percent on nonmilitary items in this appropriation bill that can be cut.

I doubt whether a committee ever worked harder to devise a formula by which a cut could be made which would answer all the questions raised about the Senate making the cut, than on the formula embodied in the so-called Bridges-Byrd amendment.

I just heard the remarks of the distinguished senior Senator from Oregon [Mr. CORDON], one who did a great deal of work on that committee. I could go down the list of my colleagues on the committee and say that I have never seen a committee work longer hours attempting to perfect a formula whereby an over-all cut could be made in these appropriations in a practical way.

The answer to all the proposals to cut individual items is that it is not practical, as their sponsors know, to make cuts in that way. They have given no thought to them. The cuts which the Senator from Illinois has been demanding, on items to which he has given very little thought, are impractical. I could ask him a question. If the Bridges-Byrd amendment should not be agreed to by the Senate he said he would offer one proposing a cut of 60 percent. If that were rejected, I suppose he would then offer one proposing a cut of 70 percent, and merely auction it off here on the Senate floor, without any justification whatever.

If the Senate really wants to reduce appropriations and do it on a practical basis, with the least impact on all Government agencies, I submit that the Bridges formula which has been worked out is the most practical one that the Appropriations Committee can bring to the Senate floor. It is the Bridges formula for a 10-percent cut that I am talking about. The distinguished chairman and other members of the committee did not feel that that cut should be made. They felt that the committees had already done a good job. On this particular chapter, 8.6 percent has been taken off the budget estimates, and another 10 percent, if those who support the so-called Bridges formula providing a 10-percent cut are successful, means 18.6 percent off the appropriations in this chapter. I merely want to bring that point to the attention of the Senate. Certain members of the committee felt that that was too much of a cut. Here is the distinguished chairman, who feels that the committee has done, as he has said, "One of the best jobs the Appropriations Committee has ever done." He feels that the cuts already made on individual items, adding up to 8.6 percent, are all the cuts that should be made from the bill at this time.

I happen to feel that I want to go on and make a larger cut. Everything said by the Senator from Illinois about the Korean situation making a difference is, of course, true. Those of us who believe that cuts should be made have that to reenforce our argument. But I say that the only practical way to make a cut on the Senate floor, if we want to do it intelligently, is to agree to the so-called Bridges-Byrd amendment, which provides for a 10-percent cut on those items which can be cut—not military items or interest on the debt.

If the economy bloc, including the distinguished Senator from Illinois, want to make a further cut, they have, of course, a perfect right to make the effort. But I submit to the Senator from Illinois, that the proper formula is that contained in the Bridges-Byrd amendment, or a formula along that line. If he will offer a formula of that kind, with the Bridges-Byrd percentage, or a higher percentage than is contained in it, I should be glad to join him. Then there could be a vote on whether Senators really want to cut these items.

I may say to the distinguished Senator from New Hampshire that I think that the cut he now proposes in this particular chapter is incorrect. I say that without any reflection upon the distinguished Senator from New Hampshire. I think the correct way is represented by the Bridges amendment, which I cosponsored, and which I favor. I should like to ask him now, if he wants to make further comment, whether he will modify the amendment and provide a higher percentage than is already in the Bridges-Byrd amendment, so as to make it at least 15 percent? If he wants to make it 20 percent, the junior Senator from Nebraska will go along with him.

Mr. BRIDGES. I will say to the distinguished Senator from Nebraska that I think his position is very logical. He has worked out the amendment to which he has referred, and it is a sound one; it proceeds in the right direction, and it will, if agreed to, bring about a reduction of approximately $800,000,000.

Mr. WHERRY. Another 5-percent reduction would bring about a reduction of how much?

Mr. BRIDGES. It would bring about a reduction of approximately $400,000,000 more.

Mr. WHERRY. That would bring about as much of a cut as is being attempted here by a 50-percent reduction. Is not that correct?

Mr. BRIDGES. That is correct.

Mr. WHERRY. I ask the Senator if he will accept a modification of his amendment, making it 15 percent. It will cut the appropriation for the harbors which are being dredged in New York as well as projects in Nebraska and on the Pacific coast. I think there are very few projects in Illinois——

Mr. DOUGLAS. There are approximately $14,000,000 worth of projects in Illinois.

Mr. WHERRY. We will include that negligible amount and cut it as we cut all the large projects.

Mr. BRIDGES. Let me say to the Senator that we have gone ahead and offered the amendment providing for a 50-percent cut. I realize the Senator is opposed to that procedure and would prefer the other, but we have gone so far that I feel the only thing left to do is to be consistent and go through with it, because I think this type of public works should be cut during this emergency. If the Congress does not do it, the President probably will proceed to do it, and I see no reason why Congress should not act on it in the manner presented by my amendment.

So I shall have to decline to alter the amendment now, but I commend and appreciate the position of the Senator from Nebraska and his very loyal support of the 10-percent amendment which he had a large part in drafting.

Mr. WHERRY. The Senator is correct in surmising that I shall oppose the 50-percent cut. I think it is the wrong way to accomplish the desired result. If the Senate wants to apply the cut clear across the board, that is another thing. The junior Senator from Illinois [Mr. DOUGLAS] supported authorizations for ECA amounting to $85,000,000 to provide for 22 projects for irrigation, roads, and power in Africa. He would not cut the amount 1 dime. I have every vote he has cast. Yet he comes to the floor of the Senate and says, "Let us take 60 percent off these projects in the United States." Perhaps he would favor a reduction of 70 percent. If we want to be sincere, if we really want to effect a reduction and not merely shadow box, the way to do it is to take the factual formula which has been worked out, and if we feel we should cut more than 10 percent, go to 15 percent; if we feel we should cut more than 15 percent, go to 20 percent.

In opposing this amendment, Mr. President, let me say that if the Senator from New Hampshire will not accept a modification to increase the cut provided by the Bridges-Byrd amendment to 15 percent—and if sufficient Senators will go along with me, I would make it 20 percent—I shall insist that we make the cut across the board. The appropriations for ECA should be cut as well as those at home, not confining the reduction to 1, 2, 3, or 4 States where there are many construction projects. If we do it the other way, it is practicable; it is constructive. If we do it this way we do not know what we are doing.

So, Mr. President, I shall oppose the amendment, but, if I live, I shall demand that the so-called Bridges-Byrd amendment be amended to cover at least a 15-percent cut, and if enough Senators want to join me, I shall ask that it apply a 20-percent cut, so that it can be done on a practical basis.

Mr. DOUGLAS and other Senators. Vote! Vote!

So the amendments offered by Mr. BRIDGES for himself and other Senators were rejected.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment and ask that it be printed and lie on the table. My amendment proposes to amend the so-called Bridges amendment on page 2, line 10, by striking out "10 percent" and inserting in lieu thereof "15 percent."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be received and printed, and will lie on the table.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, now that the proposal for a 60-percent cut of the rivers and harbors appropriation has been rejected, and the proposal for a 50-percent cut has, by the vote of the Senate, been defeated, I now wish to offer en bloc a series of five amendments, the net effect of which would be to produce a reduction of 40 percent in the appropriations.

I therefore propose on page 361, line 25, to strike out "$1,600,000" and to insert in lieu thereof "$1,200,000"; on page

364, line 2, to strike out "$221,244,500" and to insert in lieu thereof "$136,000,000"; on page 365, line 20, to strike out $436,933,000" and to insert in lieu thereof "$254,000,000"; on page 367, line 3, to strike out "$66,778,000" and to insert in lieu thereof "$45,000,000", and on page 367, line 14, to strike out "$2,524,500" and to insert in lieu thereof "$2,000,000."

This would save approximately $291,000,000 or an aggregate cut of 40 percent and it is arrived at by, first, omitting all new starts or substantially new starts; second, omitting all projects not approved by the Bureau of the Budget; third, doing away with all other increases added by the Senate Committee on Appropriations over the sums contained in the House bill; fourth, eliminating all projects which are manifestly of a dubious and doubtful nature; and, fifth, reducing all other appropriations by 25 percent.

The method followed is identical with that upon which my previous 60-percent cut was predicated, except that on item 5 the cut is 25 percent, instead of 50 percent as before.

The effect of these amendments would be to reduce the total appropriation for these items from $729,080,000 to $438,200,000, and to effect a saving of $290,880,000. My amendments are in the lump sum figures and leave discretion with the President and the Corps of Engineers to apply the reductions where they can best help the defense effort. I have merely detailed the project items for elimination or reduction in order to support the argument for the feasibility of my proposal.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed at this point in the RECORD a series of tables listing projects which were not included in the estimates of the Bureau of the Budget, projects which in my judgment are deferrable or of doubtful economic justification, other substantially new starts, and listing the Senate committee additions to the bill as passed by the House, and 25-percent reductions on all other items over $100,000 in amount.

There being no objection, the tables were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

TABLE VII.—Recapitulation of proposed project eliminations and reductions in support of Douglas amendment for reduced appropriations

(While leaving discretion as to specific project elimination or deferral to the Corps of Engineers, in order to permit continuation and acceleration of projects most essential to the defense effort, these amendments are based on a computation of possible project eliminations as follows:)

	Rivers and harbors	Flood control
I. Elimination of projects not approved by Budget Bureau (all of which were omitted by the House, and many of which are new starts)	$4,209,500	$5,683,700
II. Elimination of other new, or substantially new, starts and doubtful and deferrable projects (harbors for recreational and fishing craft, navigation projects of doubtful feasibility, projects previously disapproved by Budget Bureau and where benefit-cost ratio was less than 1:1 or where benefits were extremely speculative)	15,620,000	12,290,000
III. Elimination of Senate committee increases and 25 percent reductions in all other items	65,433,500	164,944,100

Sacramento River (separate)		524,500

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I ask that the amendments be considered en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the consideration of the amendments offered by the Senator from Illinois en bloc? The Chair hears none. The question is on agreeing to the amendments offered by the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I request the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendments offered by the Senator from Illinois. [Putting the question.]

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I ask for a division.

On a division, the amendments were rejected.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment to the so-called Bridges amendment. The amendment I send to the desk proposes on page 2, line 10 of the Bridges amendment, to strike "10 per centum" and to insert in lieu thereof "20 per centum."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be received and printed, and will lie on the table.

AMENDMENT OF LONGSHOREMEN'S AND HARBOR WORKERS' COMPENSATION ACT—CHANGE OF REFERENCE

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, on February 25, 1949, S. 1067, to amend section 44 and 38 of the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act, was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Reports were requested from the Federal Security Agency and the Department of Justice. On January 17, 1950, the Federal Security Agency submitted its report to the Judiciary Committee, and on March 1, 1950, the Department of Justice submitted its report to the Judiciary Committee.

S. 1067 was considered at a meeting of the committee held on Tuesday, July 18, 1950, and it was determined that the subject matter of the bill is such that the bill comes more properly within the jurisdiction of the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare.

On behalf of the Committee on the Judiciary, I request that the committee be discharged from the further consideration of S. 1067, and that the bill be referred to the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Nevada? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

GOSHEN VENEERING CO. AND SETTLEMENT CONTRACTS WITH SIOUX INDIANS

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, yesterday on the call of the calendar order of business No. 2107, Senate bill 410, was objected to. I respectfully ask unanimous consent now that that bill be included in the next call of the calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, did I understand the Senator to ask to have placed among measures to be called at the next call a bill that was not acted on at the time of the last calendar call?

Mr. McCARRAN. That is correct.

Mr. WHERRY. So far as I am personally concerned, I shall not object.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, may I ask a question?

Mr. WHERRY. Let me finish my statement. I have stated I would not object. I feel it would be a bad precedent to do what is requested, because if one Senator is permitted to have a bill taken out of order and called at the next call of the calendar, every other Senator could make a similar request.

Mr. GURNEY. Mr. President, I find myself compelled to ask the same privilege for Calendar No. 1744, House bill 5372. If I can have that bill called at the next call of the calendar, I shall withhold objection. The bill is very important to my State.

Mr. McFARLAND. Mr. President, I think that if the Senators would submit the bills to the majority leader before the next call, the matter could be worked out. I have no objection to these two bills being placed on the list, but I hope we may finish with the defense part of the appropriation bill. I should like to have the Senate proceed for a little while and get some work done on the appropriation bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the two requests? The Chair hears none, and the requests are granted.

GENERAL APPROPRIATIONS, 1951

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 7786) making appropriations for the support of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1951, and for other purposes.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, I have an amendment to the chapter under consideration which I should like to bring up at this time, on page 366, at the end of line 16.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair advises the Senator from Washington that the amendment is not yet in order. That point has not been reached in the consideration of the bill.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I am advised that we have not reached that point.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment on page 361, line 25.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. WHERRY. It is now 6:15 o'clock p. m., and several Senators have apparently assumed that when the vote was over, we might take a recess. Several had asked me how long we were to continue in session. Is it the purpose that the Senate remain in session longer, or does the acting majority leader feel that we might recess until tomorrow?

Mr. McFARLAND. I just announced that we would like to finish with chapter X, which is the defense chapter. I do not anticipate there will be any trouble about it, and we must make progress with the appropriation bill. We have had only two votes today, and if the only way we can make progress is to work longer hours that is what we will have to do. The distinguished Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKELLAR], the chairman of the committee has worked harder and stayed on the floor longer than any other Senator. If he can remain here and work these long hours, I think the rest of us can.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, that still does not answer my question.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, I have the floor.

Mr. WHERRY. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. MAGNUSON. Yes.

Mr. WHERRY. How long does the Senator from Arizona intend to have the Senate remain in session, if we run into trouble on the bill? How long does he feel the Senate should remain in session?

Mr. McFARLAND. I hope we will not have to stay much after 7. I think we can finish this chapter by 7 o'clock.

Mr. WHERRY. Seven o'clock. I thank the Senator.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, I still have the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognized the Senator from Nebraska after having stated to the Senator from Washington that his amendment was not in order.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Simply because the Chair said the amendment was not in order does not mean I lose the floor. I merely desire to make a parliamentary inquiry, so that I will be in order. Are we now on page 361 of the bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Line 25, page 361.

Mr. MAGNUSON. I thank the Chair. Now I shall be glad to relinquish the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware is recognized.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, I send to the desk several amendments which I ask to have stated and ask to have lie on the table. I should like to have the amendments voted on en bloc. They are the same amendments proposed by the Senator from New Hampshire, except that they propose a 25-percent cut instead of a 50-percent cut.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 361, line 25, it is proposed to strike out "$1,600,000" and insert "$1,200,000"; on page 364, line 2, to strike out "$221,244,500" and insert "$165,933,375"; on page 365, line 9, to strike out "$900,000" and insert "$675,000"; on page 365, line 20, to strike out "$436,933,000" and insert "$327,699,750"; on page 367, line 3, to strike out "$66,778,000" and insert "$50,083,500"; on page 367, line 14, to strike out "$2,524,500" and insert "$1,893,375."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the consideration of the amendments en bloc? The Chair hears none.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, if my amendment on page 366 is not in order, why is an amendment on page 365 in order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is advised by the Parliamentarian that this relates to the amendment before the Senate at this time.

Mr. MAGNUSON. I have no objection. I merely wanted to inquire.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendments offered by the Senator from Delaware.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendments.

The amendments were rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question now is on the amendment on page 361, line 25.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, since we have voted on four successive proposals for reductions, 60 percent, 50 percent, 40 percent, and 25 percent, I now move that we reduce the appropriation by $1 in each of these categories.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Illinois.

The amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment on page 361, line 25.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 362, line 2, after the word "purchase," to strike out "(for replacement only) in the current fiscal year of 350 passenger motor vehicles" and insert "in the current fiscal year of 500 passenger motor vehicles (of which 453 shall be for replacement only) and two motorboats (to be acquired from surplus stock where practicable) and the purchase (not to exceed one, to be acquired from surplus stock where practicable), maintenance, repair, and operation of aircraft: Provided further, That the various appropriations for rivers and harbors and flood control shall be available for payments to school districts as authorized by law, including payments on account of dependents of employees in field offices in project areas engaged in construction and related activities."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Rivers and harbors," on page 363, line 17, after the word "harbors," to insert "for the execution of detailed investigations and the preparation of plans and specifications for projects heretofore authorized;" and on page 364, line 2, after the word "Congress," to strike out "$185,878,000" and insert "$221,244,500, of which $75,000 shall be available for dredging in the Old River, Cleveland, Ohio, out of amounts allotted to other purposes for Cleveland Harbor as authorized by law."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 365, line 9, after "(Public Law 647)", to strike out "$1,000,000" and insert "$900,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Flood control," on page 365, line 19, after the word "with", to strike out "the."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 20, after the word "control", to strike out "$341,055,000" and insert "$436,933,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 366, line 8, after the word "project", to insert a colon and the following additional proviso: "Provided further, That $25,000 of the funds appropriated herein shall be available, at a total cost of not to exceed $100,000, to the Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors for the purpose of continuing the review of the report on James River and tributaries, North and South Dakota, published as House Document Numbered 83, Seventy-third Congress, and determining the advisability of improvements for flood control and related purposes on James River and tributaries, including Pipestem Creek."

Mr. YOUNG. Mr. President, I offer and ask to have stated an amendment which is now lying on the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, is that the amendment which the committee agreed to and authorized the Senator from North Dakota to offer on the floor?

Mr. YOUNG. Yes; that is correct.

Mr. McKELLAR. I thank the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 366, line 8, after the word "project", it is proposed to insert the following: "Provided further, That the section entitled 'National Military Establishment' in Public Law 343, Eighty-first Congress, first session, providing appropriations for the project at Mandan, N. Dak., is hereby amended to authorize reimbursement to local interests for such work as they may have done in providing interior drainage facilities at Mandan, subsequent to appropriation of funds for construction, as a part of the local flood-protection project, insofar as such drainage facilities shall be approved by the Chief of Engineers and found to have been done in accordance with the authorized project: Provided further, That such payment shall not exceed the sum of $76,000."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. YOUNG]. [Putting the question.] The "ayes" have it, and the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, it was my purpose, before the Chair announced the result, to ask for a restatement of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator desire a restatement of the amendment now?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Yes; I desire a restatement of the amendment. I was not clear as to what it was.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I make the point of order that the amendment has been adopted.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Very well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The next amendment of the committee will be stated.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, I do not want to be out of order again, but is not the last committee amendment which was stated on page 366, lines 8 to 16? Would it be in order to offer an amendment to it at this time?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. An amendment is in order.

Mr. MAGNUSON. I have an amendment on the desk which I ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, is not the amendment on page 366, line 16, the one on which we just acted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands the amendment which was just acted upon, offered by the Senator from North Dakota, was on page 366, line 8.

Mr. MAGNUSON. The committee amendment is from line 8 to line 16, on page 366.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Has the committee amendment been adopted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The committee amendment has not been adopted.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, I offer an amendment on page 366.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 366, before the period at the end of line 16, it is proposed to insert a colon and the following: "Provided further, That $50,000 of the funds herein appropriated shall be available for construction on the Eagle Gorge Reservoir project on the Green River, Wash."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's amendment is an amendment to a committee amendment, as the Chair understands.

Mr. MAGNUSON. That is correct. The purpose of the amendment is to utilize some $50,000 of the funds that are appropriated in the committee amendment. It does not add to the total over-all amount at all, and it does not increase the over-all amount, the general amount that the Senate committee has allowed for flood control. But by authorizing the engineers to use, if they see fit to do so, $50,000 at Eagle Gorge, it would give the Army engineers immediate access to $2,000,000 of State and county funds which have been appropriated for the project.

I might point out for the record that the Eagle Gorge Dam is in a unique position with regard to this appropriation. In 1949 the State legislature passed a bill appropriating a million and a half dollars for this project. This sum is held in a special fund known as the Eagle Gorge Dam flood control project fund. This $1,500,000 will be transferred to the Federal Government at such time, and I quote from the law itself, "as Congress shall have adopted and authorized the construction of the Eagle Gorge Dam flood control reservoir project and shall have made an appropriation therefor, and King County shall have issued a warrant in the sum of $500,000 payable to the Treasurer of the United States as the county's contribution to said project."

King County also issued a warrant for some $500,000 payable to the Treasurer of the United States as the county's contribution to the project. The Board of County Commissioners have set aside this amount, and the Congress has authorized the project. Both the State contribution of one and a half million dollars and the county's contribution of $500,000 will become available immediately if the $50,000 is appropriated by the Congress. If not, the matter will revert.

I am not asking for any increase in the general amount at all. I am merely asking for the authorization of the engineers, if they see fit, to use $50,000 in order to pick up $2,000,000 for this very vital project.

Mr. President, this is a river that runs from the Cascade Mountains through an industrial valley and empties into Seattle port. It flows for a distance of less than 100 miles. At times the snow on top of Mount Rainier and the other mountains that feed the river is as high as 40 feet. There has been a great deal of trouble with the industrial projects in the valley. It will provide some power. The $50,000 is a very small amount, because the responsibility is the Federal Government's in the inception. The stream is a navigable one. As I said, I am not adding to the amount. I merely hope the engineers can have the authority to use this small sum to pick up the $2,000,000 if they see fit on the merits of the proposition.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, an amendment involving $10,268,000 and nine different projects was brought before the committee. We were told that many others were going to be submitted if we agreed to the amendment. The committee went over the matter very carefully. But in view of the fact that acceptance of the amendment would bring about the offering of numerous other amendments, the proposal was turned down by the committee.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, I appreciate that, but the other projects would add to the amount. My amendment would make no addition to the amount. It does occupy a very peculiar position in that there is $2,000,000 available, which will not be available after the first of next year, which could be picked up if the engineers, within the framework of what they have, might decide that the merits of the proposal were such that they could use the $50,000. It does not add to the over-all cost at all, and there is a million and a half dollars involved. If the Senator would take the amendment to conference, and the position of the Corps of Engineers were made definitely known, I am sure that I would have no objection if the engineers felt that they did not want to do this, and pick up the $2,000,000. But I think they would feel they would save a great deal of money if they used the State and county contributions, because the place in question is one of the "hot" flood spots on the Pacific coast.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, the committee having voted unanimously against the project, I could not do anything along that line now. But later on there may be a way that the Senator's project can be arranged for, and I hope it can be. There is a difference between his and other projects. I shall be very happy to give it attention if the Senator will bring it before the committee, and I know the committee will give it attention.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Washington [Mr. MAGNUSON].

The amendment was rejected.

And in lieu thereof to insert the following:

SEC. 102. No part of any appropriation contained in this chapter shall be used directly or indirectly, except for temporary employment in case of emergency, for the payment of any civilian for services rendered by him on the Canal Zone while occupying a skilled, technical, clerical, administrative, executive, or supervisory position unless such person is a citizen of the United States of America or of the Republic of Panama: Provided, however, (1) That, notwithstanding the provision in the act approved August 11, 1939 (53 Stat. 1409), limiting employment in the above-mentioned positions to citizens of the United States from and after the date of approval of said act, citizens of Panama may be employed in such positions; (2) that at no time shall the number of Panamanian citizens employed in the above-mentioned positions exceed the number of citizens of the United States so employed, if United States citizens are available in continental United States or on the Canal Zone; (3) that nothing in this chapter shall prohibit the continued employment of any person who shall have rendered 15 or more years of faithful and honorable service on the Canal Zone; (4) that in the selection of personnel for skilled, technical, administrative, clerical, supervisory, or executive positions, the controlling factors in filling these positions shall be efficiency, experience, training, and education; (5) that all citizens of Panama and the United States rendering skilled, technical, clerical, administrative, executive, or supervisory service on the Canal Zone under the terms of this chapter (a) shall normally be employed not more than 40 hours per week, (b) may receive as compensation equal rates of pay based upon rates paid for similar employment in continental United States plus 25 percent; (6) this entire section shall apply only to persons employed in skilled, technical, clerical, administrative, executive, or supervisory positions on the Canal Zone directly or indirectly by any branch of the United States Government or by any corporation or company whose stock is owned wholly or in part by the United States Government: Provided further, That the President may suspend from time to time in whole or in part compliance with this section if he should deem such course to be in the public interest.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That completes the committee amendments to chapter IX of the bill.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, may the first committee amendment in chapter X be stated?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The legislative clerk read the amendment, which was, under the heading "Chapter X—Defense—Title I—Independent offices—National Security Resources Board," on page 374, line 19, after the words "per diem," to insert "and contracts with not to exceed 23 such individuals may be renewed for 1 year."

Mr. GURNEY. Mr. President, I hope we shall not proceed with the Department of Defense portion of the bill this evening. There are many Members of the Senate who have been under the impression that the civil functions section of the bill would be all that would be handled tonight. If any discussion were had this evening on the national defense portion of the bill, many Members of the Senate would wish to be present.

So I hope we shall not proceed with that chapter of the bill this evening. However, if we do proceed with it, I think there should be a quorum call; I make that suggestion to the majority leader.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, before we take action on any of the amendments in chapter X, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the body of the RECORD a brief statement giving some pertinent facts with respect to chapter X of the bill.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. WHERRY. I think the statement will be very important. If we are to go into this chapter of the bill now, no doubt the background material presented in the statement to which the Senator has referred should be before Senators for their information. If it is the intention of the majority leader to have the Senate take a recess in a few minutes, until tomorrow, which I think would be the way to proceed——

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. It is my understanding that in a short time a motion will be made that the Senate take a recess until tomorrow. Therefore, it seems to me that the proper way to handle the statement to which I have referred is to have it printed at this point in the body of the RECORD.

Mr. WHERRY. Very well.

There being no objection, the statement of Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT BY SENATOR THOMAS OF OKLAHOMA

Chapter X of the bill contains appropriations for the National Security Council, the National Security Resources Board, and the Department of Defense.

The total 1951 budget estimate, including supplementals, are $13,376,865,000 plus $1,385,785,000 in contract authorizations, or a total of $14,762,650,000 in cash and contract authorization.

The House allowed $12,910,702,300 in cash plus the contract authorization of $1,385,785,000, or a total of $14,296,487,300 in cash and contract authorization.

The Senate committee has allowed $13,294,581,821 in cash and $1,385,785,000 in contract authorization, or a total of $14,680,366,821 in cash and contract authorizations. This includes consideration of a supplemental budget estimate (S. Doc. No. 162) of $298,190,000 not considered by the House.

The cash as allowed by the Senate committee is $82,283,179 under the budget estimates and $383,879,521 over the House approved amount. It is $239,019,323 over the amount of $13,055,562,498 appropriated in 1950.

As indicated on page 271 of the report, the committee recommends the following appropriations:

National Security Council	$160,000
National Security Resources Board	3,500,000
Office of the Secretary of Defense	358,300,000
Department of the Army	4,088,377,521
Department of the Navy	4,103,258,300
Department of the Air Force	4,740,986,000

In addition, contract authorizations of $575,496,000 were allowed for the Department of the Navy and $810,289,000 for the Department of the Air Force.

In recommending these appropriations, the committee has closely followed the recommendations of the President, the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the Department of Defense, and the Bureau of the Budget. In addition, supplemental hearings were held in order to secure testimony from General Eisenhower and the Secretary of Defense. Incorporated in the bill are changes in line with their suggestions which serve to strengthen our defenses.

Generally speaking, the committee made three major changes in the bill as it came from the House. First, it considered and allowed the military construction supplemental items, already referred to, which were not considered by the House. Second, it made restoration of House cuts to the full amount requested by the Military Establishment. Third, it applied the reductions of chapter X-A of the House bill to those items in the bill which the Department of Defense considered least detrimental to the national defense.

I understand that an amendment has been suggested to authorize the use of funds appropriated in this act for the purpose of purchasing defense materials under reciprocal agreements with friendly nations. I am advised that the Secretary of State and the Secretary of Defense would decide that such purchasing is in the public interest, particularly in these perilous times, and that purchases made under reciprocal agreements of this kind are well within the authority granted by the Buy American Act. Therefore, such an amendment should not be necessary.

I have three minor corrective amendments which I shall present at the proper time. With these exceptions I hope that the bill will be approved as reported.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, I also ask unanimous consent to have printed at this point in the RECORD a statement made by the Secretary of Defense on July 26, before the Senate Appropriations Committee, his statement having special reference to defense items, although it also has a bearing on chapter X of the bill.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT OF SECRETARY OF DEFENSE LOUIS JOHNSON BEFORE THE SENATE APPROPRIATIONS COMMITTEE, JULY 26, 1950

Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, the last time I appeared before this committee was April 26, 2 months before the Republic of Korea was invaded. At that time I said:

"The Secretary of State and the Secretary of Defense, as a working committee of the National Security Council * * * have also appraised recent events which make it entirely possible that appropriations in excess of those which have been requested for the current year will be required in succeeding years, not only for our own military forces but also for the military-aid program. Just as it is possible that in future years this Nation will have to devote an increased percentage of its total budget to these items, it is also possible that our partners in the North Atlantic Pact will be required by the force of events, and by the force of collective planning as well, to take similar action. The events to which I allude include the Soviet atomic explosion, the fall of China, the serious situations in southeast Asia, the break in diplomatic relations with Bulgaria, and deteriorating relations with other satellite countries, the Soviet assumption of control over the armed forces of Poland, Soviet naval expansion, the increased Soviet pressures in Germany, the recent attack on a naval aircraft in the Baltic, and the recent Soviet demands relative to Trieste.

"None of this presents a happy prospect; but the cold war is not a happy circumstance. The only satisfaction that I can personally derive from the situation lies in the fact that our own Military Establishment is well on the road to becoming a stronger and more powerful organization, and one which—as circumstances require—can utilize increased appropriations in a manner which will provide substantially increased combat effectiveness—whereas even as recently as 1 year ago, large sums of money out of any increased appropriations would have been drained off in the form of unnecessary overhead. It is particularly important that the Armed Forces maintained by the United States shall at all times provide a sound base on which can be built a Military Establishment of increased size, should circumstance so require."

Gentlemen, circumstances do so require. That is my reason for being here today, in support of supplemental appropriations in the amount of $10,500,000,000.

I know that all of you are familiar with the contents of President Truman's message of last Wednesday. That document presents, better than anything I might say, the reasons for our request for this supplemental appropriation. The Chairman of the Armed Services Committee of the House, the Honorable CARL VINSON, said of the President's message that it was a "firm message which will be heartening to all Americans." In making this statement, Chairman VINSON added:

"I want especially to say that I am delighted to know, from the President's message and from my own contacts with the Defense Department, that what has been recommended has the complete and unstinted support of all the civilian and military leaders of the Defense Department. This is a splendid example of teamwork and efficiency in the Defense Department."

I am extremely grateful to Chairman VINSON for his generous support. It is entirely accurate to state that this supplemental appropriation has the unanimous approval and support of the civilian and military leaders of the Department of Defense.

The appropriation problems with which this committee, the Congress, and the Department of Defense have had to deal in recent months have not been easy ones. I know of no better summation of these problems than the one which Chairman GEORGE MAHON of the Armed Services Subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee made on the floor of the House in support of that committee's recommended budget for 1950. You will recall that on that occasion, Chairman MAHON said: "If war comes soon, we are appropriating too little. If we have miscalculated the dangers, if the threat of war is just a deceptive mirage on the horizon, we are appropriating too much."

The dilemma described by Chairman MAHON was a dilemma which confronted not only this committee and the Department of Defense, but also the President and the people of the United States. It was not a new dilemma. My predecessor as Secretary of Defense, James Forrestal, outlined this dilemma very aptly in testimony before the Senate Armed Services Committee on April 21, 1948, about a year prior to the time that I became Secretary of Defense on March 28, 1949. On that occasion, Secretary Forrestal quoted the following excerpt from a memorandum he had received from the Joint Chiefs of Staff:

"Based solely on military considerations, it is the opinion of the Joint Chiefs of Staff that the administration should advocate a balanced Military Establishment commensurate with the 70 air group program for the Air Force. * * * The Joint Chiefs of Staff recognize, however, that the phasing (of this balanced Army, Navy, and Air Force program) must be made responsive to such other factors as the capability of the aircraft industry to expand, the impact of the cost of the program on the national economy, and the calculated risk which can be accepted in the light of changing world politico-military situations."

After quoting the foregoing memorandum from the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Secretary Forrestal then went on to make the following statement:

"I think that I can say to you, therefore, that the President, the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the Secretary of Defense, and the Secretaries of Army, Navy, and Air Force—as well as the Senate and the House of Representatives, I feel sure—are all in agreement, as a military matter, on the desirability of what the Joint Chiefs have described as a balanced Military Establishment commensurate with the 70 air group program.

"The Joint Chiefs * * * have also reported to me that a force of the recommended size would require, in fiscal 1949, additional appropriations in excess of $9,000,000,000. * * *

"In my opinion, the Joint Chiefs were entirely correct in addressing themselves exclusively to the military considerations. That is their job. But they were equally correct in pointing out that other considerations—'the impact of the cost of the program on the national economy,' for example—are factors which the President and the Congress must consider.

"The impact on the economy of an additional $9,000,000,000 program is a matter that deserves—and will, I am sure, receive—the most careful attention by both the President and the Congress.

"My insistence, throughout the consideration of these matters, has been that they must be considered in a rational and organized manner—and not on a basis of emotional reaction. * * *

"If the Congress and the President should ultimately decide that the military considerations, at this juncture in world history, outweigh the fiscal considerations—then we should, by all means, embark on the $9,000,000,000 additional program. But if the Congress and the President should ultimately decide that a program of somewhat lesser magnitude is required—in the interest of national solvency and in the interest of avoiding, so far as possible, allocations, rationing, price controls, and a host of other restrictions—then we should proceed in such a manner that we will get the most national security for each dollar we spend. * * *

"Bearing in mind over-all considerations such as those I have just been discussing, and after receiving the Joint Chiefs' $9,000,000,000 recommendation of April 14, 1948, I asked the Joint Chiefs this supplementary question: Granted the military desirability of the $9,000,000,000 program, what program would the Joint Chiefs recommend—in the general vicinity of $3,000,000,000—as the most effective military program within the limits of the funds that will probably be available to us?

"Yesterday, I received the unanimous reply of the Joint Chiefs—and I again emphasize the unanimity of the reply. Their specific recommendation—on the more limited basis envisioned by my more recent question—was that the $3,000,000,000 program should be increased by $481,000,000. * * *

"The program I am here discussing, therefore, is a program which would increase the original 1949 budget request by $3,481,000,000."

The $3,481,000,000 which Secretary Forrestal recommended, when added to the 1949 budget as originally submitted, gave a total recommended military budget of $13,507,000,000 for the fiscal year 1949. In other words, the dilemma presented by the competing military and economic considerations was resolved at the $13,500,000,000 level.

The President, his advisers in the executive branch of the Government, and the Congress solved the dilemma at that time by deciding that the fiscal considerations were equally as important as the military. The substance of that decision has been repeatedly ratified by the President, his advisers in the executive branch of the Government, and the Congress, all of whom reflected the will of the people of the United States.

At the outset of my remarks today, I quoted from my testimony of April 26. You will recall that my concluding remarks on April 26 dealt with the same dilemma I have just been dicussing. On that occasion, I said:

"This year's budget for the military establishment, with very little variation, has received the approval of the Executive Office of the President, the Secretary of Defense, the Appropriations Committees of the Congress, and other responsible persons such as General Eisenhower. In other words, there has been substantial unanimity of opinion on a vital point—namely, the fact that the world in which we live requires military expenditures of approximately the amount which the President submitted to the Congress last January. Consider for a moment how unusual it is to find that all of the responsible authorities who have spoken to this subject have been in complete agreement on more than 95 percent of the military budget. The House Appropriations Committee has suggested some reductions; General Eisenhower has suggested the possibility of some increases. But even taking the maximum of these suggestions—both on the minus and on the plus side—there has been no suggested variation which would affect the military budget in an amount greater than 4 percent. I call this fact to your attention * * * because I think that it constitutes the best argument that I could possibly present as to the fundamental soundness of the budget."

One month ago the Republic of Korea was invaded. The action of the United Nations, supported by the United States, called for the use of troops, ships, and aircraft to repel this criminal aggression which threatened the peace of the world and the security of our own country. In the light of the actual fighting that is now in progress, we have reached the point where the military considerations clearly outweigh the fiscal considerations.

However, in our efforts to get the most efficient use of our military appropriations we have not had to deal with the same sort of competing considerations as those I have just been discussing. For all of us were equally determined to get maximum preparedness out of every dollar appropriated—and this determination to get the maximum return on the defense dollar will continue to govern our actions.

In enacting the National Security Act Amendments of 1949, the Congress added language specifically addressed to this point, and required the Secretary of Defense to submit to the Congress, twice each year, "itemized statements showing the savings of public funds and the eliminations of unnecessary duplications and overlappings that have been accomplished pursuant to the provisions of this act."

Carrying out this congressional mandate has been the steadfast policy of the Department of Defense, and a prime condition of our efforts in this regard has been the elimination of unnecessary overhead, with a simultaneous improvement in the combat potential of the Armed Forces. Indeed, the overall combat potential of our Armed Forces was at a higher level on June 25—the day the Republic of Korea was invaded—than had been the case at any time since postwar demobilization was completed.

I realize that the foregoing sentence could be regarded as a fine, glittering generality, so I would like to make it concrete. For that purpose, I will use specific illustrations.

In the case of the Navy, what the fleet is doing today would not have been possible 2 years ago. In March of 1948, just after the Communists staged a coup in Czechoslovakia, Secretary of Defense Forrestal was gravely concerned about the readiness of the active fleet. In a memorandum which he received on March 23, 1948, the following significant statement appears: "As of 22 March, there are 111 vessels of the active fleet immobilized and 66 reduced to limited operations (or a total of 177) by insufficient personnel. * * * In addition, most of the operating active fleet vessels are under peacetime allowance."

The situation was one of the factors which led Secretary Forrestal to request the supplemental appropriation of $3,481,000,000, which I have already discussed above. This situation was also one of the factors which has led the Department of Defense to advocate a greater fighting strength for each ship, even at the expense of reducing the total number of ships in the active fleet. The ships we need are ships that can float and fight. A ship that only floats is a liability instead of an asset. On June 25, when the Republic of Korea was invaded, every ship in the active fleet was capable of getting under way and moving into action. Off the shores of Korea, we are being provided with daily illustrations of the readiness of the ships in our active fleet.

In the semiannual report which I recently submitted to the Congress, I discussed the general situation I have been describing above in these words:

"Over-all, the readiness of the Navy has been improved and the active fleet is ready to go. It is manned at 67 percent of wartime strength with trained personnel who seek to make a career of the Navy. This represents a substantial improvement over the situation 18 months ago when a larger active fleet in number of men and ships was manned at only 61 percent of wartime strength with many of the ships either immobilized or in a reduced operational status because of heavy turn-over of personnel and a serious imbalance in the skills and occupations represented."

In the case of the Air Force, there has been a substantial increase in our actual combat potential. In chapter IV of the Semi-Annual Report which I submitted to Congress last February, I discussed this point in the following words:

"It is worth noting that on January 1, 1948, the Finletter Commission recommended 70 groups manned by 401,000 men. On that date the report also noted that the Air Force stood at 337,000 men for 55 programed groups. * * *

"The size of a group is subject to change. As President Truman has pointed out, 'The number of groups is a somewhat misleading measure of airpower since the character, size, number of aircraft, and other elements of the group are not fixed but constantly change as conditions require.' An example of the type of change to which the President referred is the programed size of each B-36 heavy bombardment group—which stood at 18 planes per group less than a year ago, and which stands at 30 planes per group today. In this connection, it should also be noted that the programed size of 9 groups which stood at 30 B-29's or B-50's per group 2 years ago, stand at 45 today. In addition, these groups include 20 B-29 type tankers which increase the effective range of each individual bomber.

"In our Air Force of today and as planned for 1951, we have 416,000 men manning 48 groups, but due to the organizational changes noted above, these 48 groups, according to Air Force estimates, are equivalent to 52½ groups of the size envisaged in the previous concept of the 70-group program."

I should also like to comment briefly on the situation with respect to the Army. In March of 1948, the Army's strength was 542,000. The Army's budgeted strength for the current fiscal year was 630,000, prior to the supplemental request which the President submitted to Congress yesterday. In addition to this increase in numbers, there has been a further increase arising out of the fact that proportionately more men are now in combat units, and proportionately less men are in noncombat categories. In my semiannual report, I pointed out that "this increase in combat effectiveness was made possible by savings in the use of undue numbers of personnel for administrative and overhead purposes." Between March 1948 and June 1950 the actual manpower strength of the Army's mobile striking force in the continental United States—the general Reserve—has increased by 165 percent.

As this committee knows, all of the top officials of the Department of Defense—both civilian and military—have been seriously concerned lest even the increased strengths I have been describing should be inadequate to meet the needs of world conditions. In order to do everything possible to meet this situation, we set up a Defense Department Management Committee, immediately after the enactment of the National Security Act amendments of 1949. To assist this committee in carrying out the recommendations of the Hoover Commission with respect to the Department of Defense, we employed the management engineering firm of Robert Heller and Associates. The first paragraph of the directive of the Management Committee reads as follows: "Pursuant to the authority vested in me by the National Security Act of 1947 as amended, I have established a Defense Management Committee. The mission of the committee is to bring about progressively better use of defense dollars through elimination of nonessential expenditures, and through improved management, in order to release funds for increasing combat effectiveness, and to provide opportunities to curtail over-all costs."

The expanded program which the President submitted to Congress Monday makes it all the more necessary that we obtain the maximum return for every dollar that we are investing in our national defense. This gives added point to a matter I mentioned here on April 26, when I said: "Our mobilization in time of emergency depends for its success upon the soundness of the forces in being which constitute our mobilization base."

The forces in being which make up our Army, Navy, and Air Force constitute a sound base. To that base, we recommend that you now add a total active duty strength in the neighborhood of 600,000 men—making a total of some 2,100,000 men.

Earlier this year this committee considered requests for a program covering all activities of the Department of Defense, approximating 13.3 billion dollars. Monday the President submitted a supplemental estimate in the amount of $10,500,000,000. The recommended revised budget, in the aggregate amount of $23,800,000,000, would accomplish the purpose of financing the costs of the Korean campaign, as well as providing for the early expansion of the military forces to cope with the present international situation.

The supplemental estimate includes $3,063,000,000 for the Army, $2,649,000,000 for the Navy, $4,535,000,000 for the Air Force, and $240,000,000 for establishment-wide activities of the Defense Department.

About 59 percent of the supplemental request, or $6,200,000,000, has been included for guns, tanks, ships, aircraft, ammunition, and other major procurement items. (Of this total about $3,344,000,000 is for aircraft—$40,000,000 for the Army, $620,000,000 for the Navy, $2,684,000,000 for the Air Force—and $185,000,000 is for shipbuilding.)

About 24 percent, or $2,500,000,000, would go for the operation and maintenance of the facilities and equipment for the regular operations of the Armed Forces, including the sharply increased demands for consumption-type material in the Korean campaign. (About one-half of the $2,500,000,000 would go for consumption-type matériel.)

About 13 percent, or $1,350,000,000, would go for the pay and allowances of military personnel, including their food, subsistence, and travel.

Of the balance, $174,000,000 is for military construction—$4,000,000 for the Army and $170,000,000 for the Air Force.

Exclusive of costs for guardsmen and Reserves on active duty, $33,000,000 has been provided for the National Guard, Officers Reserve Corps, and the ROTC program of the Army.

One hundred and twenty million dollars has been included for research and development, $70,000 for industrial mobilization, and $50,000 has been allocated for contingencies.

As the President stated in his message transmitting the supplemental request, certain program changes will undoubtedly be necessary in order properly to prosecute the campaign in Korea. For this reason authority is being requested to adjust by 10 percent any single appropriation by transfer from other appropriations. This would permit the necessary adjustments either in the Korean support or in the build-up phase contemplated by these estimates. I have instructed Assistant Secretary McNeil to keep this committee currently informed of all such actions which we find necessary.

I want to emphasize that this is not a call for full mobilization. It is a call to increase our strength in being, in order to enable us to support the United Nations' action in Korea and to build up our strength elsewhere to meet the threat to world peace.

The supplemental request before you rests on two principal factors: First, the requirements for land, naval, and air forces needed by General MacArthus successfully to prosecute the campaign in Korea; and second, the need to build up the strength of our forces over and above those committed to the Korean campaign.

The plans covering the build-up of our forces are based upon studies which began immediately after the President's announcement of the Soviet atomic explosion last September. You will recall that I discussed these studies when I testified here on April 26.

Because of the events in Korea the minimum desired forces which these studies showed to be required—normally a matter that would have been provided for in next year's budget—are being requested at this time.

The Joint Chiefs of Staff are in complete agreement and fully support the forces planned for the build-up in our strength, and are also in complete agreement as to the forces to be provided in support of the Korean campaign.

The action in Korea is a battle of supply and the distances involved are great. As a result, we must expect difficult problems and slow progress. The military establishment which we are asking you to expand, however, is a sounder mobilization base than the United States has ever had before. By reason of the groundwork laid by my predecessor and the efforts of officers and civilians in all the agencies of the Department of Defense—the spirit of teamwork within the Department has grown tremendously. We have today a closely knit team of land, naval, and air forces. The swift decisions during the past 4 weeks to coordinate the combat efforts of the Army, Navy, and Air Force in the Far East are striking examples of the benefits of unification in an emergency.

Our Military Establishment has been geared to provide a sound mobilization base and a swift striking force in case of a third world war. In addition, we have had to be prepared to meet, to the extent that we could, the first shock of an act of calculated local aggression. The latter test has been met with unprecedented speed in Korea. We are now in the process of backing our shock troops with the necessary reinforcements. We are asking you to supply the men and equipment to replace those being used in the Far East and additional strengths to prepare for the possibility of future emergencies. I am sure that all of us will meet the challenge of the aggressor with the same undaunted spirit as that shown by our fighting men in Korea.

The witnesses who followed me will give the details of the program we recommend. It is a program designed to bring the action in Korea to a successful conclusion; it is also a program designed to promote world peace by deterring further aggression. It is the sort of program to which I referred on April 12 this year when I gave the Founder's Day speech at my alma mater, the University of Virginia.

Speaking in Charlottesville that day, I said:

"I have every confidence in our ultimate success. We shall face facts as they are and shall fit our defense plans and our manpower and munitions requirements to meet them. Our defense plans, however, are not rigid. They are not the laws of Medes and Persians. They are flexible and adaptable to changing conditions. They are under constant study and review. If we become convinced that our present means are insufficient to meet the exigencies of the day and the probable threats of tomorrow, we shall not be too humble to ask for more; and if we find them more than adequate we shall not be too proud to ask for less. We shall always seek for truth and we shall take fitting means to meet the truth."

Gentlemen, I shall be glad to attempt to answer any questions you may have.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, before proceeding in executive session to consider several nominations about which I do not believe there will be objection, I should like to state that I hope that tomorrow we may be able to agree, by unanimous consent, to vote on the appropriation bill and all amendments thereto sometime next week, perhaps not later than Wednesday. If it is possible to have such an agreement entered, I shall be very grateful to all Senators, because we have spent a considerable length of time on this appropriation bill—although of course much of it has been devoted to extraneous matters, while the appropriation bill has remained the unfinished business.

I should like to hear an expression from my friend the Senator from Nebraska in that connection.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, if I may reply to the query of the distinguished majority leader, let me say that I am quite positive that an arrangement along the line suggested can be made.

I hope the distinguished majority leader will canvass Senators on his side of the aisle, to learn their views in regard to his suggestion. I wish to say that I believe that Thursday would be a better day than Wednesday, on which to have the final vote taken, if Thursday will meet with the approval of the majority leader, although I shall endeavor to work out, so far as the minority are concerned, an option as to either Wednesday or Thursday.

Let me say to the distinguished majority leader that, although I think we can work out the suggestion he has made, yet I would not wish to agree regarding it tonight, because before arriving at a unanimous-consent agreement in regard to the final passage of a bill, it is necessary, among Senators on this side of the aisle, that a quorum call be had.

So I say to the majority leader that if he will work with Senators on his side of the aisle in connection with this matter, I will do so with Senators on my side of the aisle. Then if the majority leader presents his request tomorrow, following a quorum call, we shall see what can be done.

I believe that Thursday might be the best day. I suggest to the distinguished majority leader that I think all controversial amendments should be carried over to that day, and then should be voted on one right after another, so that all those votes could be taken at that time. I think there will be not more than 2 or 3 very controversial amendments; and of course the Bridges amendment will be one of them.

So I shall be glad to work on the suggestion the distinguished Senator from Illinois has made.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, it was not my intention to propose a unanimous-consent agreement today. I had the intention of doing so tomorrow, if that will be satisfactory to everyone. I hope we shall be able to vote on the final passage of the bill on Wednesday.

The distinguished senior Senator from Tennessee [Mr. MCKELLAR], the chairman of the Appropriations Committee, and all other members of the committee realize the difficulty which may develop in conference. That situation is not news to anyone; it has been discussed by Senators on both sides of the aisle. So I should like to have the Senate dispose of the bill as quickly as possible, in order that the conferees can begin work as rapidly as possible, so that they will be able to bring the conference report before us very soon.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Snader, its assistant reading clerk, announced that the House had passed, without amendment, the bill (S. 2240) to authorize certain personnel and former personnel of the United States Coast Guard and the United States Public Health Service to accept certain gifts tendered by foreign governments.

ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED

The message also announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the following enrolled bills and joint resolution, and they were signed by the Vice President:

H. R. 4390. An act to authorize the conveyance, for school purposes, of certain land in Acadia National Park to the town of Tremont, Maine, and for other purposes;

H. R. 6073. An act to amend section 501 (b) (6) of the Internal Revenue Code; and

H. J. Res. 513. Joint resolution to authorize the burial in the National Cemetery at Nashville, Tenn., the bodies of members of the Tennessee Air National Guard killed in a plane crash near Myrtle Beach, S. C., July 23, 1950.

STATEMENT BY SENATOR LEHMAN ON THE NECESSITY OF PRESERVING THE NEW YORK MILKSHED

Mr. LEHMAN. Mr. President, the press was kind enough to report some recent testimony I gave on the dairy problems of New York State. Some of these reports have been subject to some misrepresentation. To clarify that misinterpretation, I have today issued a statement describing my firm belief in the necessity of preserving the New York milkshed. I ask unanimous consent to have that statement printed in the body of the RECORD.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT BY SENATOR LEHMAN ON NEW YORK MILKSHED

Because some remarks of mine before the Gillette subcommittee on agriculture with regard to the New York milkshed, as reported to the press, might have been subject to some misinterpretation, I should like to make clear that I feel now, as I have always felt, that the New York milkshed and its regulation as a single market is vital to the health both of the dairy industry and of the consuming public.

It may be recalled that as Governor of New York I was instrumental in setting up this milkshed. I have felt much gratification in the way this has worked through the years, and is working now, to produce a stable and orderly market for the producers in the several States included within the milkshed, and for the consuming public in New York.

The sanitary regulations surrounding the production and handling of milk varies between the different cities and milk markets in this country. These regulations reflect local needs and local standards, and are based on historical factors as well as on the ability of the milk producers in the various areas to fill the needs of their markets.

The prices established in the several areas must be sufficient to induce producers to supply the necessary amount of this vital food and at the same time to assure a reasonable return to the producers, as well as to the processors and distributors. There should be no profiteering in any branch of the industry nor should the price be so high as to discourage consumption. All these factors must be taken into account in establishing the price. These factors, which are in part local factors, indicate the desirability of maintaining regional milksheds. And the authority of local health officials to maintain the standards they deem vital to protect health of the communities in question must be safeguarded. I believe, of course, that the trend of these health standards should be upward for the whole Nation, and the effort should be to raise the level of the lowest to that of the highest, although this must be a progressive trend, based on local capabilities and circumstances.

In any event, the New York milkshed should and must be preserved. It is in order to preserve this milkshed that I feel strongly that the problem of the dairy industry must be studied on a national basis and from a national viewpoint. Otherwise the regional milksheds stand in danger of being broken down by the pressure of fluid milk from areas of lower production costs and less demanding sanitary standards.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to consider executive business.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. STENNIS in the chair) laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations, which were referred to the Committee on Armed Services.

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

The following favorable reports of nominations were submitted:

By Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina, from the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service:

J. H. Allen, of Florida, Daniel W. Bell, of the District of Columbia, Morris L. Ernst, of New York, Frank M. Folsom, of New York, Alfred E. Lyon, of New York, Robert L. Thornton, of Texas, and Charles A. Ward, of Minnesota, to be members of the Advisory Board for the Post Office Department.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Mr. President, from the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service, I report favorably 169 postmaster nominations. The persons affected are well distributed over the United States, 41 States being represented.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The nominations will be received and placed on the Executive Calendar.

If there be no further reports of committees, the clerk will state the nominations on the Executive Calendar, beginning with the new reports.

COAST GUARD

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of Capt. Kenneth K. Cowart to be engineer in chief of the Coast Guard for a period of 4 years, with the rank of rear admiral.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

COAST AND GEODETIC SURVEY

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of Edward C. Maran to be commissioned ensign in the Coast and Geodetic Survey.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of Julian W. Flint to be commissioned ensign in the Coast and Geodetic Survey.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, in order to be certain, since there has been some confusion, let me inquire whether the nominations now being confirmed are what we call "new reports," beginning on page 2 of the Executive Calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. WHERRY. Have all the newly reported nominations been presented as yet?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Yes.

Mr. WHERRY. And they have been confirmed; have they?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Yes.

Mr. WHERRY. Very well.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, let me inquire whether there is objection at this time to the nomination of Edward J. Carrigan, of California, to be United States marshal for the northern district of California.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I have been requested to see to it that the nomination goes over.

If the Senator from Nevada will contact me, I shall be glad to tell him which Senator made that request of me; and possibly the matter can be worked out, or at least a time can be set for the handling of the nomination.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I hope we shall be able to reach a satisfactory agreement with respect to that nomination, without having to move that it be taken up, because it has been ready for disposition for a long time.

Mr. WHERRY. Let me suggest that if we cannot make an agreement by tomorrow or the next day, then at any time the Senator wishes to move to have it taken up, we shall arrange to have present the Senator who is particularly interested in the nomination.

Mr. LUCAS. I thank the Senator.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, if the majority leader will yield, I should like to say further, in regard to the question of confirmation of the nomination of Edward J. Carrigan, of California, that a moment ago when I stated what I was prepared to do if arrangements could not be made tomorrow or the next day, I really meant Monday. I have just been informed that the Senator who is interested in this matter has just been excused until Monday. So I want the RECORD to show that, please.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, do I correctly understand that the remaining nominations on the calendar have been confirmed?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All the new nominations have been confirmed.

RECESS

Mr. LUCAS. As in legislative session, I move that the Senate now stand in recess until 12 o'clock tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 6 o'clock and 41 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until tomorrow, Friday, July 28, 1950, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

THURSDAY, JULY 27, 1950

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Bernard Braskamp, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O Thou who art the great source of all our material and spiritual blessings, may we be assured in some special sense that this Chamber is now for each of us an altar of prayer and a place of vision.

Grant that our President, our Speaker, and every leader and Member of this legislative body, and all the officers, clerks, reporters, secretaries, and pages may feel that for calmness and courage, in these days of crises, we need the guiding and sustaining presence of Thy Spirit.

Thou knowest how feeble and frail we are. In letters of blood and fire it is being written that we need Thee. Fill us with a deeper experience of the value of prayer in the mastery over fear and whatever may befall us in the tragic and changing fortunes of war.

May we daily cultivate the habit of prayer. Help us to realize that if we pray in ordinary days then we will know how to pray with conquering power when the way of life leads through darkness, suffering, and sacrifice.

Help us see more clearly that we must have the attributes and virtues of righteousness and faith and humility if we are to know and experience the secret of answered and availing prayer.

In Christ's name we bring our petitions. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

TEMPORARY APPROPRIATIONS

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Appropriations, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 512) making further temporary appropriations for the fiscal year 1951, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

Mr. TABER. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, this is a continuing resolution extending the availability of funds under the omnibus appropriation bill to August 31. I expect that with the legislative situation that confronts us there is nothing to do but adopt the joint resolution.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. If the gentleman will yield, will the gentleman from Missouri tell us when we are going to get the appropriation bill here?

Mr. CANNON. We are led to believe it will be in the next few days.

Mr. TABER. I would hope we might get it by the middle of the week. I would not want to figure on anything definite.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. RICH. As I understand, the appropriation bill is being held up now in the other body and is not ready to be presented to the conferees. I understand that the appropriations providing for civil functions have been increased greatly. I see that in the newspapers, which is where I get my information. Is the other body, at a time like this, going to increase the appropriations provided by the House, and if so, is the gentleman from Missouri, as chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, going to bring that bill back to the House and let us try to cut it down?

Mr. CANNON. The gentleman from Pennsylvania is one of the older and more distinguished Members of the House. He has served here for many years. He is familiar with the history of appropriation bills and conferences between the two bodies. I trust the gentleman recalls that the House always objects strenuously to any unwarranted increases in appropriations and I assure him we will continue that policy.

Mr. RICH. And we can feel that the House conferees are not going to permit a bill to come back to the House without the House having a chance to vote on some of these increases suggested by the other body?

Mr. CANNON. The gentleman may rest assured that we will bring back every item which must be considered by the House under the rules.

Mr. Speaker, this is, generally speaking, the usual continuing resolution. It may be summarized briefly. The current resolution, Public Law 585, expires July 31, 1950. The pending resolution proposes to extend the provisions of the law to a date not later than August 31, 1950.

Section 1 of the resolution reenacts section 1 of Public Law 585 and provides for termination of continuing provisions upon enactment of the regular appropriation bill or August 31, whichever first occurs. Rates of obligation and expenditure are governed by figures in the House bill and all provisions are subject to all limitations and restrictions of the House bill.

Section 2 (a) of the pending resolution appropriates for programs not covered in the House bill, at the rate reported by the Senate Committee on Appropriations or the last quarter rate of 1950, whichever is lower. Five of these programs are:

	Senate figures
Economic Cooperation	[1] $2,391,000,000
Assistance to the Republic of Korea	90,000,000
Government and relief in occupied areas	288,000,000
Displaced Persons Commission	9,000,000
Mutual defense assistance	[1] 1,678,000,000

[1] Plus carryover

Section 2 (b) provides for the Selective Service System at the rate of $20,476,000 annually, the amount of the Budget estimate, pending final consideration of the general bill. The situation is urgent as service must be expanded immediately and there is no other way to meet it.

Section 3 authorizes the District of Columbia rent-control program at the rate of the last quarter of 1950 or as provided in House Document 640 ($113,100), whichever is lower.

Section 4 makes certain that rates for programs in section 2 supersede those carried in Public Law 585.

Section 5 reenacts sections 4 and 6 of Public Law 585.

Section 4 of Public Law 585 excepts chapter 10A (Taber-Thomas) and section 1114 (Jensen) amendments and time limitations on apportionments under the Antideficiency Act.

Section 6 of Public Law 585 provides that expenditures shall be charged against respective appropriations when eventually made in the general bill.

It will noted that the joint resolution before the House provides no new programs and authorizes no expansion of old programs except for the Selective Service.

If no one desires further time, I move the previous question on the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That funds and authority provided by section 1 of the joint resolution of June 29, 1950 (Public Law 585), are hereby continued available, and the funds and authority provided by sections 2 and 3 hereof are made available, until (a) enactment into law of an appropriation for any project or activity provided for herein, or (b) enactment of the applicable appropriation act by both Houses without any provision for such project or activity or (c) August 31, 1950, whichever first occurs.

SEC. 2. There are hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated—

(a) Such amounts as may be necessary for carrying out, at a rate not in excess of that which obtained in the last quarter of the fiscal year 1950 or that which would be provided for by the General Appropriation Act, 1951 (H. R. 7786, 81st Cong.), as reported to the Senate on July 8, 1950, whichever is lower, projects and activities under applicable appropriations as follows:

Economic cooperation.
Assistance to the Republic of Korea.
Government and relief in occupied areas.
Displaced Persons Commission.
Mutual defense assistance.

(b) Such amount as may be necessary for carrying out the provisions of the Selective Service Extension Act of 1950, at a rate not in excess of that provided for in the budget estimate (H. Doc. 656).

SEC. 3. There is hereby appropriated out of the revenues of the District of Columbia such amount as may be required for necessary expenses for the Office of Administrator of Rent Control of the District of Columbia for the period beginning July 1, 1950, at a rate not in excess of that which obtained in the last quarter of the fiscal year 1950, or that provided for in the budget estimate for 1951 (H. Doc. 640), whichever is lower.

SEC. 4. Effective August 1, 1950, funds and authority provided under section 2 hereof shall supersede funds and authority provided by the aforesaid joint resolution of June 29, 1950, for the projects and activities named in such section.

SEC. 5. Sections 4 and 6 of the aforesaid joint resolution of June 29, 1950, shall be applicable to all funds and authority provided by this act.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CONTROLLING ANCHORAGE AND MOVEMENT OF FOREIGN-FLAG VESSELS IN WATERS OF THE UNITED STATES FOR SECURITY PURPOSES

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 9215) to authorize the President to control the anchorage and movement of foreign-flag vessels in waters of the United States when the national security of the United States is endangered, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman explain the bill?

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, this bill, as the title indicates, authorizes the President to control the anchorage and movement of foreign-flag vessels in waters of the United States. It permits the search of the ships at anchor and otherwise in our waters, particularly during this emergency. Under the present statute before the President or any of the executive branches can make these searches the President must declare a national emergency or there must have been a declaration of war by Congress. This bill permits the President or his agents to make these searches, particularly to guard against, shall we say, Trojan horse ships bringing in atomic bombs or facilities for bacteriological warfare, when the security of the United States is endangered. His opinion as to danger to our security suffices.

The bill was reported out unanimously by the Committee on the Judiciary. The executive branch is very anxious to have this bill enacted into law to safeguard the coastal cities of the United States on the Gulf of Mexico, the Pacific, and the Atlantic.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Will the Coast Guard do the searching?

Mr. CELLER. The Coast Guard and Customs will do the searching.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachuetts. I yield.

Mr. McCORMACK. May I say that Mr. Peyton Ford, who is assistant to the Attorney General called me up the other day and said that this was a bill of vital importance, the immediate passage of which is imperative.

Mr. CELLER. The gentleman from Massachusetts probably recalls that only a few days ago five British ships en route to Korea were sabotaged due to the failure of proper inspection. The Kremlin undoubtedly has urged a worldwide campaign of sabotage. The party line has openly urged comrades and fellow travelers everywhere to disrupt railroads, ships and weapons and equipment bound for Korea. We must be vigilant. All ships, therefore, must be properly inspected and searched. This bill gives adequate power so to do in the present emergency. The power granted can be ended by passage of a concurrent resolution of both Houses.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. As I understand, the committee was unanimous in its report?

Mr. CELLER. Yes.

Mr. CANFIELD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I yield.

Mr. CANFIELD. Mr. Speaker, this situation emphasizes the importance of the Coast Guard Reserve for which the House voted in May.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 1 of title II of the act of June 15, 1917 (40 Stat. 217; U. S. C., title 50, sec. 191), is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"Whenever the President finds that the security of the United States is endangered by reason of actual or threatened war, or invasion, or of disturbances or threatened disturbances of the international relations of the United States, the President is authorized to institute such measures and issue rules and regulations—

"(a) to govern the anchorage and movement of any foreign-flag vessels in the territorial waters of the United States, to inspect such vessels at any time, to place guards thereon, and, if necessary in his opinion in order to secure such vessels from damage or injury, or to prevent damage or injury to any harbor or waters of the United States, or to secure the observance of rights and obligations of the United States, may take for such purposes full possession and control of such vessels and remove therefrom the officers and crew thereof, and all other persons not especially authorized by him to go or remain on board thereof;

"(b) to safeguard against destruction, loss, or injury from sabotage or other subversive acts, accidents, or other causes of similar nature, vessels, harbors, ports, and waterfront facilities in the United States, the Canal Zone, and all territory and water, continental or insular, subject to the jurisdiction of the United States.

"Any appropriation available to any of the executive departments shall be available to carry out the provisions of this paragraph."

SEC. 2. Section 4 of title II of the act of June 15, 1917 (40 Stat. 220; U. S. C., title 50, sec. 194), is amended to read as follows:

"The President may employ such departments, agencies, officers, or instrumentalities of the United States as he may deem necessary to carry out the purpose of this title."

SEC. 3. Section 2 of title II of the act of June 15, 1917 (40 Stat. 220; U. S. C., title 50, sec. 192), as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following subsection:

"(a) If any other person knowingly fails to comply with any regulation or rule issued or order given under the provisions of this title, or knowingly obstructs or interferes with the exercise of any power conferred by this title, he shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than 10 years and may, at the discretion of the court, be fined not more than $10,000."

SEC. 4. The provisions of this act shall expire on such date as may be specified by concurrent resolution of the two Houses of Congress.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 1, line 8 after the word "invasion" insert "or insurrection, or subversive activity,".

Page 3, line 2, strike out the word "paragraph" and insert the word "title."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (S. 3859) to authorize the President to control the anchorage and movement of foreign-flag vessels in waters of the United States when the national security of the United States is endangered, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 1 of title II of the act of June 15, 1917 (40 Stat. 217; U. S. C., title 50, sec. 191), is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

Any appropriation available to any of the executive departments shall be available to carry out the provisions of this paragraph."

SEC. 2. Section 4 of title II of the act of June 15, 1917 (40 Stat. 220; U. S. C., title 50, sec. 194), is amended to read as follows:

"The President may employ such departments, agencies, officers, or instrumentalities of the United States as he may deem necessary to carry out the purpose of this title."

SEC. 3. Section 2 of title II of the act of June 15, 1917 (40 Stat. 220; U. S. C., title 50, sec. 192), as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following subsection:

SEC. 4. The provisions of this act shall expire on such date as may be specified by concurrent resolution of the two Houses of Congress.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CELLER, of New York: Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the provisions of the bill H. R. 9215, as amended.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The proceedings by which the bill (H. R. 9215) to authorize the President to control the anchorage and movement of foreign-flag vessels in waters of the United States when the national security of the United States is endangered, and for other purposes, was passed were vacated and that bill laid on the table.

EXEMPTING COUNSEL EMPLOYED BY CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 510) to exempt certain counsel employed by committee from certain Federal laws under Special Committee on Campaign Expenditures, 1950.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman explain the resolution?

Mr. CELLER. This is the usual resolution that exempts counsel employed by congressional committees from certain proscriptions whereby they cannot within a designated period file claims or represent claimants against the Government.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I withdraw my reservation of objection, Mr. Speaker.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That service or employment of persons as attorneys on a temporary basis prior to January 3, 1951, to assist the Special Committee on Campaign Expenditures, 1950, of the House of Representatives, pursuant to House Resolution 635 agreed to June 30, 1950, shall not be considered as service or employment bringing such persons within the provisions of section 281, 283, or 285, of title 18 of the United States Code, or of any other Federal law imposing restrictions, requirements, or penalties in relation to the employment of persons, the performance of service, or the payment or receipt of compensation in connection with any claim, proceeding, or matter involving the United States.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

STATEMENT

The purposes of the bill are adequately stated in the reports of the Judiciary Committees of the respective Houses. Briefly stated, they are to authorize and empower the heads of certain of the Government departments and agencies to cancel, in their discretion, a number of patent licenses which were granted to the Government during the war on a royalty-free or reduced royalty basis. In most instances the grants were inspired by patriotic motives and were for the duration of the war. However, few if any of the patentees intended their grants to go beyond the period of actual hostilities. Since the United States is still in a state of war from a technical standpoint, and since the agency heads are without power to cancel any of the licenses in order to do equity to the patentees, this legislation became imperative.

Several amendments were made to the bill as introduced. Whereas the House adopted an amendment giving the agency heads the power to modify as well as cancel such licenses, the Senate conferees successfully urged their view that the power to cancel included, in effect, the power to modify by means of cancellation followed by a new contract in modified form.

The conferees agreed to accept the House language defining the period during which the licenses were granted to be "subsequent to September 9, 1939", instead of "during World War II", the latter period being possibly susceptible to varying interpretations.

Again, the conferees elected to make the relief applicable not only to royalty-free license agreements, but as well to those involving a reduced or nominal royalty.

Finally, because of the foregoing amendments, an accommodating change in the title of the bill became indicated and this the conferees agreed upon.

Managers on the Part of the House.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. MASON asked and was given permission to address the House for 20 minutes on Monday next following the legislative business of the day and any special orders heretofore entered.

Mr. CANFIELD asked and was given permission to address the House for 5 minutes today following the legislative program and any special orders heretofore entered.

WHAT IS THE POLICY OF THE ADMINISTRATION?

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I am deeply concerned and interested as a Representative in our Government. I have a right to be—being an elected Representative. I have been trying to find out what the American policy is in reference to the other nations of the world.

Mr. Speaker, I cannot get that information, and I would like to know why. I have asked from members of the Foreign Affairs Committee, from members of the Armed Services Committee, and other Members of Congress. My problem is, Mr. Speaker, What is our policy?

Who started us in Korea? We know the answer: Mr. Truman.

Will other nations do their share in manpower in the Korean fight? Will we have to furnish the money, men, and munitions? After Korea, what?

If the Communists break out in Formosa, will we alone defend it?

If the Communists break out in Greece, will we alone defend it?

If the Communists break out in Africa, will we interfere?

Let the United Nations act—not Mr. Truman.

If countries in Europe or Asia or Africa or Australia or South America, what right have we to send an army into those countries and interfere with their internal strife?

We should attend to our own business, and if we do that we have a real job.

Why sacrifice American men to save the world—and do it alone?

Why should we let the President or the State Department commit us to sacrifices unlimited. Congress, it is up to you to stop it. This New Deal of the United States is a raw deal for the American citizens and Government.

I beg of you, Mr. Speaker and leaders of this Democratic Party—give us your policy, your plans, your aims. Get us out of the dark, destruction and disgrace of war into the realm of peace in the world. Pray to Almighty God for guidance that men can live as brothers all over the world. Stop killing our boys. Stop, look, listen, and pray.

Get a plan with the UN for the world, not the United States alone.

MOBILIZATION PLANNING ACT OF 1950

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD with regard to my introduction today of the Mobilization Planning Act of 1950.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. Speaker, I am today introducing the Mobilization Planning Act of 1950 to provide for a Mobilization Production Board to coordinate essential production, other than agricultural, and transportation and communications facilities for the national security and to see to the balancing of production between what is required for the Armed Forces, civilian needs and overseas aid and cooperation. This measure also establishes in the executive branch a food conservation agency to advise consumers with respect to the most efficient utilization of our food and fiber supply, to consult with the Secretary of Agriculture, who now has the necessary powers with respect to production, regarding the needs and requirements of foods and fibers; to coordinate the consumers' services in the various agencies of the Federal Government which are now duplicating and often confusing and contradictory and to cooperate with States and municipalities.

The least that we can do under the present need for marshaling the full national effort so eloquently outlined in the testimony of Bernard Baruch before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee yesterday is to give the direction and management to the whole program commensurate with its scope and seriousness. Our experience in World War II showed that the way to get America's best brains to work was through a planning board of this kind. The most able men from the ranks of labor, business, and agriculture often hesitate to take a Government job, but such a board is considered in a separate category by such men, first because it is a temporary agency to meet a great national emergency and second because it represents a traditional pattern for marshalling just that kind of skill and ability.

I urge a food conservation agency principally as a consumers' service but also to effect some organization of sellers and distributors, because prayers and exhortations that people shall not hoard or engage in panic buying are apparently inadequate to do the job. Ninety percent of the people will cooperate but there is always the unscrupulous 10 percent. Hence, to deal with serious price rises and runs on commodities while the debate as to whether we should have rationing and price control goes on, we must have some agency which can speak with the voice of government and get the people together for their own protection against economic disaster.

The text of the joint resolution follows:

Joint resolution to provide for the appointment by the President of a Mobilization Production Board and a Food Conservation Agency

Resolved, etc., That the President is hereby authorized to appoint a Mobilization Production Board with authority to coordinate the activities of Government, trade, industry, labor, agriculture, and consumers in the preparation by the United States of adequate equipment and facilities for the national security and in the balancing of essential production (other than agricultural production) and of transportation and communications facilities, between what is required for the Armed Forces, civilian needs, and overseas aid and cooperation. The Board shall have such authority with respect to commodities in short supply, producers' and processors' materials and transportation and communications facilities and services as shall be authorized by law, or as shall be delegated to the Board by the President.

SEC. 2. The President is authorized to establish in the executive branch of the Federal Government a Food Conservation Agency which shall be authorized to advise consumers with respect to the most efficient utilization of our food and fiber supply, to consult with the Secretary of Agriculture with respect to the needs and requirements of foods and fibers, to coordinate the consumers' services in the various agencies of the Federal Government, to cooperate with States and municipalities in pursuance of these purposes and to make recommendations to the President and the Congress thereon.

SEC. 3. The President is requested to make recommendations to the Congress for the enactment of such measures with respect to the accomplishment of the purposes set forth in this act as he may deem appropriate.

SEC. 4. There are hereby authorized to be appropriated from moneys in the Treasury otherwise unappropriated, such sums as may be required for the execution of this act.

SEC. 5. This act shall be known as the Mobilization Planning Act of 1950.

THE SUGAR SUPPLY

Mr. HOWELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Mr. HOWELL. Mr. Speaker, last Wednesday night the President spoke to the American people on the present international crisis. In that address, he made a direct appeal to the American housewives not to hoard food. He showed clearly and conclusively that hoarding of food by the citizens of the country would only create artificial shortages, upset the national economy, and consequently impede our war effort. The President made reference to one particular commodity, namely sugar. He stated that in Cuba, where the United States gets most of its sugar, there is a surplus. And yet, every day since the President's speech, reports from various sections of the country indicate that more and more people are hoarding sugar.

Yesterday, a report on the front page of one of Washington's newspapers illustrated the attitude which many people have adopted in the present emergency. A southeast grocer put sugar on sale at double the regular price for 5-pound bags. The grocer sold 800 pounds within 4 hours. The next day this same grocer put sugar back at the regular price and sold about one-third as much as he did the previous day.

This morning it has been reported that the citizens of Elkins, W. Va.—a town of less than 1,000 population—purchased enough sugar in the last 24 hours to provide every man, woman, and child with 3 pounds of the product. It seems apparent that the price of a commodity is not the concern of our people. If they want something, they will buy it, regardless of the inflationary effects of hoarding and regardless of the strong appeal made by their President not to create artificial shortages.

Mr. Speaker, the Dun & Bradstreet wholesale food price index has gone up 9 percent since the start of the Korean war. If this continues, food prices will spiral to unprecedented heights and inflation will be rampant by the fall. This is a problem which we must solve now before it becomes uncontrollable. The issue we face in the present world crisis is not Government controls; it is military defeat abroad and inflation at home. Let us not invite inflation by adopting a powder-puff attitude toward the inflationary bud. Let us nip it before it blooms and forces prices to skyrocket and essential commodities to become scarce.

I think it is the time to make an immediate review of our economic mobilization and adopt legislation—price controls, if necessary—to guard us against the evil consequences of runaway inflation.

TEMPORARY APPOINTMENT OF COMMISSIONERS IN BANKRUPTCY

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Speaker, by authority of the Committee on the Judiciary I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 9171) to provide for the temporary appointment of commissioners in bankruptcy, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman from Alabama kindly explain the need, the emergency for this legislation?

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Speaker, I have cleared this with the leadership on both sides. The unanimous vote of all the Members present this morning of the House Committee on the Judiciary has authorized me to ask unanimous consent to consider this bill out of order, it not having been on the calendar for three legislative days.

The need for this request is the emergency character of a situation in West Virginia where two large coal mines have been forced into bankruptcy and where the referee in bankruptcy, the only one having jurisdiction, has had a heart attack and has been confined to his bed, according to the statement before our committee in the form of the testimony of Senator KILGORE, of West Virginia. Therefore they cannot have a meeting of creditors to elect a trustee in bankruptcy to take charge of and conserve the assets of these companies.

This bill is a substitute for a bill which was introduced by Senator KILGORE and by our distinguished chairman, the gentleman from New York [Mr. CELLER], to appoint new temporary referees in such emergency cases all over the Nation. This bill is a substitute and was introduced by the gentleman from New York [Mr. CELLER], H. R. 9171, and provides that, instead of appointing new referees, we simply authorize the district court that appointed the referee originally, also the presiding judge of the circuit court of appeals of that circuit, as well as the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, so that we may have the benefit of the pool of referees in bankruptcy all over the Nation to draw from and send in here and wherever needed, who are now on a salary basis, to take care of such emergency cases. This bill will be quicker and just as effective and will give the relief needed in West Virginia and anywhere else where such an emergency may exist.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOBBS. Of course, sir, I am always delighted to yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. MICHENER. I agree with the gentleman, I think the bill should pass. A number of Members have read the original Kilgore bill. This is an entirely different approach. Personally I am opposed to the original Kilgore bill. As was so well stated by our subcommittee chairman, there is need for a temporary referee in bankruptcy in West Virginia right now. The regular referee is sick.

I am opposed to appointing any new or additional referees in bankruptcy. This bill will make it possible, through the machinery set up in the substitute bill, to use referees now available throughout the United States, to do the job that should be done in West Virginia right now.

Mr. HOBBS. The distinguished gentleman from Michigan has well stated the unanimous opinion of the Subcommittee on Bankruptcy, as well as the full Committee on the Judiciary. This additional word should probably be said. We have adopted in this bill the same machinery which was set up for the transfer or designation of judges and United States attorneys to districts in distress. It is very similar though it applies only to referees in bankruptcy. We lacked that part of the machinery which we found so necessary in this particular case.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 43 of the act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", approved July 1, 1898, as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"d. Whenever the office of a referee is vacant the judge or the chief judge of the district may, with the approval of the Director as to the necessity therefor, appoint temporarily a referee who shall serve at such salary as may be fixed by the Director to serve until the conference shall have acted with reference to the vacancy as provided by section 43b. Whenever a referee is temporarily absent or unable because of illness or for other reasons to act, the judge or the chief judge of the district may, with the approval of the Director as to the necessity therefor, appoint temporarily a referee who shall serve at such salary and for such period of time as may be fixed by the Director. Any salary fixed pursuant to this subsection shall be subject to the limitations prescribed by section 40 of this act."

With the following committee amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the following:

"That subdivision c of section 43 of an act entitled 'An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States,' approved July 1, 1898, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

" 'c. Whenever the office of a referee is vacant or its occupant is temporarily absent or disqualified to act, or whenever the expeditious transaction of the business of the court or courts of bankruptcy may require, the judge, or any one of the judges, may act; or the judge or the chief judge of the district may designate and assign temporarily any referee of the district to act; or the chief judge of the circuit may designate and assign temporarily one or more referees within the circuit to act upon presentation of a certificate of necessity by the judge or chief judge of the district wherein the need arises, or the chief judge of the circuit may order that pending cases be rereferred and future cases referred to one or more referees within the circuit; or the Chief Justice of the United States may designate and assign temporarily a referee from another circuit to act upon presentation of a certificate of necessity by the chief judge of the circuit wherein the need arises. "

AMENDMENTS TO NATIONAL SERVICE LIFE INSURANCE ACT

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 8235) to amend further the National Service Life Insurance Act of 1940, as amended.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. FORD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, in light of the fact that several of our great national veterans' organizations have taken the stand that there should be no further veterans' legislation of major importance for the time being during the present emergency, and in light of the fact that this bill, as approved, would not serve the best interests of the policyholders, according to the Veterans' Administration, I withdraw my reservation of objection and ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

AMEND ACT GRANTING LAND TO THE CITY OF ALBUQUERQUE

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Be it enacted, etc., That title 18, United State Code, section 220, is amended to read as follows:

"§ 220. Receipt of commissions or gifts for procuring loans

"Whoever, being an officer, director, employee, agent, or attorney of a member bank of the Federal Reserve System, a Federal intermediate credit bank, a National Agricultural Credit Corporation, a national banking association, or any bank, banking association, trust company, or other banking institution, the deposits of which are insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, except as provided by law, stipulates for or receives or consents or agrees to receive any fee, commission, gift, or thing of value, from any person, firm, or corporation, for procuring or endeavoring to procure for such person, firm, or corporation, or for any other person, firm, or corporation, from any such bank, corporation, association, company, or institution, any loan or extension or renewal of loan or substitution of security, or the purchase or discount or acceptance of any paper, note, draft, check, or bill of exchange by any such bank, corporation, association, company, or institution, shall be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned not more than 1 year, or both."

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CUSTODIAL SERVICE, POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT

AMENDMENT OF TRADING WITH THE ENEMY ACT

The Clerk called the bill (S. 603) to amend the Trading With the Enemy Act.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. O'HARA of Minnesota. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, application has been made to the Committee on Rules for a rule on this bill. It involves approximately $3,000,000. Its purposes are praiseworthy, but some of the language in the bill is definitely objectionable, and it should not be passed on the Consent Calendar. Therefore I am constrained to object.

Mr. RICH. I object, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. BENNETT of Michigan. I object, Mr. Speaker.

DISSEMINATION OF TECHNOLOGICAL INFORMATION TO INDUSTRY

PRACTITIONERS BEFORE ADMINISTRATIVE AGENCIES

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 8201) to protect the public with respect to practitioners before administrative agencies.

Mr. JAVITS. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALTER] tell us if this bill now satisfies the accountants; that is, certified and uncertified accountants?

Mr. WALTER. There is no question about that. The bill in its present form deals only with the practice by attorneys at law before the agencies. It is designed to make it possible for lawyers all over the country, once they have been admitted to practice before a Federal agency, to practice before every agency, instead of being required to obtain the necessary credentials in order to practice before each agency before which they may wish to appear.

Mr. JAVITS. So it does not affect the accountants?

Mr. WALTER. It does not.

Mr. GROSS. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, may I say to the gentleman from Pennsylvania that the accountants in the State of Iowa and traffic managers have not withdrawn their objection to this bill, neither has the Texas Association of Public Accountants.

Mr. WALTER. I have in my files a letter from the officials of the accountants' organization in which they state they have no objection whatsoever to the enactment of this legislation.

Mr. GRAHAM. I have a similar letter.

Mr. WALTER. Official action was taken at a recent convention.

Mr. MICHENER. That was the understanding of the committtee when the bill was reported out.

Mr. WALTER. There is no question about it.

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Speaker, I desire to submit in substantiation of my preceding remarks the following letter from the Texas Association of Public Accountants, this letter being signed by the president of that association, Mr. L. H. Anderson:

TEXAS ASSOCIATION OF PUBLIC ACCOUNTANTS,
Midland, Tex., June 26, 1950.

Hon. H. R. GROSS,
House of Representatives,
Washington, D. C.

SIR: The Texas Association of Public Accountants wishes you to know that they appreciate the part you took in the debate on H. R. 4446 on the House floor on March 15, 1950. I am sure that the Public Accountants of your State will also thank you for the part you played in throwing the light of day on legislation of this type.

I am enclosing a copy of my letter to Hon. EMANUEL CELLER, chairman, Committee on the Judiciary, in which are pointed out our objections to H. R. 8201, which it is understood supersedes H. R. 4446. Both bills are cut out of the same cloth and after the same pattern, albeit the wording is somewhat different. It is beginning to look as though the life of a public accountant is simply made up of one bill after another, but then it has been aptly said that eternal vigilance is the price of liberty.

I wish to emphatically point out that the so-called "Committee of the American Institute of Accountants" does not speak for the public accountants of the State of Texas. As pointed out in my letter to Chairman CELLER we are opposed to this type of legislation.

Thanking you for your able assistance, I am

Respectfully,
L. H. ANDERSON, President.

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. WALTER. I object, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. GROSS. I object, Mr. Speaker.

AMENDING INTERSTATE COMMERCE ACT

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 5967) to amend the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, to clarify the status of freight forwarders and their relationship with motor common carriers.

Mr. FORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

REIMBURSEMENT OF BURIAL EXPENSES FOR PHILIPPINE MILITARY FORCES

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 8576) to provide reimbursement of expenses incurred in connection with the burial of those who served in the military forces of the Commonwealth of the Philippines while such forces were in the Armed Forces of the United States pursuant to the military order of the President of the United States, dated July 26, 1941.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs is authorized to furnish a flag to drape the casket and to pay a sum not exceeding 150 Philippine pesos for the burial and funeral expenses and transportation of the body (including preparation of the body) of any person who served in the organized military forces of the Commonwealth of the Philippines while such forces were in the service of the Armed Forces of the United States pursuant to the military order of the President of the United States, dated July 26, 1941, including among such military forces organized guerrilla forces under commanders appointed, designated, or subsequently recognized by the Commander in Chief, Southwest Pacific Area, or other competent authority in the Army of the United States, and who dies, or has died, after separation from such service under conditions other than dishonorable. Payments under this act shall be subject to the applicable provisions of Veterans Regulation No. 9 (a), as amended, except that in case any such person has died heretofore, the time for filing claim for reimbursement of such expenses shall be extended until 2 years after the date of this enactment.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AMENDING SECTION 101 (b), DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE ORGANIC ACT OF 1944

"The Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to cooperate with State authorities and with the authorities of the District of Columbia, Alaska, Hawaii, and Puerto Rico in the administration of regulations for the improvement of poultry, poultry products, and hatcheries."

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PREVENTING ENTRY OF CERTAIN GIANT SNAILS

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 6242) to prevent the entry of certain giant snails into the United States.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to know whether the gentleman sponsoring this bill would not include, besides snails, Communists and radicals. If he did, then I think he would probably get a pretty good bill. There are a great many objectionable things coming into the United States besides snails. I wonder if the gentleman from North Carolina would include Communists and radicals.

Mr. COOLEY. I would not have any objection to that myself.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, since the gentleman from North Carolina has no objection, I withdraw my objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of Agriculture shall establish such facilities for, and prescribe such regulations governing, the inspection and treatment of produce, baggage, salvaged war materials, and other goods entering the United States from areas infested with snails of the species Achatina fulica, as he considers necessary to prevent the entry of such snails into the United States. Whoever violates any such regulation or imports such a snail into the United States (except for experimental or scientific purposes under special permit from the Secretary of Agriculture) shall be fined not more than $500 or imprisoned not more than 1 year, or both. The term "United States," as used in this act in a territorial sense, means the 48 States, the District of Columbia, the possessions of the United States (except those which the Secretary of Agriculture finds are infested with such snails), and the Canal Zone.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RETURN OF MEXICAN FLAGS

The Clerk called the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 133) authorizing the return to Mexico of the flags, standards, colors, and emblems that were captured by the United States in the Mexican War.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

Mr. HOWELL. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to point out that this legislation originated with the American Legion Post No. 11 in my district, and as a result of the resolution adopted by the American Legion national convention last year I introduced on September 29 of last year a similar bill (H. R. 6241). I think a gesture of this sort will go far toward creating and improving good relations between our country and the Republic of Mexico.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the President is authorized to cause to be delivered to the Government of the Republic of Mexico, with such escort and such appropriate ceremony as he shall deem proper, the flags, standards, colors, and emblems of that country which were captured by the military forces of the United States in the Mexican War of 1843–48 and are now in the custody of the National Military Establishment.

TO ACQUIRE LANDS FOR THE GEOLOGICAL SURVEY

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 4915) to amend the act of December 24, 1942 (56 Stat. 1086; 43 U. S. C., sec. 36b), entitled "An act to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to acquire lands or interest in lands for the Geological Survey."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. FORD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the gentleman from Florida if there is any limitation in this legislation as to the amount of land that can be acquired.

Mr. PETERSON. Not to exceed 10 acres.

Mr. FORD. Not to exceed 10 acres for any one project?

Mr. PETERSON. For any one project.

Mr. FORD. Are there any limitations on the number of projects?

Mr. PETERSON. No. Under the present law they have a right to acquire 10 acres now, when they use it for stream gaging; to make installations for stream gaging, but they do not have a right to acquire wells for ground-water observation. They need that occasionally. It would not be widespread, but in certain areas. Much of it is done voluntarily, but in some instances they might have to buy a well. We limited it to 10 acres. We also cut out the condemnation authorization.

Mr. FORD. I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act of December 24, 1942 (ch. 822, 56 Stat. 1086), is hereby amended to read as follows:

"That the Secretary of the Interior may, on behalf of the United States and for use by the Geological Survey in gaging streams and underground water resources, acquire lands by donation or when funds have been appropriated by Congress by purchase or condemnation, but not in excess of 10 acres for any one stream gaging station or observation well site. For the same purpose the Secretary of the Interior may obtain easements, licenses, rights-of-way, and leases limited to run for such a period of time or term of years as may be required for the effective performance of the function of gaging streams and underground water resources: Provided, That nothing in this act shall be construed as affecting or intended to affect or to in any way interfere with the laws of any State or Territory relating to the control, appropriation, use, or distribution of water used in irrigation, or any vested right acquired thereunder, and the Secretary of the Interior, in carrying out the provisions of this act, shall proceed in conformity with such laws, and nothing in this act shall in any way affect any right of any State or of the Federal Government or of any landowner, appropriator, or user of water in, to, or from any interstate stream or the waters thereof."

APPROVING CONTRACT NEGOTIATED WITH THE SOUTH CACHE WATER USERS' ASSOCIATION

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 8961) to approve a contract negotiated with the South Cache Water Users' Association, to authorize its execution, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. FORD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the gentleman from Utah [Mr. GRANGER], who I understand made a report on the legislation, several questions.

What percentage of these reclamation projects similar to this one and the next one are in default in this manner?

Mr. GRANGER. No one of these projects is in default. I cannot answer the gentleman's question, but these are not in default.

Mr. FORD. As I read the report, it says they are behind in their payments. Is that not correct?

Mr. GRANGER. No, that is not correct. The payments on these contracts are current at the present time.

All these supplemental contracts do is extend the time of payment. The Government does not lose any of its money whatsoever.

Mr. FORD. Under present law they must be repaid within 40 years.

Mr. GRANGER. That is right.

Mr. FORD. Under this particular legislation the time for payment will be extended 16 years. Is that right?

Mr. GRANGER. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. FORD. But the gentleman cannot inform me how many of these contracts are in this condition.

Mr. GRANGER. Perhaps the chairman of the Committee on Public Lands could tell the gentleman; I could not; I am sorry.

Mr. PETERSON. Very few have come to our attention. We extended a few in the Northwest a while ago. Undoubtedly there are some, but they usually do not call them to the attention of the committee until they get in rather bad trouble.

Mr. FORD. What is the life expectancy of this and other similar projects? Will it be at least 56 years?

Mr. GRANGER. Yes; this will be 56 years. I may say to the gentleman that this project was built during depression days, and in their overanxiety to make work projects they anticipated that they were going to sell more water than they actually did; so the water is still for sale, and we hope it will be sold. If it is sold, the number of years in the contract will be reduced. In this case, we would not be relieving them of any part of their obligation, but just extending the time within which they can pay out.

Mr. FORD. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the contract dated May 24, 1950, negotiated by the Secretary of the Interior with the South Cache Water Users' Association pursuant to subsection (a) of section 7 of the Reclamation Project Act of 1939 (53 Stat. 1187), is approved, and the Secretary is hereby authorized to execute it on behalf of the United States.

TERM OF UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT AT EUGENE, OREG.

The Clerk called the bill (S. 2314) to provide for holding a term of the United States District Court for the District of Oregon at Eugene.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary or someone explain this bill briefly? The point in which I am interested is whether or not if the bill passes it will require the building of a Federal courthouse.

Mr. CELLER. My information is that it will not.

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. I notice from the information furnished me that there is no report from the Administrative Office of the United States Courts or from the Bureau of the Budget.

Mr. CELLER. My understanding is that the Administrative Office of the United States courts has approved the bill. I do not know whether it has been approved by the Bureau of the Budget.

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Was there testimony before the gentleman's committee to the effect that the Administrative Office approved the bill?

Mr. CELLER. Yes; that is my understanding. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. LANE] a member of the subcommittee can answer the gentleman more specifically, but his understanding was that it was approved by the Administrator, Mr. Chandler, and his staff.

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

The Clerk called the bill (S. 442) to amend the Air Commerce Act of 1926 (44 Stat. 568), as amended, to provide for the application to civil air navigation of laws and regulations related to animal and plant quarantine, and for other purposes.

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, and I do not intend to object in this particular instance, I would like to call the attention of the members of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce that according to the committee's own statement the bill has the approval of the Civil Aeronautics Board, the Department of the Interior, the Department of Agriculture, and the Bureau of the Budget. However there are no departmental reports accompanying the report on the bill. We would like to have these reports in the future and not have to rely upon the meager and scanty report which the committee has seen fit to file with this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Air Commerce Act of 1926 (44 Stat. 568), as amended, is hereby further amended by adding to section 7, after paragraph (d) thereof, a new paragraph reading as follows:

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The Clerk called the bill (S. 2875) to extend for a period of 5 years the time for appropriating and expending funds to carry out the Federal Airport Act.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

There was no objection.

AMENDING THE CIVIL AERONAUTICS ACT OF 1938

The Clerk called the bill (S. 3377) to amend the Civil Aeronautics Act of 1938, as amended.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. FORD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object. I have no intention of objecting. However, I want to emphasize what was said by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. CUNNINGHAM]. In this case there are no departmental reports whatsoever. I think the departments should be put on record in these cases and that we on the Consent Calendar should not be expected to approve legislation unless there are departmental reports. Hereafter, we expect to follow that policy.

I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 902 (b) of the Civil Aeronautics Act of 1938, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"(b) Any person who knowingly and willfully forges, counterfeits, alters, or falsely makes any certificate authorized to be issued under this act, or knowingly uses or attempts to use any such fraudulent certificate, and any person who knowingly and willfully displays or causes to be displayed on any aircraft, any marks that are false or misleading as to the nationality or registration of the aircraft, shall be subject to a fine of not exceeding $1,000 or to imprisonment not exceeding 3 years, or to both such fine and imprisonment."

The bill was ordered to be read the third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AUTHORIZING CERTAIN COAST GUARD AND PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE PERSONNEL TO ACCEPT GIFTS TENDERED BY GREAT BRITAIN AND THE GREENLAND ADMINISTRATION

The Clerk called the bill (S. 2240) to authorize certain personnel and former personnel of the United States Coast Guard and the United States Public Health Service to accept certain gifts tendered by foreign governments.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I find the same situation in regard to departmental reports existing with reference to S. 2240 as prevailed with S. 3377 and S. 4422. S. 3377 is the one which the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORD] commented upon. I insist that more care should be taken in the future in giving us departmental reports. Otherwise we will be forced to object to these bills or have them passed over without prejudice.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, will someone kindly explain what are these gifts from foreign governments.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. I may be able to be of some assistance by saying that as far as I know the bill is intended to authorize the commanding officer of the Coast Guard icebreaker to accept from the Greenland Government a silver box tendered in recognition of services rendered to distressed motor schooners of the Greenland administration. It also authorizes the crew of the United States Coast Guard seaplane and a Public Health Service physician who was flying with the plane to accept from the British Ministry of Transport a piece of plate and a cigarette case, tendered in recognition of service rendered in recovering an injured seaman from the British vessel.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Does the gentleman know whether there was any precedent for these gifts?

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. I do not know. The only information I have is what I get from the report, because the Treasury Department has apparently approved the bill and the Justice Department had no comment to make thereon.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That Commander John R. Kurcheski, United States Coast Guard, is hereby authorized to accept such gift as has been tendered him as of the date of the approval of this act by the Greenland administration in appreciation of services rendered certain distressed motor schooners of the Greenland administration; and that the following-named members and former members of the United States Coast Guard and United States Public Health Service are hereby authorized to accept such gifts as have been tendered them as of the date of approval of this act by the Government of Great Britain in appreciation of services rendered in removing an injured seaman from the British vessel Silver Sandal for treatment ashore: Lt. (jg) Charles Ethelbert Mac Dowell, United States Coast Guard; Lt. (jg) Rufus Sizer Drury, United States Coast Guard; Senior Assistant Surgeon (Reserve) Pasquale Joseph Ciccone, United States Public Health Service; Ralph Oscar Douglas, chief aviation machinist's mate, United States Coast Guard; Leo Ira Thompson, chief aviation machinist's mate, United States Coast Guard; Richard Lewis Hall, aviation electronicsman, first class, United States Coast Guard; Quincy Carl Frazier, aviation electronicsman, first class, United States Coast Guard; Jack Henry McElyea, aviation ordnanceman, second class, United States Coast Guard; Walter Lamar Pierce, aviation structural mechanic, second class, United States Coast Guard; and Wade Columbus Midkiff, seaman, United States Coast Guard. The Department of State is hereby authorized to deliver to the above-mentioned persons the gifts tendered them by the administration of Greenland and the Government of Great Britain, respectively.

SEC. 2. The revision of boundaries of the national monument, as authorized in sections 1 and 5 of this act, shall be accomplished by the issuance, by the Secretary of the Interior, of an appropriate order, or orders, such order or orders to be effective upon publication in the Federal Register: Provided, That federally owned land under the administrative jurisdiction of any other department or agency of the Federal Government shall be included within the monument only with the approval of the head of such department or agency.

SEC. 3. Administrative jurisdiction over all Federal lands eliminated from the monument, by the issuance of an order or orders of the Secretary of the Interior, is hereby transferred to the Secretary of Agriculture for use, administration, and disposition in accordance with the provisions of title III of the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act and the related provisions of title IV thereof: Provided, That all of such lands formerly set apart and reserved from the public domain shall be subject to the mining and mineralsleasing laws: And provided further, That any disposition of any such lands formerly set apart and reserved from the public domain shall be evidenced by patents issued by the Secretary of the Interior.

In order that exchanges of land may be effected for the purposes of this act, the Secretary of the Interior is authorized, in his discretion, to accept, on behalf of the United States, title to any land or interests in land within the exterior boundaries of the Badlands National Monument as revised pursuant to this act, and, in exchange therefor, with the approval and concurrence of the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of the Interior may patent lands of approximately equal value which were formerly set apart and reserved from the public domain within the Badlands Fall River soil conservation project, SD–LU–1. In effectuating such exchanges, in lieu of conveyances by the Secretary of the Interior, the Secretary of Agriculture may convey lands of approximately equal value within said project which have been acquired heretofore by the United States. All such exchanges shall, in all other respects, be considered as exchanges under the provisions of section 32c, title III, of the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act and shall otherwise be in accordance with the provisions of said act, except that, upon acceptance of title to any lands so acquired by the United States under this section, such lands and any other lands acquired otherwise by the United States within the monument boundaries shall be a part of that area. In consummating land exchanges hereunder upon an equitable basis, patents and instruments of conveyance may be issued, and property may be accepted, by the United States, subject to such reservations as may be necessary or in the public interest.

SEC. 5. Not to exceed four thousand acres of the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation in the Sheep Mountain area thereof adjacent to the monument may be included within the national monument by one of the following methods subject to the approval of any Federal agency holding leases with respect to such lands: (a) with the consent of the Tribal Council of the Oglala Sioux Tribe of Indians of the Pine Ridge Reservation, State of South Dakota, and on such terms and conconditions as are mutually satisfactory to the said tribal council and to the Secretary of the Interior; or (b) with the consent of the said tribal council, through the conveyance by the Secretary of the Interior to the said Oglala Sioux Tribe of Indians of private lands within the said Indian reservation, which he is hereby authorized to acquire in such manner and through such agency of the Department of the Interior as he may deem advisable, in exchange for tribal lands of approximately equal value within the area authorized to be included by this section within the national monument. The Secretary is authorized to execute such deeds or other instruments as may be necessary to effectuate the purposes of this act.

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 8158) to repeal certain laws as they affect the Territory of Alaska.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That hereafter section 1890 of the Revised Statutes (48 U. S. C., sec. 1480), and section 26 of the act of March 3, 1887 (24 Stat. 641 48 U. S. C., sec. 1480a), shall not be applicable to the Territory of Alaska.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

SALE OF CERTAIN INDIAN LANDS SOUTH AND EAST OF THE TONGUE RIVER IN MONTANA

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 8463) to authorize the sale of certain small tracks of Indian land lying to the south and east of the Tongue River in the State of Montana.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior or his duly authorized representative is hereby authorized, with the consent of the Indian owners, to sell certain small tracts of tribal and allotted lands of the Northern Cheyenne Reservation, lying south and east of the Tongue River in the State of Montana. Conveyance shall be made to the purchaser either by properly executed deeds or the issuance of patents in fee. The proceeds from the sale of the tribal lands shall be used by the Northern Cheyenne Tribe to acquire other lands, either Indian or white owned, or interests therein, on the west side of Tongue River within the boundaries of the Northern Cheyenne Reservation.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

LOANS BY REGIONAL AGRICULTURAL CREDIT CORPORATION

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 8613) to authorize loans to make available in any area or region credit formerly made available in such area or region by the Regional Agricultural Credit Corporation.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman explain what kind of loans are contemplated by this bill?

Mr. HORAN. Mr. Speaker, this bill would make it possible for the Farmers Home Administration to reach with responsible loans an area not now being reached in productive agriculture in the United States. The limitations of Public Law 38 which established the Farmers Home Administration and incorporated into that the RACC were of such nature that the Farmers Home Administration could not function as it should in serving producers who, by the nature of their operations require larger blocks of credit to produce a crop.

These will be responsible loans and will be fully repayable to the United States Government, with interest.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Can the gentleman give me an example of the type of loan?

Mr. HORAN. Most of the loans will be in an area where production costs are greater than in the field crop type of farming; it will be for fruit growing, fur farming, and in some instances livestock raising.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

Mr. FORD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I should like to have some further information on the kind of loans. Within the State of Michigan this last year we have had an excessive cherry crop, an excessive peach crop, and an excessive apple crop. Can the gentleman tell me whether or not when the Federal Government went in to make purchases in those instances the money came out of this fund or out of Commodity Credit, or some other fund?

Mr. HORAN. If I follow the gentleman correctly, there is some confusion as to what constitutes a production loan and what constitutes purchases for the school-lunch program or price-support program and things of that sort.

These are production loans, and they have no relationship to purchases for the school-lunch program, and so forth.

Mr. FORD. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

Mr. HORAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill, S. 2996, to authorize loans to make available in any area or region credit formerly made available in such area or region by the Regional Agricultural Credit Corporation, an identical bill which has already passed the Senate, and substitute it for the House bill.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, and I shall not, I concur in the request of the gentleman from Washington that the Senate bill be considered in lieu of the House bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington that the Senate bill be considered in lieu of the House bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That (a) paragraph (2) of subsection (a) of the first section of the act of April 6, 1949 (Public Law 38, 81st Cong.), is amended to read as follows:

"(2) loans to make available to the owners or operators of established farms in any area or region, upon their full personal liability and such reasonable security as may be determined by the Secretary, credit of a type which, beginning in 1941, was made available in such area or region by the Corporation, if the Secretary finds that there is a continued need for such credit and such credit is not readily available from other sources; except that no such loan shall be made (A) after 3 years after the enactment of the 1950 amendment to Public Law 38, (B) to any one borrower at any one time in excess of $10,000, (C) which would increase the total indebtedness of any one borrower under this paragraph to an amount exceeding $20,000 (including principal and accrued interest), and (D) which would increase the aggregate principal amount of the loans outstanding under this paragraph at any one time to an amount exceeding $2,000,000."

(b) This act may be cited as the "1950 amendment to Public Law 38."

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

A similar House bill (H. R. 8613) was laid on the table.

ADDITIONAL ASSISTANT SECRETARIES OF AGRICULTURE

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 8850) to establish two additional offices of Assistant Secretaries of Agriculture and Office of an Administrative Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, and for other purposes.

Mr. H. CARL ANDERSEN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, this would appear to be adding three top officials to the Department of Agriculture in one action. It would appear to me, too, that they will ask us for approximately $100,000 a year to staff these particular offices. In view of that fact and in view of the present war condition we are in, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

CONFERRING JURISDICTION ON THE COURTS OF NEW YORK WITH RESPECT TO CIVIL ACTIONS BETWEEN INDIANS OR TO WHICH INDIANS ARE PARTIES

The Clerk called the bill (S. 192) to confer jurisdiction on the courts of the State of New York with respect to civil actions between Indians or to which Indians are parties.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. MORRIS. Mr. Speaker, I have two amendments to this bill and I ask unanimous consent that they may be reported for the information of the House, if the gentleman will withhold his objection for the moment.

Mr. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. Speaker, I withhold my objection for the moment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MORRIS: Page 1, line 9, beginning with the word "That" strike all language extending through the word "issue" on page 2, line 8, and insert in lieu thereof the following: "That full faith and credit shall be given by such courts to all treaties between the United States and any recognized tribe or tribes of Indians in the State of New York, and in all actions and proceedings with respect to tribal laws and customs between and among reservation Indians full faith and credit shall also be given by such courts to the tribal laws and customs of such tribe or tribes."

Page 3, line 5, before the period, insert a colon and add the following: "Provided further, That nothing herein contained shall be construed as conferring jurisdiction on the courts of the State of New York or making applicable the laws of the State of New York in civil actions involving Indian lands or claims with respect thereto which relate to transactions or events transpiring prior to the effective date of this act."

Mr. MORRIS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to make an explanation following the reading of the proposed amendments. The gentleman from Nebraska will see that the rights of the Indians in regard to any treaties that might have heretofore been made are fully respected by reason of these amendments. There has been objection on the part of some Indians, I would say most of them, maybe all of them that we have heard from in regard to this matter, and the objections, as I recall, all center around the thought that the Indians want to preserve their treaty rights that have heretofore been entered into, most of them many years ago, entered into with the great United States of America.

These amendments will preserve those rights. Then in addition thereto they will preserve their right to go into the United States courts in regard to claims that they might have growing out of any transactions in regard to land dealings and so forth, with the State of New York. In other words, Mr. Speaker, I believe that these particular amendments are such that there really can be no real objection now.

Mr. O'SULLIVAN. This act merely transfers to the State of New York courts the right to determine certain controversies, some of which have been adversely determined in the Federal courts. As I understand it, the objection is that the State of New York is now trying to add an additional forum of their own choosing so that they can try these cases in their own courts instead of in the Federal courts. The trials they had in the Federal courts were not satisfactory, so they want to take them into a court where they can get a little better deal.

Mr. MORRIS. If the gentleman please, may I make this suggestion. This amendment is very short and I will just read it to you, and I think it answers the objection:

Provided further, That nothing herein contained shall be construed as conferring jurisdiction on the courts of the State of New York or making applicable the laws of the State of New York in civil actions involving Indian lands or claims with respect thereto which relate to transactions or events transpiring prior to the effective date of this act.

Mr. O'SULLIVAN. With that in they do not need the law at all. They can go into the Federal court in the first instance, like they have done in the past, and try their claims, whatever they are, in the Federal courts.

Mr. MORRIS. I will say this is to the gentleman that the particular amendment that I have just read is word for word the amendment offered by the Indians themselves through their counsel before our committee.

Mr. O'SULLIVAN. Well, I do not believe that is satisfactory.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to present consideration of the bill?

Mr. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Nebraska?

Mr. MARSHALL. I object, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. YOUNG and Mr. O'SULLIVAN objected.

ACQUIRING PROPERTY OF THE RAINIER NATIONAL PARK CO.

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 1662) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to acquire on behalf of the United States Government all property and facilities of the Rainier National Park Co.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized, in his discretion and under such terms and conditions as he may deem proper, to acquire on behalf of the United States, at a price considered by him to be reasonable, all of the property and facilities of the Rainier National Park Co. within the Mount Rainier National Park used for the purpose of furnishing accommodations and conveniences to the public visiting said park, excluding, however, such facilities of the company as are used in furnishing transportation for the said park.

SEC. 2. The Secretary of the Interior, through the National Park Service, is also authorized to repair and reconstruct the property and facilities acquired in accordance with the provisions of section 1 hereof, and to construct such new facilities as may be necessary to assure adequate summer and winter accommodations for the public visiting the said park.

SEC. 3. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, such sum or sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 2, line 10, strike out "3" and insert "2."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

PROVIDE FOR THE TRANSFER OF CERTAIN LANDS IN FLORIDA

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 8979) to provide for the transfer or quitclaim of title to certain lands in Florida.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior shall, as soon as reasonably possible, make an investigation to determine whether or not certain lands between the shore line of the Gulf of Mexico and section 23 and the east half of section 22 of township 6 south, range 12 west, Tallahassee meridian, Florida, as represented on the official plat approved in April 1834 are unsurveyed public lands. The Secretary shall promptly notify all interested persons of his determination in such manner as he may find appropriate.

SEC. 2. If the Secretary finds any such unsurveyed public lands, he shall cause them to be surveyed. If such lands have not been appropriated under the public-land laws, the Secretary shall appraise such lands and offer them for sale for a period of 30 days at their appraised price to the owners of the adjoining uplands in such section 23 and the east half of section 22.

SEC. 3. If the Secretary determines that the areas investigated under this act are not unsurveyed public lands, he shall, upon request of any adjoining upland owner, issue a quitclaim deed to the owners of adjoining upland for the lands between the original meander line and the shore line, without making a survey.

SEC. 4. For the benefits of this act the ownership of such adjoining uplands shall be determined as of the date of October 2, 1946. Any adjoining upland owner receiving a conveyance of lands under the provisions of this act, who shall have prior to receipt of such conveyance conveyed or contracted to convey any part of such lands, shall through any conveyance made under this act take title in trust for any such grantees and their successors in interest.

SEC. 5. In order to facilitate prompt execution of the investigations, examinations, surveys, or other action which may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act, the Secretary may accept contributions to be used for such purpose.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 1, line 6, strike out "section 23 and the east half of section 22 of."

Page 2, line 6, strike out "section 23 and the east half of section 22" and insert "township."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AUTHORIZING SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR TO STUDY INDIANS

The Clerk read the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 490) to authorize and direct the Secretary of the Interior to study the respective tribes, bands, and groups of Indians under his jurisdiction to determine their qualifications to manage their own affairs without supervision and control by the Federal Government.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, first I would like to make a parliamentary inquiry and that is may one make a point of order against a portion of the resolution on the ground that it contains appropriations during the consideration of the resolution, or must he make the point of order against consideration as a whole?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman should make his point of order after unanimous consent for the consideration of the resolution has been obtained, and it should be directed to the specific language which the gentleman has in mind.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Then, Mr. Speaker, under my reservation of objection I would like to ask the author of the bill if she feels that it would be necessary to have as much as $250,000 made available for this work in view of the fact that the report is to be made not later than the first day of the first regular session of the Eighty-second Congress? I am a little disturbed about the idea of taking $250,000 out of the funds of the Indian Service in 1 year and making it available for this particular purpose. It seems to me that is a pretty heavy demand upon the limited funds for the Indian Service.

Mrs. BOSONE. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, that is a maximum. It may take $5,000, or it may take $10,000. Of course, the gentleman can understand, because he has an interest in Indian Affairs, that it might be very expensive to make these studies that will have to be made to make these reports. But that does not mean that they are going to use $250,000.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Does not the gentlewoman feel that $250,000 would be a pretty heavy demand upon the funds of the Indian Service?

Mrs. BOSONE. Yes, if we used it. But, I have been in conference a number of times with the Director and the Assistant Director of the Indian Bureau, and that amount is merely stated as a maximum amount that it would take.

They do not know that it is going to take that amount of money, and I do not, either.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I wonder if the gentlewoman would ask unanimous consent to modify the bill at that point and place a lower limit on it, say $50,000 instead of $250,000.

Mrs. BOSONE. There is an awful job that has to be done.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. That may be, but the funds of the Indian Service are so limited that it seems to me if this is to be a large project there should be special funds set up for it, rather than give them the authority to take the $250,000 away from existing appropriations.

Mrs. BOSONE. How about a compromise of $100,000? I have no idea they are going to use that amount, but I do not want to stymie their study of this important program, because in the end, as the gentleman realizes, it is going to save the Government millions and millions of dollars.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I would hope that it might. At the same time, what it does right now is take that out of the funds for 1951, which are somewhat limited anyway. The diversion of $250,000 for this purpose could cripple school and hospital operation and many other things.

Mrs. BOSONE. I do not think they are going to take it from that part of the program.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Can we not agree to place a maximum limit of $50,000 on it rather than $250,000? I think the bill will serve a useful purpose in the long run, and it may bring about economies, but I do think it is a pretty heavy tax to put on 1 year's appropriations. If the gentlewoman will modify the bill to make it $100,000 instead of $250,000, I shall withdraw my objection.

Mrs. BOSONE. One hundred thousand dollars? I shall accept that amendment.

Mr. H. CARL ANDERSEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice. There is too much money involved.

Mrs. BOSONE. I object, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. H. CARL ANDERSEN. I object, Mr. Speaker.

WHITE COUNTY BRIDGE COMMISSION

Mr. DENTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the joint resolution be passed over without prejudice.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That completes the call of the bills on the Consent Calendar which are eligible for consideration at this time.

COMMITTEE ON BANKING AND CURRENCY

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Banking and Currency may have until midnight Saturday to file a report on the bill, H. R. 9176.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I have not seen the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLCOTT] the ranking minority member, but will the gentleman include in his request that the minority may be privileged to file their views on the bill?

Mr. SPENCE. Absolutely; I thought that was understood. The minority always has the privilege of filing their views.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Banking and Currency may have until midnight Saturday to file a report on the bill, H. R. 9176, and that the minority may also have the privilege of filing their views on the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

On page 2, line 19, after the word "been", insert the words "and now is".

On page 2, line 21, strike out all of section 2 and insert in lieu thereof:

GEORGE L. JEFFERSON, JR., OF PORTLAND, ELECTED PRESIDENT OF BOYS' NATION

Mr. ANGELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD and include excerpts.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oregon?

There was no objection.

Mr. ANGELL. Mr. Speaker, it gives me great pleasure to call to the attention of the House that George L. Jefferson, Jr., a resident of Portland, Oreg., in my congressional district, was elected president of Boys' Nation at the meeting of the organization here in Washington now in progress.

The platform upon which he was elected, among other things, provided for tighter controls on subversive activities, universal military training, and a revision of the electoral college system.

The Boys' Nation is sponsored here in the Capital annually by the American Legion as a part of its citizenship program. Eighty-six boys from 44 States are in attendance. It is an excellent opportunity for these young men of America who in the days ahead no doubt will occupy prominent positions in the affairs of our Nation, to see first-hand our Government as it is administered here in the Capital of the Nation. These boys have not only had an opportunity to attend the sessions of the House and the Senate and to visit various departments of the Government but they have also been privileged to listen to addresses by many of the leaders of the Nation.

The young man from my district who has achieved the distinction of being president of Boys' Nation, George L. Jefferson, Jr., has taken an active part in the community affairs of the city of Portland in which he lives. He was elected as governor of Oregon Boys' State, was cocaptain of the high school football team, 1949, and was president of the student council and of his senior class. It is his desire and purpose to enter the ministry.

The depth of the thinking of these young men and the seriousness of their purpose in life was shown by the nature and the depth of the questions they propounded to the many leaders in government who appeared before them. As an example, Robert Longo, of Cranston, R. I., won a wrist watch for propounding the best question at one evening session which was:

What can we of Boys' Nation, as a group and as individuals, do in our own right to help solve and alleviate the present-day strife in the world and to prepare our own generation for a more perfect government of our Nation?

Another question, put by Charles R. Pewterbaugh, of Denver, Colo., was:

Why don't the people vote in Washington? They are the machinery of the United States. I think if anybody should have a right to vote it should be the people here.

Pursuant to leave granted, I include some excerpts from the daily press in Washington describing in some detail these very important sessions of Boys' Nation:

[From the Washington Post of July 26, 1950]

OREGON YOUTH, AFTER FIRST TRAIN RIDE, HEADS BOYS' NATION; ACHESON WARNS OF THOSE WHO RESPECT ONLY ARMED STRENGTH

An 18-year-old youth from Portland, Oreg., who had never been on a train until he came to Washington last week, was elected president of Boys' Nation last night.

The youth, George L. Jefferson, Jr., along with his vice presidential running mate, Thomas M. Rutter, 17, of Munhall, Pa., swept in on the federalist ticket, 54 to 32.

They defeated the nationalist party candidates, Donald J. Swanz, 16, of Buffalo, N. Y., and Rodney Block, 17, of Orlando, Fla., for the highest offices in the American Legion-sponsored government which has "legislatures" in each State.

The new president, Boys' State governor from Oregon, was cocaptain of his high school football team last year and president of the student council and his senior class. He plans to enter the ministry.

Earlier in the day, 86 "senators" heard a warning from Secretary of State Dean Acheson that "the fundamental safety of all of us will depend on what we can do to build up our strength to gain the respect of those who respect only armed strength.

The Secretary of State reviewed the Korean situation when the boys visited him. He said the United States had tried repeatedly, without success, to get Russia to agree to unification of Korea.

But, he continued, "when, a strong, fanatical, vigorous nation tries to shape the world in its own image, then we are in for trouble. That happened in the two World Wars, and it is happening now."

The boys resolved themselves into Senators from their respective States to consider two measures—the Mundt bill and the Brannan farm plan.

The farm plan was disapproved after James Wise, 17, Hughes, Ark., argued that it "might help a few down-and-outers but that's no reason to change the whole farm economy."

Some of the "Senators" wanted to make the proposed controls over communism more drastic than they are in the Mundt bill.

Luther House, 16, Adolphus, Ky., offered an amendment to establish a penalty of life imprisonment for persons who admit they are Communists and death for those who deny it but later are proved to be Communists. This was beaten, 85 to 1.

Some of the youths objected that the measure would control the thoughts of Communists instead of their acts.

But their objections were shouted down after Don Gilbert of Thomaston, Ga., asked:

"If the Communists plan to drop an atomic bomb on New York City or Washington and kill thousands of people, don't you believe we ought to grab them while they're thinking about it rather than when they do it?"

Richard Sparger of Ardmore, Okla., presided over the Senate session in a committee room of the Senate Office Building.

BOYS' NATION YOUTHS FIND NEW CONCEPT OF CAPITAL ON VISIT

These thinking youths, most of whom had never been here before, were seeking the mighty symbolism of Washington to make their history books come to life.

The 86 citizens of the Boys' Nations, visiting here, have not reacted like most out-of-towners who see the city. They're here on important business, specifically to learn about the Federal Government.

Last night, at a dinner in Post Headquarters at Fort Myer, Va., the young people were thoughtful. They had dozens of questions to ask. Questions about the Korean war, communism, aid to Europe, education, world federation, sectional affairs, the United Nations, bureaucracy, and the little fellow being pushed around.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED

For about 2 hours, the questions were answered by Felix Morley, writer and commentator for the National Broadcasting Co., B. M. McKelway, editor of the Star, and Peter Edson, columnist for the Newspaper Enterprise Association.

Meanwhile, as some of the boys engaged in whispered academic argument over the questions and answers, a few others in the rear of the room talked about their impressions here.

"When I saw what Washington looked like, and got an idea of how it operated, I got some new ideas," explained Huey R. Lewing, 18, of Anacoco, La. "You know, down where I live, we don't have as close contact with the National Government as you people up here. And we should have. This trip made me realize more than ever that the Government is preparing for any attack that might come."

To Daniel Gilbert, 16, of Thomaston, Ga., possibly the youngest minister in his State, the city's churches, especially the Washington Cathedral, has special interest. Daniel is a thoughtful young chap. He has preached 21 sermons and officiated at the funeral of his young girl friend, who died last February.

"Since being here, I really have learned more than ever that the Government is at the service of the people and not a ruler," he said.

FAITH IN OFFICIALS

Jim R. Goodman, 17, of Riverton, Wyo., reaffirmed his faith in the Nation's officials.

"We hear so much about all these investigations," he declared. "I've met important people here, like Secretary of Defense Johnson, Attorney General McGrath, and Senators and Representatives. Now I feel that the Government is in good hands. I have a new interpretation of who is running it. It brings back a feeling of real Americanism just to see all this and the monuments."

The lads of Boys' Nation, from 44 States, are here as guests of the American Legion. Their bull sessions, which are endless, are sparked by an exchange of ideas on the most important topics of the day.

Their knowledge of current affairs was shown last night in their barrage of questions.

A few examples:

Question by Leo M. Reinbold, of Hebron, N. Dak.: "Do you think there is any danger of an atomic war?"

Answer by Mr. Edson: "Yes; there always is a danger."

LONG-RANGE VIEW

Question by Leland J. Wylie, of Sioux Falls, S. Dak.: "Korea is changing the life of all of us. Do you believe the United States and the world will ever come to a lasting peace?"

Answer by Mr. Morley: "The world today is going through a period of great convulsion. Half of man's crises have been wars. But despite the disaster and the agony, life tends to go on, on a higher plane than before. Try to get a deeper perspective and a longer outlook. Man will not destroy himself with the atomic or H-bomb. Beyond the agony of today lies the promise of the future."

Before the questions, the three speakers addressed the youths.

Robert Longo, of Cranston, R. I., won a wrist watch for suggesting the best question of the evening: "What can we of Boys' Nation, as a group and as individuals, do in our own right to help solve and alleviate the present-day strife in the world and to prepare our own generation for a more perfect governing of our Nation?"

During the dinner, nominees for national office of Boys' Nation were announced, with elections between the Federalist and Nationalist Parties slated for tonight in the Fort Myer auditorium.

Federalist nominees are George Jefferson, Jr., 18, of Portland, Oreg., president, and Thomas M. Rutter, 17, Munhall, Pa., vice president. Nationalist party nominees are Donald J. Swanz, 16, Buffalo, N. Y., president, and Rodney A. Block, 17, Orlando, Fla., vice president.

And when it was over last night, Charles R. Pewterbaugh, of Denver, Colo., had one of the most interesting questions of all, which he conveyed to a reporter:

"Why don't the people vote in Washington? They are the machinery of the United States. I think if anybody should have a right to vote it should be the people here."

BOYS' NATION MEMBERS LEARN FROM THE "TOP" HOW UNITED STATES IS RUN

The 86 teen-age boys brought here by the American Legion to learn about government got it straight from the horse's mouth yesterday.

In the private Pentagon office of Defense Secretary Louis Johnson they learned about Uncle Sam's military activities from Johnson and the secretaries of the Army, Navy, and Air Force.

Then, they were briefed on the Korean war by Maj. Gen. Floyd L. Parks, Army chief of information. Later, they learned all about the history of the Department of Justice direct from Attorney General J. Howard McGrath.

Last night at the Boys' Nation headquarters at Fort Myer, 3 newsmen were targets for such questions as, "What basic attitude of mind must be changed before world government will be accepted?" and, "Hasn't the UN done a lot of good?"

Tonight Boys' Nation politics comes to a boil with the election of a Boy President. Candidate Donald J. Swanz, of Buffalo, N. Y., said his Nationalist Party platform will include advocacy of an antisubversive bill, backing the UN as long as it works for world peace, and expanding Boys' Nation into Boys' World.

The Federalists, headed by George L. Jefferson, Jr., of Portland, Oreg., also will advocate antisubversive legislation, plus universal military training and establishment of a school for diplomats. Both parties were still polishing up their platforms late last night.

This morning, the group will convene as a Boy Senate in the Senate caucus room to act on a Communist-control bill and a farm program.

In the afternoon they will hear talks by Associate Justice Harold R. Burton of the Supreme Court, and Secretary of State Dean Acheson.

[From the Washington Evening Star of July 26, 1950]

BOYS' NATION PRESIDENT AND SENATE WILL MEET WITH TRUMAN TODAY

The new "president" of Boys' Nation and 85 members of the "senate" were to meet with President Truman today.

The boy president is George L. Jefferson, Jr., 18, of Portland, Oreg., who was swept into office last night on a platform calling for, among other things, tighter controls on subversive activities, universal military training, and a revision of the electoral college system.

Elected vice president on the same "Federalist" ticket was Thomas M. Rutter, 17, of Munhall, Pa. The vote was 54 to 32 over the "Nationalist" party candidates, Donald J. Swanz, 16, of Buffalo, N. Y., and Rodney Block, 17, of Orlando, Fla.

BALLOTING HELD

Balloting in the Boys' Nation sponsored here annually by the American Legion as part of its citizenship program was held last night at Fort Myer and followed a "senate" session at the Senate Office Building. The 86 boys from 44 States also heard a talk by Secretary of State Acheson.

After meeting President Truman the boys were to watch Congress in session and then visit the Naval Academy at Annapolis.

Secretary Acheson recalled his boyhood days in Middletown, Conn. At that time, he said, the countries abroad seemed far away, although many people, including his own parents, had come to Middletown from there. Then he told of the sinking of the battleship Maine (when the Secretary was 5), and the excitement it caused. He continued in this vein up to the current interest in Korea.

"The fundamental safety of all of us," he said, "will depend on what we can do to build up our strength to gain the respect of those who respect only armed strength."

BURTON DESCRIBES COURT

Secretary Acheson left a young assistant, Clifford S. Ketzel, to answer questions.

Justice Burton talked to the boys on the operation of the Supreme Court, in the conference room of the Court. Justice Burton offered to answer any questions. Most of them were legal, but there was one political one:

"What is the party lineup of the Court?"

"Eight Democrats," said Justice Burton, "and one Republican—the one you are looking at."

AMENDING AGRICULTURAL ADJUSTMENT ACT OF 1938

AUTHORIZING BURIAL IN NATIONAL CEMETERY AT NASHVILLE, TENN., OF MEMBERS OF TENNESSEE NATIONAL AIR GUARD KILLED IN PLANE CRASH AT MYRTLE BEACH, S. C.

Mr. PRIEST. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of House Joint Resolution 513, authorizing the burial in the national cemetery at Nashville, Tenn., of the bodies of members of the Tennessee National Air Guard killed in a plane crash at Myrtle Beach, S. C.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object and I am not going to object, I understand that this resolution just applies to these few people.

Mr. PRIEST. Yes. May I say, Mr. Speaker, that the circumstances back of this resolution briefly are these: On Monday clearance was given for the burial of all three of these boys who lived in my home town in the national cemetery at Nashville. Some of them were entitled to it by reason of the fact that they were veterans; a few were not, but they have not yet been able to identify all of them. Plans have gone forward, and today, because of the technicality in the law, the order was countermanded, and this is simply to make it possible to go ahead with the burial of all 30 of these boys in the cemetery at Nashville.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I think the gentleman has very thoroughly explained the resolution, so I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That notwithstanding any other provision of law, the bodies of members of the Tennessee Air National Guard killed in a plane crash near Myrtle Beach, S. C., July 23, 1950, may be buried in the National Cemetery at Nashville, Tenn.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AMENDING AGRICULTURAL ADJUSTMENT ACT OF 1938

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BROWN], and pending that I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, this resolution makes in order the consideration of the bill (H. R. 9109) to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended.

Mr. Speaker, this bill is of a somewhat technical nature.

Mr. NICHOLSON. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. NICHOLSON. Is it too late to raise an objection to bringing this matter up?

The SPEAKER. It is too late now since debate has begun.

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, this bill deals with technical allotments with reference to cotton, corn, peanuts, and wheat. I am going to leave the detailed discussion and explanation of the bill to those members of the committee who are conversant with the particular features of the various phases of the legislation.

I understand that there is some opposition to this legislation. I cannot understand that there will be any opposition to the rule authorizing its consideration.

Mr. Speaker, as I was attempting to say, if you are going to have controls, and I can understand how some of my friends are disturbed about this legislation, and I, too, am disturbed about it, you cannot eat your cake and keep it, too. Sometimes in the administration of these laws I wonder whether any of this legislation is basically sound or whether we ought not to go back to the law of supply and demand. The fact remains, however, that the farmers who produce these commodities want these support prices, and on every occasion when they have voted on them they have voted overwhelmingly for them. Therefore, we are merely giving the farmers what they ask for. That is democracy in action.

In the case of cotton, the question has been raised repeatedly here about the cost to the Government of maintaining a support price for cotton. I point out, as will be pointed out more affirmatively and with more authority, possibly, later on, that the cotton program has not cost the taxpayers of the country one cent so far. Whether or not it will in the future remains to be seen. On the contrary, the cotton program has netted the Government money and under this program it has furnished a reserve that has been of great benefit to the country in time of national emergency.

Mr. PACE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COLMER. I yield to my distinguished friend from Georgia, the author of this legislation, and the author of much other agricultural legislation, and one of the best-versed men on the subject of agriculture in the House of Representatives, and one whose departure from these halls at the end of the present session of the Congress we all deplore. I yield to my friend.

Mr. PACE. I thank the gentleman. I merely wanted to comment that throughout the period of the support-price program on cotton up to this time the Government has enjoyed a profit in excess of $200,000,000 and they are today making a profit on every bale of cotton they sell.

Mr. COLMER. I thank my friend for that contribution which I understand is factual.

With particular reference to cotton again the committee points out that there is probably no single problem concerning agriculture in recent years that has been more vexing than the matter of developing a program to adjust cotton supplies with demand and to distribute the national cotton-acreage allotment among the States, counties, and farms in a manner which would be equitable to both the old and the new cotton-producing areas of the Nation.

It is further pointed out in the report that provision has been made for the establishment of sizable reserves to be used at the discretion of State and county PMA committees for making needed adjustments for abnormal or unusual conditions of production, for small farms, and to smooth out the operation of the program. That it was the philosophy of the committee that each State should receive its fair share of the national allotment, and that the adjustments necessary between counties and farmers in the State could best be handled out of the State and county reserves by State and county committees, which presumably would be better informed of the problems peculiar to their respective localities. It is hoped that this provision, by removing previous limitations, will permit a more equitable administration of the law in the manner contemplated by the committe when it reported Public Law 272. The committee states that it has now made it abundantly clear in this bill that the State and county committees have practically unlimited authority to establish and use the reserves authorized to make such adjustments as they believe are needed.

It is to be hoped that under the new bill the inequities in the distribution of acreage, which were manifested in the operation of the old bill, will be cured.

Mr. Speaker, we are going into the consideration of this bill when the time for the consideration of the rule expires. I hope the consideration of the rule can be expedited in the interest of time.

Those who want to discuss the bill which the rule makes in order will have 4 hours to do so. Certainly there can be no occasion for any further quorum calls during the consideration of the rule.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may require to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. McGREGOR].

Mr. McGREGOR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to speak out of order and revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. McGREGOR. Mr. Speaker, during the debate on the Korean aid bill, I listened very attentively to all those who spoke whom I considered as experts in our defense program because they were members of our Armed Services Committee who had listened to the hearings and are familiar with the full details of a defense program. I did this, Mr. Speaker, so that I might determine in my mind who was responsible for the too-little, too-late position in which we now find ourselves.

These speakers brought to light statements made before their committee by military leaders. The Secretary of Defense said in his testimony, and I quote: "If we are attacked at any place at 4 o'clock in the morning, we would be ready to answer at 5 o'clock." President Truman said in June 1950, at the commencement exercises at the University of Missouri, Columbia, and again at the dedication of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial in St. Louis, "We are closer to peace than at any time since the shooting stopped in 1945."

The administration canceled the big aircraft carrier contracts after Congress twice appropriated funds specifically for this purpose. The President vetoed and we passed over the veto the increase to a 70-group air force. The President still refused to put the program into effect. Ask our boys in Korea if they need more air support.

Mr. Speaker, I am tired of men in high places in our Government, from the Commander in Chief to the secretaries and chiefs of staff, assuring Congress and the people that we are ready for any emergency. We who are members of the Congress are familiar with the fact that we appropriated approximately $50,000,000,000 in the past 4 years for our own defense and we had every reason to believe that this money was adequate and would give us a defense second to none. However, now our present position leads us to ask where has the money gone and what do we have to show for it. It is not pleasant for our American fathers and mothers to know that we have given approximately $45,000,000,000 to different nations under the ECA plan and other programs in Europe and the Far East and that today we find our children are fighting with inadequate weapons and with an insufficient supply of matériel and ineffective guns in their hands. Possibly had we not given so much of our own military and civilian production to the other nations our own troops now in Korea would not be short of supplies and ammunition.

I am not, because we are in a war, going to be too critical and put the blame on one person or two persons. That is water over the dam. But we cannot afford, as a Nation, to blind our eyes to mistakes that have been made in the past. We must look back over our mistakes and admit them in order to avoid them in the future.

Mr. Speaker, I think if we had a general and thorough housecleaning in both our State and Defense Departments we would be much stronger. With the knowledge that we have I respectfully ask that the proper committee of Congress make a thorough investigation and report to this body why we have too little and too late.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. COLMER] has well stated that House Resolution 728 makes in order the bill (H. R. 9109) to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, the Soil Conservation Domestic Allotment Act, Public Law No. 74 of the Seventy-seventh Congress, and the Agricultural Act of 1949, and for other purposes, as it deals with the acreage allotments and marketing quotas for cotton, peanuts, and wheat.

I listened with a great deal of attention and interest to the discussion of this legislation in the Committee on Rules. There seems to be quite a difference of opinion among some of our friends in the field of agriculture as to just what this bill will or will not do and as to just how far it might or might not be. For that reason the Committee on Rules provided for 4 hours of general debate so that there can be full and free and frank discussion of this entire piece of legislation.

When the measure came before the Committee on Rules one of my colleagues from Ohio, a member of the Committee on Agriculture and a very distinguished member of this body, Mr. POLK, made an argument as to the wheat provisions of this bill which was very convincing at the time and at least gave many of us concern that if this measure was adopted as written a great many of the States and especially those east of the Mississippi would be injured as far as their wheat acreage and allotments might be concerned, in the future, and that the injury would be especially important to the farmers of the eastern States because wheat is used as a crop primarily for the purpose of getting the proper rotation of crops on the family-sized farms which are so prevalent in the States east of the Mississippi.

However, I have been informed today by the ranking Republican member of the Committee on Agriculture, the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. HOPE], who in his own right is not only an agricultural expert but a very thoroughgoing expert on the question of wheat farming, that an arrangement has been made whereby amendments will be offered to strike out the wheat section of this bill.

I would like to inquire if that is the understanding of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. COOLEY] and the gentleman from Georgie [Mr. PACE].

Mr. POAGE. May I answer the question, as chairman of the subcommittee?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Yes, certainly.

Mr. POAGE. We have agreed that an amendment will be offered, and as chairman of the subcommittee I will offer an amendment striking out the wheat section of this bill, section 6. We propose to leave the penalty provision in, to which there is no objection.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I understand that is agreeable to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. POLK].

Mr. POAGE. I think I can say for the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. POLK] that it is agreeable to him.

Mr. POLK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I yield.

Mr. POLK. As the gentleman knows, I have been very much opposed to section 6 of this bill relating to wheat. In view of the agreements reached this morning in the Committee on Agriculture whereby it was definitely agreed that section 6 would be stricken from the bill at the proper time, I shall offer no objection to the rule.

Mr. POAGE. I wonder if the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. HOPE] will not express his views, because I understand he is in accord with this also.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BROWN] has expired.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself five additional minutes, and I yield to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. HOPE].

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Speaker, on this particular point, there has been an agreement reached by the subcommittee of the Committee on Agriculture on wheat, after consultation with the Department of Agriculture, whereby this section will be eliminated, in view of the fact that most of what was sought to be accomplished by the section can be done by regulation. There is therefore no need for the legislation, and the very fact that the legislation is pending would make it impossible at this time for the PMA to send out definite State allotments which should be out as soon as possible in order that they may be available to farmers who will soon begin planting wheat. So it is agreeable all around, and I think a very wise and beneficial move to eliminate this provision from the bill. I am sure it is satisfactory to all schools of thought on the subject.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. On behalf of a great many Members of the House, I wish to express my gratitude and their gratitude, and offer our congratulations to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. HOPE], the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. POLK], and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. POAGE], and others who have worked out an agreement that will protect the proper interests of the wheat farmers in every section of the United States, and will permit a peaceful settlement of this whole controversy.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield, that I may ask a question of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. POAGE] on this same point?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. If it is on the matter of the wheat section, I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. CRAWFORD. If I understood the gentleman from Texas [Mr. POAGE] correctly, the section 7, which occurs on page 17 of the bill, will remain in the bill.

Mr. POAGE. That is the penalty provision. That is correct. That will remain.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Does that language mean to say that if farmer A grows 15 or 20 or more or less bushels per acres over and above his quota that he will be penalized 50 percent of the support price on that portion of his acreage?

Mr. POAGE. That is what it means when you have marketing quotas.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. That takes the place of the present law which provides that the penalty would be 50 percent of the basic loan on the commodity and would apply to 50 percent of the price support.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Do I understand there are marketing quotas on wheat at the present time?

Mr. POAGE. No.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Where is the language which gives the Secretary of Agriculture power to place marketing quotas on wheat?

Mr. POAGE. It is not in this bill at all.

This is not the marketing-quota bill; this is an acreage bill. The only reason for putting a penalty provision in here is that apparently at some time in the past it was repealed by implication, or some lawyers say that it was. Everybody agrees that if you are going to have effective marketing quotas you must have penalties.

Mr. CRAWFORD. That is the point I am trying to get straightened out. Where is there in any law power given to the Secretary to impose marketing quotas on wheat?

Mr. POAGE. In the act of 1938.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Did that deal with marketing quotas?

Mr. POAGE. Yes.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Have we ever had marketing quotas in effect in this country on wheat?

Mr. POAGE. My recollection is that we have.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I yield to the gentleman from Kansas in the hope we may get this thing determined.

Mr. H. CARL ANDERSEN. I might say that we had marketing quotas in effect for 2 years; I believe it was in the early forties, and there were penalties. I recall a Member of the House, a former colleague from Ohio who planted more wheat than allowed. An attempt was made to collect the penalty from him because he fed his wheat to livestock and poultry.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I remember the incident myself.

Mr. HOPE. Marketing quotas can only go into operation if two-thirds of the farmers raising wheat put it into effect.

Mr. CRAWFORD. That was the point I wanted to develop, because I do not understand that the Secretary of Agriculture now has the power to impose marketing quotas on wheat.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. That is only where the farmers vote for it themselves under the law.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I did not understand that he had the power on wheat as he has under this bill to impose marketing quotas on cotton.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I yield to the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. HOPE. The 1938 act makes it mandatory upon the Secretary to proclaim marketing quotas on wheat when the supply reaches a certain quantity, just the same as it makes it mandatory upon the Secretary to proclaim marketing quotas on cotton when the supply reaches a certain quantity. But those quotas do not go into effect unless two-thirds of the producers voting in a referendum approve of the quota. As far as the quotas are concerned, though, you might say they automatically go into effect when a certain quantity is reached as far as supply is concerned, subject to the veto of the producers.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. The producer still controls them.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Two-thirds of the producers impose the quota; is that correct?

Mr. HOPE. Yes; after they are proclaimed by the Secretary they must receive a two-thirds vote of the producers voting or they do not go into effect.

Mr. CRAWFORD. If two-thirds vote for it, but otherwise the Secretary cannot impose it. Or is it mandatory?

Mr. HOPE. It is mandatory for the Secretary to proclaim it if he finds the supply requires it, and it goes into effect if the farmers vote 2 to 1 in favor of it.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. It is mandatory that the Secretary proclaim the quota but it does not go into effect until two-thirds of the farmers have approved.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Is that the production quota or the marketing quota?

Mr. HOPE. That is the marketing quota. Acreage allotments are proclaimed by the Secretary when the supply reaches a certain stage, but they do not have to be approved by two-thirds of the producers.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I think that has been cleared up.

Mr. PACE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Briefly.

Mr. PACE. I do not want any confusion here or anybody getting the idea that there is any provision in this bill which denies to producers of cotton the right to vote and to refuse quotas if they fail to approve it by two-thirds; that still remains.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Or wheat, either one.

Mr. PACE. That is right.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I thank the gentleman very much.

Now, to conclude. With the amendment to strike out section 6 of this bill the measure reverts back to one for the setting up of new quotas or carrying on of quotas and allotments for cotton, and I think also for peanuts. Of course, we have at regular intervals had bills of one type or another from the Committee on Agriculture to settle the question of the surplus of cotton. Each time that such a measure comes before us we are assured that the question will be and is being settled for all time by the adoption of the bill that may be presented at that particular time. But within a few months or a year a similar measure is brought up for the relief or benefit of the cotton farmer or to settle the problems of the cotton farmer, or something like that, and even on this particular occasion I find that my friends from the cotton States and the Members of the House who are interested in cotton farming seemingly do not agree among themselves.

Frankly, I do not know the answer. I am not at all certain that if we adopt this legislation or enact it into law it will settle all of these various problems, because I remember for the last 12 years I have heard each year and sometimes four or five times a year that if we will adopt this piece of legislation everything will be sweet and peaceful, and contentment will reign among all of the cotton producers of the country. However, that is a matter that those of you who come from the cotton producing sections of the country will have to settle among yourselves to a certain extent. Those of us who do not know too much about the cotton problem will endeavor to vote as our judgment tells us is on the right side of the issue after we hear the debate and discussion.

I feel this rule should be adopted and that we should give our friends from the cotton and peanut producing States one more opportunity to solve all of the problems that confront the farmers of their areas and to attempt to settle between and among themselves just what the best thing to do may be in connection with the production of cotton, and do not forget this also applies in connection with the production of peanuts. So I hope the rule will be adopted.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH].

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, the controls set forth in this bill not only apply to cotton and peanuts but it means control of practically everything that we have in this country of ours. I mean this administration wants those controls. In the last few years we have been inflicting upon the American people control after control after control. This is said to be peanut control. But this is not peanuts to me. It is control of the American way of life. I am against it. It is as President Coolidge stated when he was asked about sin and if he believed in it. He said, no, he was against it. That is what I believe in reference to the controls that are being thrust upon the American people today and I want you to know definitely now and forever that I am against all these controls. They lead to socialism, and totalitarianism.

What kind of controls are you putting on? You have controlled the people of the United States just about long enough. They do not want controls, unless necessary and since the President says we are not at war, why adopt all these controls?

Let me suggest one control that you should invoke. You should control the power of the President of the United States to do just about as he pleases without the Members of Congress knowing what he is going to do next. He should be controlled so far as sending our boys over to Korea to be slaughtered when adequate preparations have not been previously made. This is a control that the Congress of the United States should have had, not the President. I do not believe in permitting the President of the United States, the State Department, the Committee on Foreign Affairs or anybody else to say what may be done whenever a rumpus is started in some far-away land. They have not called this fracas over in Korea a war. I think it is a war and a hot war. When you record the sad deaths you will say it is a war. If you do not call it war, I would like to know what you call it. I want to tell you, that is the kind of control that I want to put on, control of a war that the President does not call a war.

I do not want to put our boys in China, I did not want to put them in any country in the world except our own. I want to keep our soldiers at home, and you never found me voting for anything that helped to arm any of these countries whenever I could get out of it.

Now, let me tell you something. I want to give you something that you ought to hear. You spent $2,500,000,000 for foreign aid in China. Are you glad you spent that money there?

I want to ask you some more questions. You spent $12,500,000,000 arming Russia. Are you satisfied that you armed Russia to that extent? Now you are spending billions of dollars arming these countries in Europe. Are you glad that you are spending that money over there arming these countries? I tell you, brothers, this thing may go against us some day; it is going to go against the American people. It is wrong. If you want war that is the way to get it. I am against it.

You had time in the last 2 years to think before you spent all that money to arm China. You put these things into effect and you ought to be ashamed for doing it. I am telling you right here, I am against these wars that you Democrats are getting us into in these foreign countries, and we ought to stay out and protect the American boys. We ought to keep the American boys at home and look after our own country without sending them into these foreign slaughter pens to be slaughtered. I do not believe in that. That is the kind of control I want. Can I not get enough Members of this House to help me a little bit with this kind of control and save our country? Save it from bankruptcy, save it from destruction. This is a great country that we have had for the last 166 years. We built it up and made it the greatest country on the face of the earth, and you are tearing it down. You are tearing it down because you are getting us in such financial condition that the Ways and Means cannot find the money to keep from going into the red. The President does not talk of economy—no, he talks of spending, of arming, of controls. Let us talk of peace—let us talk of freedom—let us talk of happiness and you will not need controls. If we work, if we earn, if we save. Stop controlling—or you lose freedom. Stop spending or you lose security. Stop fighting or you may lose you life. Stop, look, listen.

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 9109) to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended; the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act; Public Law 74, Seventy-seventh Congress; the Agricultural Act of 1949; and for other purposes.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 9109, with Mr. ROONEY in the Chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

By unanimous consent, the first reading of the bill was dispensed with.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 18 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, I, too, hate and despise the very thought of controlling American agriculture by Federal law. I look forward to the day when the farmers of this Nation may go forth in the springtime and plant freely in the hope that they may harvest abundantly and may market profitably the produces of their toil in the market places at home and abroad. I regard acreage allotments and marketing quotas as temporary expedients. Under present circumstances, however, I regard them as necessary expedients. Our future is enshrouded in great uncertainties. We must make major and drastic changes in the pattern of our agriculture. We must be ready for every eventuality, and we must always be ready to change our program as changing situations may indicate. Desirable changes are necessary. In this vast country the problem of agriculture are not only numerous but are complicated and perplexing. Agriculture is the one industry upon which all human existence must ultimately depend. I believe that it is necessary and essential to the well-being of all of our people that we at all times sustain a profitable agriculture in this great Republic of ours. This must be done if all of the segments of our economy are to enjoy any degree of prosperity.

Unfortunately, some of our citizens and some of the Members of Congress look with great disfavor upon agriculture's efforts to balance production with a reasonable consumer demand. The gentleman who has just addressed the House represents a great industrial district. However much we might desire to divorce ourselves from our environment, it is frequently very difficult for us to do so. I wonder if we would advocate that the industry of his district should run on a 24-hour basis—around the clock without control of its output. Fortunately, industry can control and does control production. Industry does not run with the throttle wide open in an effort to produce articles and things which people will not and cannot buy. It is easy for one who is intensely interested in industry, as the gentleman from Pennsylvania must of necessity be, to fail to appreciate fully the importance of agriculture trying to balance production with reasonable consumer demands. But why should he urge us to abandon programs which have enabled agriculture in some degree to control the production of food and fiber on the farms and ranches of this country? Why should we encourage farmers to permit their fields to flourish with the production of crops which the consumers of America refuse to purchase at their prices?

There is nothing un-American about this program. Ultimately the decision is left with the farmers affected. In democratic fashion they are provided with machinery which enables them to express their views at the ballot box in referendums which are authorized. No program of control such as is contemplated by this bill can be forced upon any group of farmers in America unless two-thirds of the farmers voting in the referendum vote in favor of the control program which is proposed.

I hardly think it necessary for me to pursue this argument further, certainly not further than to say that these programs which the gentleman from Pennsylvania denounces so vociferously are brought before this House on bipartisan or nonpartisan basis. No member of our committee in the consideration of these measures has been actuated or influenced by partisan politics. These programs have been brought here year after year supported by Republicans and Democrats alike, supported, yes, by those of us from the farm areas and likewise by the very intelligent Members of this House from city districts. There are Members of this House who do not even have a single farm in their congressional districts who have consistently supported the legislation which has been reported by the House Committee on Agriculture.

We are accused of attempting to regiment and to control and to goose-step the farmers of this Nation. That is far from the truth. There is no force about this program. It is left ultimately to the farmers themselves as I just stated a moment ago.

I would like to comment upon the statement made by the gentleman from Ohio to the effect that we are constantly coming before Congress with new legislation, legislation which changes substantially programs which have heretofore been adopted and approved. Certainly we are living in a constantly changing world. We must be prepared to meet every eventuality.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOLEY. I yield.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I think the gentleman will agree that usually, and I think almost in every instance, the House has been very sympathetic to your problems and has gone along with the legislation that you have desired.

Mr. COOLEY. I am certain that the gentleman was facetious when he said that we were constantly bringing up good bills. I do recall, and I am frank to confess, when we brought the 1949 cotton law before the gentleman's committee and before the Congress, all of us sincerely believed that we had provided machinery which would result in a fair and equitable treatment of all producers. The reason it became necessary for us to bring in another resolution when Congress convened in January was that we had not had cotton quotas since, I think, 1942.

We were woefully lacking in pertinent information. We did not have the data necessary to make proper determinations with regard to what had been planted and where it had been planted. We had a provision in the law which required that consideration be given to war crops. During the war we encouraged cotton producers to abandon the production of cotton and to go into the production of more essential crops. So Congress provided that when a farmer diverted from the production of cotton to the production of some oil-producing crop necessary to the prosecution of the war, that land so planted could be considered as having been planted to cotton. That is what is referred to as the war-crop provision. No one could evaluate adequately or properly the full force and effect or the impact of that provision. We had a little-grower provision. The effect of it was to exempt from the reduction program any farmer who had planted less than 5 acres in the 3 years immediately preceding the imposition of quotas. No one could determine how much acreage that provision would involve.

Then we had another provision in the law which we referred to as the cropland provision. No one could evaluate adequately or fully the impact of that provision. So when the program went into operation in the field we discovered that when we had exempted the little farmer and when we had made provisions for the war-crop producers and when we had taken into consideration the cropland provision, some farmers were being reduced in their acreage unreasonably and more drastically than we had ever contemplated; in some instances the reduction resulting in as much as 75 percent or 85 percent.

The effect of such drastic reduction was calculated to bring great grief to many of our farmers. When we discovered this situation we then proposed legislation which was finally adopted in this session of the Congress in an effort to correct these inequities. In that resolution we provide that no acreage should be reduced below 65 percent of the average which had been planted in the preceding 3 years, 1946, 1947, and 1948; 1949 having been exempted because of reasons which I will not discuss; or that a producer's acreage might not be reduced below 45 percent of the highest acreage planted in any one of those 3 years. So we refer to that provision as the 65-and-45-percent provision of the law.

Unless this bill is enacted, and if this Congress adjourns without passing some legislation, we will only perpetuate all of the inequities which were discovered in the application of the act of 1949. The cotton resolution to which I referred a moment ago, the purpose of which was to correct those inequities, was only in force for the year 1950. So it is absolutely necessary and essential that this Congress take action in the matter if we are to do justice to cotton farmers.

I shall not attempt to discuss the details of this proposal further than to say that we make no great change in the national acreage allotment nor do we make any substantial change in the State allotments, but we do provide machinery which will enable the county committees at the county level to make adjustments among the producers themselves. We set apart 10 percent reserve acreage at the State level to be used by the State committee in doing justice among the several counties within the State. We provide a reservation of 15 percent of the acreage at the county level to be used by the county committees in making adjustments among the producers within the county.

When the 1949 act went into operation, no one complained about the national acreage allotment. No one really complained about the State acreage allotment, but the complaints came at the county level and at the farm level. Had the committees—the State committees and the county committees—made the reservations which we intended for them to make, they would have had some acreage with which to make these adjustments, but they did not make the reservations which we intended that they should make, and we found ourselves facing an inequitable situation.

The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. PACE] has devoted weeks and months of labor upon the cotton provisions of this bill. Mr. PACE was chairman of the subcommittee on cotton. Early in January, and almost continuously from January until this hour, he and the members of his subcommittee have worked diligently and faithfully in an effort to bring before this House a cotton bill which we think does substantial justice to all of the cotton producers of the country. It does substantial justice to all of the cotton-producing areas of the Nation.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. COOLEY] has again expired.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself five additional minutes.

Mr. Chairman, the wheat section will be eliminated. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. POAGE] was the very diligent chairman of the wheat subcommittee, and that committee worked out this provision, but at a recent meeting and because of changed circumstances, we have concluded it would be wise to eliminate that section, other than the penalty sections which are deemed essential.

Then we have a peanut section in the bill, which some member of the committee will discuss. I hope that the membership of this House will give very careful attention to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. PACE] as he discusses the cotton sections of this law and that they will give careful attention to him as he discusses the peanut section; and the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. ABBITT] a member of the subcommittee, who has worked diligently in an effort to devise a fair peanut allotment law as he presents his views in the matter.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOLEY. I yield.

Mr. CRAWFORD. What is there in the momentary situation which calls for the addition to the present law of the proviso which appears in section 1 of the bill?

Mr. COOLEY. I do not understand the question.

Mr. CRAWFORD. What is there in the momentary situation which calls for the addition to the present law of the proviso with respect to national marketing quotas which appears in section 1 of the bill?

Mr. COOLEY. That the Secretary proclaim marketing quotas for 1951 and 1952.

Mr. CRAWFORD. It appears to me that is a very far-reaching amendment to present law. What is there in the momentary situation that requires it?

Mr. COOLEY. In the law at the present time is a definition of normal supply, which means domestic consumption, plus export, plus 30 percent, which is considered at the present time as a normal supply of cotton. The effect of this provision is to eliminate the 30 percent requirements and to authorize the Secretary to impose quotas if he deems it wise to do so if our supply exceeds domestic consumption plus exports; in other words, to simplify it, if I may, we believe that if we are to have marketing quotas on cotton, it is in the interest of the farmer as well as in the interest of the Government that we should have quotas year in and year out, rather than to have quotas 1 year and disregard quotas the next.

The reason we say that is that we have tried it in tobacco—and I think I come from a section of the country that understands and appreciates better the effect of these controls than any other. For many years we have had controls on tobacco acreage, constantly for more than 10 years. In 1939, however, we did not have marketing quotas; we produced a tremendous crop; we had a very abnormal surplus and carry-over which demoralized the prices and almost drove us to bankruptcy.

Bear in mind that although the Secretary has the right to fix the quotas, he has the right to lift the quotas or even to disregard the quotas and call them off entirely if he deems it in the interest and welfare of the Nation to do so.

Mr. CRAWFORD. If I understand this proviso I do not believe he can do that.

Mr. COOLEY. If the gentleman will let me follow my thought a little further, just to use last year as an illustration, we did not have marketing quotas. Farmers believing that we might have quotas in 1950, 1951, and 1952, went out and planted the face of the earth in cotton and produced a 16,000,000-bale crop. Now had that crop of 16,000,000 bales gone to the American market last year, there is not any doubt in anyone's mind that cotton would have gone down to 8 or 10 cents a pound, the purchasing power of the cotton farmer would have been destroyed; the impact would have been immediately reflected in the textile mills and in consuming centers, because when you destroy the purchasing power of the cotton farmer, he cannot buy radios, tractors, farm equipment, and the thousand and one things that the farmers are now purchasing from industry.

Mr. PACE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOLEY. I yield.

Mr. PACE. If the gentleman will refer to page 27 of the committee report, section 371, he will find the authority to which the gentleman from North Carolina referred, the right of the Secretary either to increase or entirely suspend quotas. The point I should like to bring out with the gentleman from North Carolina is that even under section 1 when quotas are invoked, the Secretary would still have to allot acreage, to provide acreage to produce a normal supply of cotton.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOLEY. I yield.

Mr. CRAWFORD. With respect to what the gentleman from Georgia said, section 342 states:

> The national marketing quota for any year shall not be less than 10,000,000 bales or 1,000,000 bales less than the estimated domestic consumption plus exports of cotton for the marketing year ending in the calendar year in which such quota is proclaimed, whichever is smaller.

What I am trying to get fixed in my mind is how the Secretary can go beyond the language I have just read.

Mr. PACE. Well, the gentleman must understand first that the definition of "normal supply" is not changed. "Normal supply" is the estimated domestic consumption, plus estimated exports, plus 30 percent. That is not changed by this amendment to section 342. That part of section 342 remains the law.

Mr. CRAWFORD. This language to which I refer does not say anything about normal supply. Let me read it because I think this is very important.

Mr. PACE. Will the gentleman turn to page 19 of the report which gives section 342 in full as it will be when amended.

Mr. CRAWFORD. That is on page 36.

Mr. COOLEY. Will the gentleman from Georgia refer to the law he has in his hand and advise the gentleman from Michigan with regard to the definition of "normal supply." My understanding is that it is domestic consumption, plus export, plus 30 percent.

Mr. PACE. Yes. That remains the law. It is not changed and the Secretary will be required to fix quotas.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I am not arguing that point. We are talking about the national marketing quotas, section 1 of the bill. You make it mandatory that for the years 1950, 1951, and 1952 the Secretary shall institute marketing quotas.

Mr. PACE. Under certain conditions.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Yes. This is section 342 on page 36 of the report, the amended law:

> The national marketing quota for any year shall be not less than 10,000,000 bales.

Mr. PACE. That is the minimum.

Mr. CRAWFORD (reading):

> The national marketing quota for any year shall be not less than 10,000,000 bales or 1,000,000 bales less than the estimated domestic consumption plus exports of cotton for the marketing year ending in the calendar year.

That is the minimum. I understand that.

Mr. PACE. You cannot go below that.
